Pregnancy Possible After Miscarriage

By GEORGE C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I had a miscarriage two months ago and never went in for a D. and C. Is it now possible for me to become pregnant? If I become pregnant, would there be any kind of complications? What did they do 30 or 40 years ago when this happened?—R. L. P.

You could still become pregnant without complications provided none of the after-birth was retained. That is the reason for the D. and C. Your doctor who has miscarried during the early months of pregnancy. The overgrown lining of the uterine cavity may not have been completely completed. The gentle, scraping procedure accomplishes that.

It is a rather minor operation and involves only a day or two of incapacitation. You would likewise to have the matter looked into even now, two months afterward. If any of the tissue wanted those remains. It can be a source of sporadic bleeding and possibly of infection.

What did they do 30 or 40 years ago? The D. and C. (dilation and curettage) is not that new. It is much older than that. Prior to its development, a surgeon, not using anything was done. Such advances can account for the sharp decline in pregnancy complications over the years.

Recent statistics indicate that one out of every five pregnancies ends in miscarriage, and that about 33 per cent of childbearing women miscarry before age 30. That represents an unusually high incidence. I don't know the statistics on D. and C's. before pregnancy. Ted. I'd be willing to bet it doesn't come close to matching the number of miscarriages.

What does it mean? A lot of women are running the risks I mentioned above. In many cases, perhaps most, there will be no complications. But with the risk there, the caution should be exercised, don't you think?

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 32 years old. I recently went for my routine Pap test and had a pelvic examination. The doctor told me I had some kind of growth there, which was news to me. They never assess me any pain.

My question concerns my infertility. I had only one conception in 5 years of marriage. Could these fibroids have been the cause of that? Or is it possible to conceive with these harmless fibroids?—E. J. K.

Fibroid tumors are but one of several possible causes for infertility. Your fibroids probably developed after your conception. Incidentally, a fibroid tumor is not painful. So it's not surprising the diagnosis was "news" for you. Bleeding is a common symptom, however. Another. The growths are usually discovered during routine pelvic examinations.

I wouldn't describe them as harmless, as you do. Doing something about them depends on their size, their locations and your doctor's discretion.

If they have been the cause of your inability to conceive, then removal might improve the situation. No guarantee.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband and I married at an early age. This was 15 years ago. At the time we were both very ignorant about sex.

During our first intercourse I knew that there was no other man in my life. Recently, he has started bringing this matter up to me—often. I'm very hurt over the accusation. can you help?—Mrs. J. P.

If he is accusing you after 34 years of marriage, I would seem that he needs some professional counselling. There is obviously something else bothering him.

You probably don't believe any explanation by you is in order, if he never was. But if you can and think it will end his unreasonable's nagging, I tell him that your failure to bleed is not at all uncommon. The hymen may have been ruptured by an accident or by any number of other activities. You, the natural aperture could have been sufficiently large for intercourse without rupture or bleeding.

Your husband should begin acting his age about this matter.

Using Big Bird

NEW YORK (AP) — This fall many school teachers across the United States will be using the yellow Big Bird and his Sesame Street friends to turn new and problem learners to readers. It's part of a new three-part multi-media reading assistance program family developed by the Children's Television Workshop and the Addison-Wesley publishing company to give teachers the proven appeal and motivation of Sesame Street.

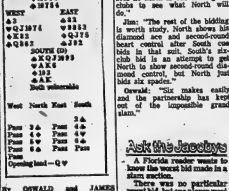
Puttin two bid to work



By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

Jim: "We have been selling so many questions about the standard American forcing two bid that we might well discuss that bid."

Oswald: "The great advantage of that bid is that it is so often when you get one."

Jim: "There are three general requirements. The first is a hand that will make or almost make game by itself. The second is slam possibilities and the third is enough high-card strength so that you fear a cue bid may be passed out."

Oswald: "Suth has 20 high-card points and nine winners. He decides to open two spades. North raises to three and South uses the bare is the bidding for clubs to see what North will do."

Jim: "The rest of the bidding is worth study. North shows his diamond ace and second-round heart control after South cue bids in that suit. South's next club bid is an attempt to get North to show second-round club control, but North just bids six diamonds."

Oswald: "Six makes easily and the partnership has kept out of the impossible grand slam."

Ask the Jacobys

A Florida reader wants to know the worst bid made in a bridge contest.

There was no particular worst bid, but one player went through a series of conservative bidding experiments when he could have simply bid a game. Holding ♠ A K Q J 10 9 ♥ A K ♦ 10 3 ♣ A K, he was failure to use "ESP" (Keep It Simple Stupid) that led to trouble.

B.C. PC Leader Cancels Holiday to Fight Election

VICTORIA (CP) — When Progressive Conservative Leader Richard Hatfield heard there was going to be a British Columbia general election Dec. 11 he was preparing for a week's holiday.

But instead of a relaxing trip to San Diego, Calif., with his wife, the premier of Canada's Sunniest Province has brown himself for a rigorous five-week election campaign.

He said at the time that he finished a tiring tour of all but 10 of B.C.'s 48 constituencies.

Despite his candidacy, the hard-working leader—a physical fitness buff and surgeon who dropped his general practice last year—will be in direct competition with the other politicians or would-be politicians chasing 55 seats in the legislature.

Dr. Wallace's campaign has not been as exhausting or farranging as Premier Dave Barrett's or Social Credit Leader Bill Bennett's, mainly because the finances weren't there.

The party was only expected to spend about $25,000 on the campaign, compared with the $318,753 expenditure the Progressive Conservatives put out in the 1972 election.

Dr. Wallace has visited the Lower Mainland area and made the rounds of party forces on Vancouver Island and into the Okanagan but most of his time has been spent in his home riding of Oak Bay, part of Greater Victoria.

Dr. Wallace was the only Progressive Conservative member of the legislature at dissolution, and he wants to make sure that at least a handful is returned to the party after Dec. 11.

It could be a tough fight for the 1,000 man organization in the Mainland — but that's what observers said in 1972 when Dr. Wallace won an easy victory, polling 5,887 votes to 4,000 for his nearest rival, the Social Credit candidate.

With the Turks time still uncertain under their new leadership, Wilson was free to concentrate on his economic problems.

Perhaps as an omen of troubles ahead, however, the year ended with a mass demonstration in London against the soaring unemployment, while the government had warned would be a necessary evil in its policy to curb inflation.

Wilson Needs Economic Rally to Face New Year

LONDON (CP) — Prime Minister Harold Wilson will need all the cunning he has brought to the string of remarkable successes in 1975 as he looks to the new government into a new year strewn with potential political pitfalls.

Against considerable odds, he devised a stringent wage-restraint policy in 1975 and won union and broad political support for it.

He also renegotiated terms of British membership in the European Economic Community (EEC) and then won national referendum support for continued membership by a 3-to-1 margin. Throughout the general election campaign in which he had promised that Labor, unlike the Conservative government that had taken Britain into the community, would let the people decide.

After renegotiation, he personally supported continued membership and won public opinion polls during the 11 years of debate on how Britain indicated the majority was opposed.

Even more remarkably, he brought the restive left wing of his party to heel, maintaining a cabinet split over the emotional Common Market issue and how to saw the departure from the political centre ring of former Conservative leader Edward Heath, a key foe.

In April, his treasury chief Denis Healey, presented one of the harshest budgets in many years, and the people took it with hardly a whimper, saying Britain was "living beyond its means." Healey imposed the equivalent of nearly $3.5 billion from the pockets of British consumers and taxpayers, increasing taxes and reducing subsidies on food, electricity and housing.

In essence, Wilson succeeded where he and a succession of other prime ministers had failed. His firm conviction had convinced the people that the pain finally was at the door.

With inflation galloping at around 25 per cent, exports down and unemployment hitting a post-war record of 1,000,000 workers, there could be no improvement in the British standard of living for at least two years, while the country put its economic house in order.

Then convinced, the majority of leaders of the Trades Union Congress (TUC) and the Confederation of British Industry (CBI) at last fell behind the painful Wilson policy aimed at reducing inflation to around 10 per cent by late next summer, 6 limits per increase to £6 ($12.60) a week.

But if it doesn't work, and trade, unemployment and inflation figures do not show improvement by then there is not a strong likelihood that restive unions and the left wing of the party will break ranks and defy the government.

Elsewhere, the government faces a rebellion within the National Health Service (NHS), with hospital doctors banning overtime to support wage demands and senior doctors threatening mass resignations over the plan to exclude their private practices from NHS hospital facilities.

There also is the thorny question of devolution, under which regional assemblies would be set up in Scotland and Wales with limited powers—the most significant constitutional change since Ireland was cut free from the United Kingdom in 1921. All major parties favor it in principle, but remain cautious in fear that the thrusting Scottish Nationalist Party (SNP) might gain control of an Edinburgh assembly and use it to promote outright independence.

The undoubted star of the big political drama of the year was Margaret Thatcher who, at 49, became the first woman ever to lead a major British party, having scored in February an upset victory for leadership of the Conservatives.

An advocate of the small-c conservative ideals of low taxes, free enterprise and the free right of the bright—like herself—to succeed, she easily beat five other candidates, including Heath. He retired to the back benches, little realizing a Thatcher offer of a shadow cabinet post.

Prince Edward Teachers Ratify Salary Increase of 30.1 Per Cent

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

BLOOMFIELD — Prince Edward school trustees, the secondary school teachers' salary negotiating committee and elementary school teachers salary negotiating committee have ratified salary agreements giving secondary teachers an overall increase of 30.1 per cent and elementary teachers 31.8 per cent over the 1974-75 agreements. The new salary schedule is retroactive to September 1, 1975 and applies to the 1975-76 school year.

Teachers now are being paid on the basis of the new salary schedule. The agreement with elementary teachers was not reached until after the deadline.

A release issued Monday by the board of education stated, "While it is obvious that to retain or attract good teachers Prince Edward teaching salaries must be competitive with neighboring school boards in view of recent rulings concerning teachers' salaries by the anti-inflation board it is also obvious that approval from the board is necessary before payment can be made on a salary agreement in excess of the anti-inflation guidelines."

Prince Edward school trustees will refer the elementary teachers' salary agreement to the anti-inflation board for a ruling. Until direction is received from this board elementary school teachers will be paid on the basis of a 12 per cent increase over the 1974-75 agreement.

The new salary schedule now in effect for secondary school teachers calls for a minimum basic salary of $10,200 in category IV and a maximum of $17,000 (11 years to maximum).

Category V states a minimum of $10,800 and a maximum of $18,700 (12 years to maximum).

Category VI calls for a minimum of $11,800 and a maximum of $21,100 (13 years to maximum).

Category VII states a minimum of $12,500 and a maximum of $22,500.

A principal without experience receives a minimum of $29,600 and a vice-principal $25,100.

Principals with one year's experience receive $30,300 and vice-principals $25,800.

A principal with two years experience receives $30,900 and a vice-principal $26,600.

Principals over three years experience a principal receives $32,000 and a vice-principal $27,600.

The new salary schedule for elementary teachers calls for a minimum of $7,700 and a maximum of $11,100 in category one.

Category two states $8,400 minimum and $13,500 maximum while category three calls for $9,100 minimum and $15,300 maximum.

A teacher in category four receives $10,200 minimum and $17,600 maximum while in category five minimum is $10,800 and maximum is $18,700.

Category six calls for a minimum of $11,800 and a maximum of $21,100 and category seven specifies $12,500 minimum and $22,500 maximum.

Principals are to be paid on the basis of experience and number of teachers in their schools.

MacEachen Will Attend Conference

OTTAWA (CP) — When ministers from 27 consumer and producer countries sit down in Paris next week for energy-saw material talks, External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen will be one of two chairmen.

Mr. MacEachen confirmed reports Canada has been asked to be co-chair the conference in answer to a question from Douglas Roche (PC—Edmonton Strathcona) in the Commons Monday. The reports said Venezuela was asked to be the other co-chairman.

Officials said Canada will accept the invitation on the approval of the European Economic Community (EEC), the U.S. and Japan.

Canada and Venezuela will chair the ministerial conference Dec. 16-18 and are then expected to oversee the work of four commissions on energy, resources, finance and development throughout the next year.

The two probably will be in the chair for a meeting of senior officials about mid-1976 and at the wind-up of the conference, probably next October.

Salary Demands Too High

Trenton Considers Volunteer Firemen

BY JERRY BROWN
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — A volunteer fire brigade system should be implemented to replace the current fire department if firefighters here do not recognize salary demands presented to the municipality, Sidney Sharp, town clerk told council Monday night.

A special committee of the entire council was formed to begin a study of municipalities listed by Mr. Sharp that currently have a volunteer brigade to consider the possibility of implementing such a system to replace the town's fire department and volunteer system.

Council was told the firefighters demand for a 19 per cent increase in their 1975 contract, which is going to arbitration December 17, was 6.6 per cent excess of the settlement the municipality reached with its other employees, Mr. Sharp told the council a continued trend to increase the firefighters salaries would "have serious effects on the negotiations with other town employees."

Mr. Sharp said that his recommendations were not meant to be taken as a threat against the firemen during the upcoming arbitration, but rather as a realistic approach to the rising salary problems.

"There are municipal employees who have served the town for more than 25 years, some department heads, who will be receiving less than a fireman who has been with the department for only five years and conceivably earning almost $20,000," Mr. Sharp told the council.

The $20,000 salary figure was based on the firefighters request for a 25 per cent increase in their 1976 contract which will not be negotiated until the 1975 contract is settled, said Mr. Sharp.

A total re-organization of the department's classification system would also be necessary if the present system were to be maintained, said the town clerk.

"It is my feeling we should have only two classifications-probationary firefighters and firefighters, period," said Mr. Sharp. Currently, the department has a Chief, deputy chief, four captains, four first class firefighters, one second class fireman and one probationary fireman, said the clerk.

Mr. Sharp told the council that part of the problem was that they had lost control of the decision making process of granting annual increase, stating the firefighters have enjoyed arbitration four times in the last six contract negotiations.

"What I am really saying is that your decisions are being made for you by an arbitration board made up of appointed persons, usually from large urban centres and certainly, it is obvious that they are not concerned with the after-effects of their decision upon our town," said the clerk.

Mr. Sharp said the responsibility was for council not to sit back and throw up its arms and blame the entire problem on arbitration but to try and return the issue of salary dispensation to municipal hands.

"I recommend that council urge the ratepayers of the town to provide input into this matter to assist in the decision regarding our fire brigade" council eventually is being forced to make," said Mr. Sharp.

Jobless Rate Rises In Four Provinces

OTTAWA (CP) — National unemployment rose slightly in November as the jobless rate jumped in four provinces—including Ontario and Quebec—but declined in five others.

Statistics Canada reported today that 7.4 per cent of the labor force was unemployed in November, up from 7.3 per cent in October.

It was the ninth consecutive month the rate has hovered above seven per cent. The record jobless level in 34 years. The rate is generally predicted to get worse when it gets better.

The figures are adjusted for seasonal variation, but economists consider a more accurate measure of economic performance.

On an actual basis, 640,000 persons were officially unemployed in November.

The unemployment rate in November, 1974 was 5.5 per cent of the labor force on a seasonally-adjusted basis. On an actual basis, there were 451,000 persons officially unemployed at that time.

On a seasonally-adjusted basis, the jobless rate for those 24 and younger increased by four-tenths of one per centage point to 13.3 per cent.

The rate also increased to 4 per cent from 4.3 per cent for women aged 25 and older. However, the jobless level dropped to five per cent from 5.3 per cent for men of the same age.

SHARP JUMP

Among the increases, the sharpest jump was in New Brunswick, where the rate rose nine-tenths of one percentage point to 13.3 per cent.

The rate also increased to 4 per cent from 4.3 per cent for women aged 25 and older. However, the jobless level dropped to five per cent from 5.3 per cent for men of the same age.

Air Traffic Controllers Suspended

QUEBEC (CP) — Two air traffic controllers at Montreal's Dorval International Airport have been suspended without pay for using French to issue take-off and landing instructions, the Quebec Air Workers Association said Monday.

The Quebec City-based association said one worker was suspended Saturday and a second earlier Monday.

The association, which represents 500 commercial aviation workers in the province, said it deplored the attitude of Maurice Pilre, regional director of the federal air traffic control service and Louis Desmarais, chief of the Dorval air traffic control centre for issuing the suspensions.

Christians Hold Out Against Moslem Forces

BEIRUT (AP) — Christian gunners with their backs to the Mediterranean held out today against a fierce encircling assault by Moslem forces in the downtown hotel and commercial district of this Lebanese capital.

A police spokesman said more than 50 persons were killed and hundreds were wounded during the night. The government radio said it was "the worst night of intensified fighting" in the civil war that began eight months ago.

Police said at least 125 persons have been killed in the latest round of fighting. It began Saturday night after a massacre by both sides in which police said 128 persons were murdered.

The heaviest fighting was in the seaside area that includes the major tourist hotels, the main commercial district and the banking district, once the financial heart of the Middle East.

An estimated 700 Moslems pushed ahead in a pincer movement that almost surrounded the Christians, cutting them off from Ashrafieh, their stronghold inside the city.

Half a dozen big fires burned out of control after rocket and mortar exchanges. They included one in the 500-room Phoenicia hotel where Christian militiamen were besieged.

The Moslems apparently were trying to push to the sea near the port of Beirut, which adjoins Ashrafieh, and cut off the Christians in the hotel and commercial district.

The Christians were holding out in several tall buildings in the area including the Holiday Inn, the Phoenicia, the unfinished Hilton Hotel and the Starco office building.

Spokesmen for the right-wing Phalange party said its 6,000-man militia, the largest of the private Christian armies, repulsed the Moslem attack at several points.

The government radio told all residents to stay indoors for the third straight day.

U.S. Defeats UN Attack on Israel

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United States has cast its 12th veto in the United Nations Security Council to defeat a resolution condemning Israeli air attacks on Palestinian camps in Lebanon.

U.S. Ambassador Daniel Patrick Moynihan cast the Monday council Monday night his government's "most profound regret" in the Middle East, could block the resolution because it did not censure guerrilla violence against Israel and therefore was one-sided.

Thirteen countries voted for the resolution and Costa Rica abstained. The condemnation said Israel's action for Lebanon, which had asked the council to take action against Israel.

The resolution condemned the Israeli government for air attacks last week in which the Lebanese police said more than 30 persons were killed. It called on Israel "to desist forthwith from all military attacks against Lebanon." And it warned that if such attacks are repeated, the council would consider "effective measures."

Moynihan said the United States strongly deplored the Israeli raids. But he said the council should also condemn the Palestinian guerrilla raids into Israel which the Israelis say their raids are designed to check.

Face Murder Charges

Two Belleville Men Remanded to Dec. 17

BY ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

THUNDER BAY (CP) — Two Belleville men charged with murder during a bank robbery/hostage taking were remanded in custody to Dec. 17 when they appeared in provincial court here last Wednesday.

Frederick Charles Reed, 19, who gives 86 Bertram Blvd. as his home address and Michael Paul Karlbeck, 17, of Cloverleaf Park, were charged in connection with the Nov. 22 stabbing death of Amadeo Plante, 48, a service station attendant in Pass Lake, Ont.

Ontario Provincial Police at Thunder Bay say two men allegedly involved, who was working at the service station in Pass Lake, about 25 miles east of here. Plante was stabbed in the back.

Police say the men left and Plante staggered to a nearby trailer where he woke his partner, Camillen Dumont.

Plante collapsed inside the trailer and was pronounced dead on arrival in hospital at Thunder Bay. Police say no money was taken during the incident.

Nuclear Power Demand On Rise Says Expert

Although there will be increased use of other forms of energy in the future the use of nuclear energy will be a must, vice-president of the Engineering Institute of Canada said in Belleville Monday.

In the next 10 years, said Phil Ross-Ross, an engineer with Atomic Energy Canada, about $3½-billion will be invested in Ontario in nuclear power.

He was speaking at the third annual host-a-student day sponsored by the Belleville branch of the institute.

Mr. Ross-Ross told students at the banquet that due to growing energy needs many engineers will be required in the field of nuclear energy.

Canada's levels of nuclear power production of electricity is equal to that of all major

Many Students Oppose Sharp Fee Increase

TRENTON — A proposal tabled in Queen's Park on Nov. 20, could possibly increase university and college tuition fees by about 46 per cent.

The report, from the Special Program Review Committee, under Treasurer Darcy McKeough, also recommended grants to students be eliminated and substituted with an increased loan system.

These are just two of the 184 recommended changes to slow the increase of provincial government spending.

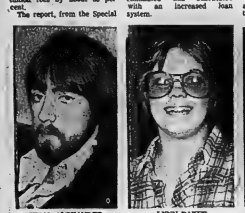
The report also recommends an increased bursary system to help low-income students recognizing academic achievement as well as financial need.

An estimated 1,250 teaching positions would have to be eliminated if the increase of fees is not implemented, states the report.

Mr. McKeough said the fee increase would be inconsistant with government policy and possibly run counter the federal anti-inflation program.

In an informal survey at Loyalist College, students were asked the question: How do you feel about the proposed increase in tuition fees?

Here are some of their responses:



CHRIS ALEXANDER

Chris Alexander, a second-year cinematography student, said, "It's going to cutback the number of applications and the number of students that attend."

A resident of RR 5 Trenton, Mr. Alexander said, it may be helpful in some courses such as radio because of the present number of students.

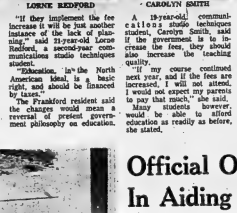
"It's going to make it too expensive for some students."

LYNN BAKER

A second - year mental resources counselor student, Lynn Baker, said she does not think much of the proposed increase.

"It's uncalled for," she said. "If they increase fees 65 per cent, why not just go on to university."

If the increase was prior to her first year at the college, the Batawa resident said she would not have attended, but she added that she would have if the increase was effective for her second year.

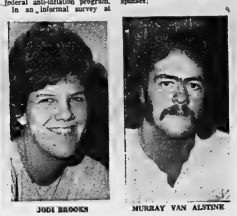


LORNE REDFORD

"If they implement the fee increase it will be just another instance of the lack of planning," said 21-year-old Lorne Redford, a second-year communications studio techniques student.

"Education, in the North American ideal, is a basic right, and should be financed by taxes."

The Frankford resident said the changes would mean a reversal of present government philosophy on education.

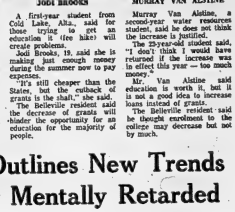


CAROLYN SMITH

A 19-year-old communications studio techniques student, Carolyn Smith, said if the government is to increase the fees, they should also increase the teaching quality.

"If my course continued next year, and if the fees are increased, I will not attend. I would not expect my parents to pay that much," she said.

Many students however, would be able to afford education as readily as before, she stated.



JODI BROOKS

A first-year student from Cold Lake, Alta., said for those trying to get an education it (fee hike) will create problems.

Jodi Brooks, 19, said she is making just enough money during the summer now to pay expenses.

"It's still cheaper than the States, but the cutback of grants is the shaft," she said.

The Belleville resident said the decrease of grants will hinder the opportunity for an education for the majority of people.

MURRAY VAN ALSTINE

Murray Van Alstine, a second-year water resources student, said he does not think the increase is justified.

The 23-year-old student said, "I don't think I would have returned if the increase was in effect this year — too much money."

Mr. Van Alstine said education is worth it, but it is not a good idea to increase loans instead of grants.

The Belleville resident said he thought enrolment to the college may decrease but not by much.

WAUPOOS — A Waupoos area man this month is looking a "gift horse" in the mouth in his search for the owner of a pony that was-derved to his property.

Integration Main Goal

Administrator of Prince Edward Heights, Robert MacKenzie, this week reported that he residents of the government centre for the mentally retarded have returned to the community in the past three years. He added that the challenge of the village complex lies in the fact that it affords an opportunity to bridge the gap between institutional and community living.

Official Outlines New Trends In Aiding Mentally Retarded

By MARG HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Prince Edward Heights, the Ontario government centre for the mentally retarded, is a half-way point between life in a large institution and community living, says administrator Robert MacKenzie.

Mr. MacKenzie said Monday the challenge of the Prince Edward Heights village lies in the fact that it offers an opportunity to bridge the gap between institutional and community living.

The administrator noted when the centre opened in July, 1971, it housed 70 residents and a skeleton staff.

Today Prince Edward Height operates at capacity with a total of 453 residents and a staff of more than 400.

Mr. MacKenzie said in the last two years there have been 26 direct admissions to the centre from Prince Edward County and outlying districts.

In the last three years about 40 persons from Prince Edward Heights have begun to function in the community, he added. Over one-half of these individuals receive follow-up services either from Prince Edward Heights social workers or protective community agencies.

Mr. MacKenzie said he anticipates another 20 residents will be integrated into the community in 1976.

He commented that 9.5 per cent of the residents of Prince Edward Heights experience hearing difficulties. A total of 4.5 per cent is completely deaf.

We service the whole province for special cases as related to deaf persons," remarked the administrator.

With a small number of cases there is close work between Prince Edward Heights and the Sir James Whitney School in Belleville.

Mr. MacKenzie said that the major problem is integration of deaf residents with the community. The community is unable to communicate with the deaf residents of Prince Edward Heights.

The administrator said efforts have been made to find homes in the community where Prince Edward Heights residents in the process of integration can live.

He commented that it is difficult to find proper accommodation as some of the proposed houses do not meet required standards of space and fire safety.

Sidney Making Sure Residents Aware of Winter Rec Program

WALLBRIDGE — Registration for winter recreation programs in Sidney Township began Wednesday says township recreation director Wendy Neale, and registrars reported have changed little from last fall.

Only skiing at the Batawa Ski Club and skating at the Stirling Arena have been added, she said.

Mrs. Neale said Monday registration will begin Wednesday at the township offices and continue through to Friday (9 a.m. to 4.30 p.m.), in an effort to overcome problems encountered with their fall program, the recreation department will twice advertise its winter programs in the hamlet of Batawa.

The director said no response had been obtained from Batawa children to fall programs — thereby forcing their cancellation.

A survey to ascertain a reason behind what was considered a lack of interest showed children in the hamlet simply hadn't known the programs were being held, she said.

This time, children will be given notices about programming at the school — something not done in the fall, Batawa homes will also be mailed a flyer, she said.

Programs for children this fall will include ball, gymnastics, judo (with $7 registration fees), and art ($10, materials included.)

The children's skiing program, said Mrs. Neale, will cost $30 and children must bring their own equipment.

The course fee includes bus fare to the Batawa Ski Club from a number of still undesignated locations in the township.

Except for the skiing program (#13) all adult courses will cost $10.

Programs are badminton, crocheting, Slim 'n' Trim, macrame, and yoga.

Recreation department staff will also take place (7 to 9 p.m.) at Bayside Elementary School Thursday, and Batawa Elementary School Friday.

PLO Only the Latest in Long Line of Political Entities Conceived in Blood

By JOHN D. HARBRON

Foreign Affairs Analyst

Thurston News Service

Perhaps the severest test of what we think of the Third World and its complex and infuriating politics and economics, is how we respond to the Palestinian Liberation Organization (PLO).

Before it came to prominence, first through the aircraft hijackings of its more extreme branches, then through its efforts to receive United Nations accreditation, we were inclined to write off the Third World as a place of military tyrants and corrupt leadership.

These have not gone away. Indeed they are endemic to the national life of too many countries of the emerging world.

But it is the PLO, with their insistence they represent a potential Palestinian state of four million people, which challenges our objectivity.

Whatever we think of the brutal methods PLO branches have used to get the world to listen to them, the organization does represent a potential new state in the world as the Jewish forces of organization were 30 years ago.

Nehru said their organization did and the late prime minister Ben-Gurion of Israel sometimes did in the 1930s.

By inviting the PLO to take its full part in the Security Council debate on last week's Israeli air raid on Lebanon, the United Nations has given the PLO equivalent status to member nations.

It already had received full observer status by the United Nations. And if that had affronted you, remember that many of the national leaders of Third World countries in the UN at present were also heads of liberation movements a few years ago.

Further back in the post-war period, (other than the leaders of Jewish liberation organizations of the late '40s), is present senior statesman Jomo Kenyatta, at 84 honored by Queen Elizabeth. But at 84 in the mid-30s he was the head of the Kikuyu tribe which literally spearheaded the bloody and extremely vicious Mau Mau revolt.

No one bears anything from Mozambique, one of the newest of the new nations whose president is a Marxist and until the proclamation of independence against Portugal, was head of the Frelimo.

It was the tough, resilient liberation movement which fought Portugal in East Africa for almost 15 years and finally won.

The same is true of Algeria's leaders who fought extremely cruel wars against the French in the late '50s until the late Gen. Charles de Gaulle saw the light and supported Algerian independence.

Few, very few, of the Third World new nations which have emerged in the peaceful way we in the West would prefer, Nigeria is an outstanding exception, having gone into nationhood with a constitution modeled closely on the Canadian and allowing substantial provincial rights.

But if Nigeria was born in peace and calm, that largest of African nations had to go through the fire and blood of civil war when Biafra broke away in 1966-69 and temporarily proclaimed itself an independent state.

Therefore the PLO - is the most recent in the long postwar history of the rise of the world's liberation movements, determined that an independent state for its people, almost always by violent means.

Their place and attitude transcends all problems of Middle East politics and issues. They demand a place and status with the same sense of legitimacy as the Indians, Kenyans, Algerians and the Jews before them.

Miss MacDonald's Pitch

Flora MacDonald made some useful suggestions on the subject of protection of our coastal resources — a reference to the "raping" of our fish stocks by foreign fishing fleets — and regarding prison policy in the course of her recent visit here.

With new long-range surveillance aircraft on order, the problem of patrolling our coastlines to the extent necessary should become easier. Naval destroyers are also engaged in this function in the Atlantic and presumably such violations of the fishing limits as are detected result in prosecutions.

As for law enforcement, the member for Kingston and the Islands is on controversial ground in calling for an end to the death penalty, but she does balance this line with a call for tougher measures to prevent crime and with regard to parole.

However, why animals are equated with hardline criminals has always been a mystery to us, as when Miss MacDonald refers to those criminals who should never be granted parole as "illiterally animals." Of course we know what she means, but animals in general deserve better; they can be trained in good behavior, as with dogs, and in the animals' part of nature. Hardened criminals however act the way they do because of other ungovernable forces in human nature. Yes, prisons are for them.

A Span of Years

The work span of most professional and working people, given good health and barring unforeseen circumstances, is about 40 years.

It has been Wellington's good fortune no doubt that former principal Milton Snider was the guiding force and grassroots educator he has been described for that space of time and a little more. Forty-one years in all.

Memories of schooldays evoke some of the strongest emotions and glimmers of nostalgia, and it was just such an occasion at the Consolidated School recently when it was renamed the C.M.U. Snider elementary school.

It lends strength to any community when a man of integrity and dedication can give so many years of service to succeeding generations. This was what Wellington has enjoyed under Mr. Snider.

The former principal has been retired since 1973, but his name and his work live on in the community, and in the minds of former students such as Alex Tait. Now a teacher in Picton, Mr. Tait's recollections at recent dedication ceremonies went back to Grade 1, attention to the Three Rs and some old-fashioned discipline from both principal and parents.

The school itself spans a past and present in education in this community which is symbolic of the essential strength and stability of life in Ontario even amid changing and often difficult times.

Movie Nostalgia

In the movie "That's Entertainment," which is a composite of the best of the Hollywood song and dance musicals of bygone days, actor Mickey Rooney appears on the set of the old Andy Hardy series.

The name of Mickey Rooney still casts memories back over the years. At 53 he is something of a showbiz legend — and here he was in Belleville, for the second time in the past few years, and a reunion with actor-singer Wally Williamson and his family.

The pair toured and ushered in a number of movies together. Mr. Williamson under his then stage name of Julian Gallo. Students of Massassaga and other area schools knew Mr. Williamson for his musical visits and one Massassaga Grade 1 lass, speaking of his visit on the occasion of the school's 50th anniversary summer concert has recalled that the show went on even though the visitor had a cold.

Her memory one day should match that of Andy Hardy fans of the forties and of children readers of Mickey Rooney who in that latter-day movie set appearance noted wryly that "we all change with the years."

A little heavier yes, but still the one and only Mickey Rooney and talking again of his fondness for the Quinte area, in particular of Ameliasburg township where the Williamsons live, and of a renewed desire to acquire some land here. It seems a far cry from Andy Hardy and Hollywood, but all the more interesting for that.

Quinte Animal Shelter: Efficient Operation Says Reader in Seeking Public Support

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

Re your article, Saturday, Nov. 15 — City Board Rejects Humane Society Request for Tag Day.

Throughout the past year, I have read and heard various reports of the financial difficulties of the Quinte Branch of the Humane Society, and also various criticisms of the branch, i.e. the kennels aren't clean enough; diseased animals are put out for adoption, etc.

My own feelings, through a number of visits to the Society in a search for pets, was that the centre was very well kept in view of the facilities available; the animals were clean; they had food and water; the staff was courteous, and really seemed to care about the animals they were shelter-ing. (Also, thanks to the Society, I have had a lovely white cat for the past three years, and a beautiful German Shepherd dog for the past — these animals received a loving home we received a lot of love in return).

Although I have no first hand knowledge of the financial status of the Society, from what I can gather, it is limping under a thoroughly inadequate budget, inadequate staff and facilities, and uncertainty about its future, how they cannot even have a Tag Day to help raise funds for this extremely worthy cause, because "Tag Days are no longer popular with the public". On the other page of this same edition of your paper, however there appears a large photo of a "jogger" and a story getting ready to "tag the public" for two days to try and raise approximately $1,500 of the $6,000 needed to get Canada Games parade, which isn't even any form of charity. Why doesn't the HFAH (Humane Society) Tag Day?

Also, hardly a day goes by that there isn't a Walk-a-thon, skate-a-thon, dance-a-thon, bike-a-thon, starve-a-thon, etc., etc., for one cause or another. Granted, the participators and sponsors are to be commended for their efforts, but I think we must all realize how now that this is a lot of duplication, and in some of these rather haphazardly-arranged events, one wonders if indeed the charities end up getting a very large percentage of money donated. It seems to be getting to be almost just a fad. In fact, in one instance, the high school student soliciting me as a sponsor, couldn't give accurate information as to the charity he was supposedly "starving" himself for.

Every year the government grants hundreds of thousands of dollars for causes that make us shake our heads in wonderment, some of the Canada Council grants are for "happenings" that make one gasp in disbelief, and yet, one sick, neglected, and abandoned animals of our nation seem to rate practically zero with the powers that be!... and also, seemingly, with the public, particularly in this area.

How utterly disheartening it must be at times for the dedicated people who try to care for them.

Somehow I am sure there must be many, many people in the Quinte area who are animal lovers, and who feel our Humane Society is doing a great job and fulfilling an urgent need. We call on them when we have problems with our pets, and they were love found — let's help them to do an even better job.

If just a few thousand of us in this large area would take just $1.00 each from our Christmas budget, or if every smoker would just give the price of cigarettes plus a few cents more to make a dollar each, and we all donated this to the Humane Society, think what a lift it would give to the workers. Think also how animals might have a better many and abandoned chance of not freezing or starving to death this winter, if we are enclosing a cheque for $25.00, made out to the Humane Society. I hope this will encourage others to make a contribution as well. I know I can count on you to make delivery of this cheque, and now I hope that when doing so, you might see your way clear to offer your assistance in printing "proper identifying tags, etc." that could be needed should the Society win an appeal for a Tag Day. They now only have the one volunteer "jogger" if needed — my phone number is 394-2272.

Conservation of Equity Is Now the Prime Concern of Tax Advisors

By VINCENT REGAN

Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst

Thurston News Service

Up until the become-tax reforms of 1972, Canadians could always find ways to beat the tax system a little if they tried hard enough.

But since then, just as much effort is required to avoid being beaten by the tax system.

Professional tax advisers so longer concentrate on government strategy directed at growth, but rather on the conservation of clients' equity in anticipation of a loss — which may never come—when capital will again have a reasonable chance to grow.

Some of the key suggestions made by a panel of tax and investment specialists at a recent conference sponsored by the Financial Post were these:

—Take full advantage of the opportunities to defer taxes and to invest, by using registered savings plans.

—If you borrow, do so (if at all possible) for a purpose that permits you to treat interest payments as an expense that you can deduct from your taxable income.

—Consider combining investment enjoyment through things (such as antiques, fine art or even summer cottage) that tend to increase in value over the years.

"The tax and the investment game are both becoming more expensive for an amateur to play than they have been since the end of the last war," according to panel member William A. Macdonald, a Toronto lawyer.

"The fundamentals of that game have been changing as Western economies become increasingly politicized, driving the laws of economics underground, he contends.

The result has been much higher taxation on capital investment and savings, a 10-year decline in real rates of return on most business investment, and ever-expanding government controls, Mr. Macdonald's view.

For the individual taxpayer, this central strategy must be directed at all the taxing chips in play with when there's a worthwhile game to play, some unpredictable time ahead.

Example: Let's say your marginal, or highest, income-tax rate is 40 per cent. (You should be so lucky). You borrow $50,000 at interest of 10 per cent or $5,000 a year.

If you apply the borrowing to the purchase of a non-business asset (the family home, for example), there's no tax relief.

But if you invest the $50,000, then the interest is a deductible expense. Result: Your after-tax cost of borrowing is only $3,000.

The saving of $2,000 is the after-tax equivalent of an additional $5,000 salary or bonus, which is fully taxable.

Tax benefits on a considerable number of assets can sometimes be found in what the Income Tax Act calls personally-used property.

The idea is to take advantage of the fact that some such personal items tend to hold their real value because they are unique, or because they "age" rather than wear out.

A work of art or an antique that is bought and sold for less than $1,000 is ignored by the tax collector. But capital gain you might make is tax-free income—providing that you are not a dealer.

What if the price is more than $1,000, and you sell at a loss rather than a gain?

The loss could be used to offset gains from the same class for one year back or five years forward.

"This is not as good as ordinary capital loss which can be carried forward until death," notes Mr. Macdonald.

But it's better than ordinary personal-use property on which you don't count at all."

The hidden danger in tax strategies is that the taxpayer may become too absorbed and put the cart before the horse.

If the investment transaction itself doesn't make sense, forget it.

Era Of Canned Applause

The Picton Gazette

In the entertainment industry — and in politics too — careers are made and broken by applause and by lack of applause. We are often manipulated into offering applause and sometimes our applause is measured by machines. Persons in groups can be led to applaud things at which very few of them as individuals would ever clap one hand. We readily applaud things which do not deserve our applause — probably because we feel that willingness to applaud indiscriminately is a sign of tolerance and broadmindedness.

Canned applause along with canned laughter is often dubbed into the sound-tracks of filmed television programs and used as background support on radio shows. We sit in our easy chairs and let ourselves be beguiled by artificial applause that is accepting what we really know to be utter tripe as the fine flower of human creativity. How else can you account for the phenomenal success of some television shows?

We often show amusement and offer applause because we do not wish to be branded old and puritanical and narrow-minded. But broad-mindedness can have its own subversively hateful narrowness. Artistic integrity is not necessarily understood by four-letter words, bared female breasts and explicit sex.

Today we are being subtly forced into conformities of restraint and attitude without our being fully aware of the extent to which we are being manipulated. Applause can be contagious — and dangerous in its peril.

Human nature, fortunately, has in it a strain of sheer contrariness and this keeps society from becoming thoroughly homogenized in taste and behaviour. Even many of us, really, being individual judgement to bear on entertainments on politics — on anything which is good, bad or merely selfish purposes, tries to manipulate us into applauding?

Unusual Disease

Montreal Star

Sleeping sickness may be a misnomer for the disease which once we were inclined to associate only with the deepest Africa and the tsetse fly. But spleen encephalitis as it is now known in North America has been breaking out with too often to be accepted as casually as it seems to be by health authorities in Texas, Florida and the United States.

As far as the sometimes fatal nature of the disease - and the nearly mystic ravages of the viral effects on those who survive the conflict with the administrations of Manitoba and Ottawa about how that city's infamous mosquitoes, supposed carriers, should be handled could be of comedy proportions. But surely it is the sort of problem which should not be debated at the local level.

It is one which calls for a coordinated effort by the authorities of both Canada and the United States, with advice from the World Health Organization if necessary, because the virus is not one that can be localized.

Workers Are Bitter

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — Striking paperworkers in the St. Catharines area are more bitter towards the pulp and paper companies than are paperworkers in Northern Ontario, a senior union official said Monday. About 2,000 union members have been on strike at seven area mills for five months.

Pope Celebrates

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul marked the Roman Catholic Feast of the Immaculate Conception and the 10th anniversary of the end of the Vatican Ecumenical Council with a new prayer Monday calling for "reconciliation among peoples and nations."

The 78-year-old pontiff, who wrote a 900-word prayer dedicated to the Virgin Mary, read it during a high Mass in St. Peter's Basilica.

McKeough To Outline Spending Plans

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Treasury Darcy McKeough said Monday he hopes to outline to municipalities soon the details of the province's spending plans for next year.

He was answering questions in the legislature on his previous statement that the increase in government grants to communities will be held to a six-per-cent increase during the next fiscal year.

Marlon Bryden (NDP—Toronto Beaches-Woodbine) said municipalities facing the six-per-cent increase ceiling already are planning cuts in vital programs. Mr. McKeough said he is delighted to hear that municipal officials are starting their budget processing early.

Urban Institute Paints Bleak Rental Picture

TORONTO (CP) — The Urban Development Institute (UDI) painted a bleak picture for apartment dwellers Monday, warning of dire consequences if government rent-control proposals are adopted without key amendments.

The institute, representing landlords and developers, said the government's proposed controls would hamstring construction, financially restrict upkeep on buildings and bring apartment construction to a halt.

Bob Strom, chairman of the institute's apartment group, presented figures from a UDI survey which show the average vacancy rate in Metropolitan Toronto is .57 per cent and the rest of the province has a vacancy rate of 3.4 per cent.

He said the government has been egged into a witch hunt by the NDP because of a few "rare and badly distorted" cases brought out during the election campaign.

Mr. Strom quoted a report prepared for the housing ministry last summer which said average rents in Toronto had increased by 11.7% per cent over the preceding 12 months.

Mr. Strom said the survey was proof that rents were not set without good reasons by market value, regardless of the increase ceiling—proposed as eight per cent for the first year. The second would allow landlords and tenants to reach mutual agreements on rent increases, outside the proposed rent control bureaucracy.

NDP Leader Stephen Lewis said later in an interview that he does not accept the institute's vacancy rate figures, saying he has followed the Central Mortgage and Housing Corp.'s figures recently and they have shown vacancy rates as low as one or two per cent.

He was skeptical of Mr. Strom's suggestion that the average Toronto rent is just more than $216 a month. Mr. Lewis said the government's housing survey, showing the 11.74-per-cent rent increase, is suspect.

"For every person they surveyed in mid-lease—when they couldn't report a rent increase—they calculated the rent increase as zero," Mr. Lewis said. "They shouldn't have been counted at all."

Watergate Memories Will Influence 1976 Election

WASHINGTON (CP) — When United States citizens, they line up to vote next November, will have their first chance since Watergate to choose for themselves the man they want to occupy the White House.

And already, experts are speculating upon how—if at all—that scandal may have affected traditional American attitudes toward the presidency.

Details of the Watergate upheaval may be growing dim in the memories of many Americans.

It was back on June 17, 1972, that a band of burglars was arrested in the Democratic national committee headquarters in the Watergate office-hotel-shopping complex on the banks of the Potomac.

Ronald Ziegler, former press denial press aide, called it a "third-rate burglary" at the time.

Before the widening scandal subsided, however, his boss—President Richard Nixon—had resigned his office and as individuals and 29 corporations had been charged with a variety of crimes.

Forty-four people and 19 of the corporations pleaded guilty. Twenty men went to jail.

Then came additional shock when President Gerald Ford issued a blanket pardon to Nixon, the man who plucked him from the House of Representatives and put him on the path to the White House itself. Ford subsequently found it necessary to go on television to insist there had been "no deals" involved in his succession or the pardon.

By election day, 1976, the U.S. will have functioned for more than two years under caretakers, neither of them elected by their posts, in the offices of president and vice-president.

The impact of Watergate, however, may be blurred for scholars who will have to grade it against such issues as intelligence community - prohibition, recession and searing unemployment, the energy crisis and disclosure of murder plots within the U.S. items that peaked as Watergate was waning.

Some experts are convinced that all of this is reflected in signs of declining political party membership, traditional base of candidate power in the U.S.

Some say the time may be ripe for the emergence of a strong man with broad across-party-lines support based on distrust of the political systems of the past. So far, no such demagogue has appeared.

Others predict that the traditional two-party system not only will survive, but will grow stronger as the public tires of away from the demagogue theory.

One who feels this way also predicts that future presidents will tend to become more and more remote from the public, dodging controversy as much as possible.

Aaron Wildavsky, dean of the graduate school of public policy at University of California, writes:

"The failure of demagogues, parties or mass movements to take advantage of the national disarray of the past 10 years suggests the unlikelihood of any great change in today's basic political arrangements."

Wildavsky argues that a resurgence on the part of the pro-dents may emerge as they study the "reverse erosion" in personal reputation suffered by all recent presidents as far back as Dwight Eisenhower.

In addition, he notes a decides lack of public enthusiasm for any of the current prospective replacements for Ford.

"When one or two leaders fail, that may well be their fault," he writes. "When all fail, and when all known replacements are expected to fail, the difficulty is not individual but systemic."

Few of the prospective replacements—and there are more than a dozen in the field—are taking hard stands on any of the issues, instead, many have been content to deal with bread-and-butter policies.

Ford's firing of Defence Secretary James Schlesinger and his nice-reversed stand against financial aid to New York City have handed his enemies further ammunition.

Much of the ast-l Ford campaign has taken on bitter personal overtones of ridicule.

One columnist, who refers to Ford as "old bungle foot," calls him "Klumsi Klevenge."

Ford himself, to the despair of his image-makers, can describe him as "earnest" and "amiable," presumably assets target for political jibes.

Something less than a dynamic speaker, Ford's utterances have given rise to the remark that if he ever gives a fireside chat, the Mrs will go out.

And he has been photographed falling down the stairs of his presidential jet, bumping his head in the doorway of the presidential helicopter, and wearing a piece of tape on his nose where he bumped it in a swimming pool.

Such incidents have revived the old line by the late Lyndon Johnson who said that Ford—a former college football lineman—had been playing too long without a helmet.

His campaign with the whip inflation now—was a fiasco, as the buttons ran out. Then cartoonists blossomed with drawings of rich Arab oil men wearing "LOSE" buttons.

Some believe that such ridicule may prove more harmful to Ford at the polls than any possible long-range connection with Nixon and Watergate.

For many, Watergate is last year's news at best.

Nixon's top three counsellors—H.R. Haldeman, John Ehrlichman and John Mitchell—are all out of jail after serving shortened versions of their 2½-to-8-years sentences.

So is John Dean, the former White House aide whose televised testimony kept the country spellbound at the height of the scandal.

Haldeman, his distinctive crew-cut grown long now, is writing a book on Watergate. Ehrlichman has grown a beard and now is working on a novel somewhere in New Mexico. Mitchell is helping in the preparation of Dean's appeal.

Dean, whose wife beat him to it, is also writing a Watergate book.

Ziegler went into brief exile with his boss in San Clemente, Calif. Now he works for an international engineering firm.

Senator Sam Ervin (Dem. N.C.), colorful chairman who enlivened the investigating committee sessions with folksy down-home humor, has retired to a porch down home in Morganton.

Howard Baker, pipe-smoking Republican senator from Tennessee who became a television celebrity as vice-chairman to "Senator Sam," still is in the Senate. Today he splits sessions with Goldwater as a possible middle-of-the-road moderate candidate for the presidency.

Truckers Ask Review Board To Intervene in Assessments

TORONTO (CP) — An official of the Ontario Trucking Association said today it has asked the federal anti-inflation review board to intervene in a 41.5-per-cent increase in assessment rates to be imposed by the Board starting Jan. 1.

M. W. Donnelly, chairman of the association's board, said in a news release the increased payments mean the industry will have to pay $25.4 million to the board next year, compared with $16 million this year.

"There's just no way that our industry can absorb this additional $9.4 million, especially with other operating costs increasing to the breaking point," the chairman of the 1,200-member association said.

Mr. Donnelly said a reduction in the number of trucking accidents requiring compensation during the first 10 months of this year makes it difficult to justify the increase in the rate.

"We believe that there has to be intensive scrutiny of Ontario's entire system of employee accident compensation costs," he said.

Rebel Priest Refuses To Leave Rectory

MONTREAL (CP) — Father Yves Normandin, dismissed Nov. 5 as pastor of a north-end church, refused Monday to leave the church's rectory to attend a scheduled meeting with Montreal Archbishop Paul Grepairs.

Father Barry Jones, spokesman for the archdiocese of Montreal, said the case now is at an impasse, and added the next step will have to come from the new pastor, Father Marcel Bircher, and wardens of the Ste. Yvette parish.

Father Bicher, accompanied by wardens, locksmiths and police, tried unsuccessfully Friday to force the priest out of the church's rectory where he has been barricaded since Thursday.

Father Normandin, dismissed from his post for refusing to abide by a Vatican decree for changes in the mass ritual, including discontinuation of Latin, has said he will remain locked inside the church until he is forcibly evicted or "until I die."

Group Claims Crowe Has Conflict of Interest

OTTAWA (CP) — Chairman Marshall Crowe of the National Energy Board already has made some decisions on the merits of a northern natural gas pipeline, a public interest group argued before the Federal Court Monday.

The Committee for Justice and Liberty Foundation said the Canada Development Corp., with Mr. Crowe as its president, put $1.3 million into a study group which later became Canadian Arctic Gas Pipeline Ltd. W. I. C. Binnie, appearing on behalf of the Foundation, told the court must assume Mr. Crowe considered all aspects of the project, deciding on its feasibility, before he committed funds from the crown corporation.

The foundation along with Canadian Arctic Resources Committee and Consumers Association of Canada are challenging Mr. Crowe's right to head an energy board panel now considering competing applications for a northern pipeline.

They say he may have a bias in the case because of his earlier membership on the Arctic Gas board of directors and his possible participation in government pipeline planning as a cabinet official.

Mr. Gerows was a member of the committee board from 1972 to 1973, representing the CDC, of which he was president and later chairman. He stepped down from both the CDC and Arctic Gas boards when he was appointed to the energy board in the fall of 1973.

Meanwhile, just as the court case got under way Monday morning, a lawyer for Arctic Gas said the CDC withdrew from active partnership in the consortium effective Oct. 31. It no longer takes part in decisions and has no vote on the board of directors.

Pop Can Hobby Turns Into Furniture Business

By ISABEL HUGGAN

Even Nancy Bunnett is a little surprised the way things have worked out.

When she made her first tiny chair out of a soft drink can last February, it was as a start to a hobby. She was only looking for a diversion — but somewhere along the line it became a business.

For now, 200 chairs and 150 tables later, Mrs. Bunnett is turning out three pieces a day, and must work regular hours in order to keep up with the demand for her miniature furniture.

"It took me six hours to make that first chair," she recalls, "but I work a lot faster than that now!"

"I just used a pair of pliers to begin with," Mrs. Bunnett says. "It was hard to twist the metal exactly the same every time. Finally, I found the hobby shop curled curling tools especially for this. They've made it much easier."

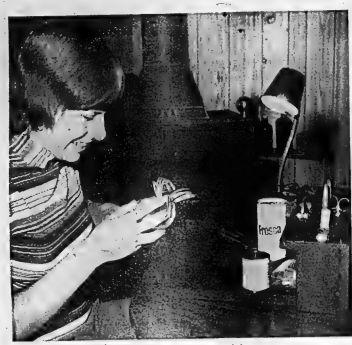
The ornate designs, composed of curves and lines, are created out of thin strips of metal cut out of the sides of a can, and which are glued attached to the bottom that serves as the chair seat or table top. Mrs. Bunnett uses mainly soft drink cans, but avoids beer and turpentine cans for settees and love seats, and oil cans for Barbie-doll-sized chairs.

She works in front of the fireplace in her kitchen, at a small workbench made for the task by her husband Larry. Although she works quickly, she is still very careful of her gloveless fingers as she cuts and twists. "I've only cut my thumb once on a can, and that was enough," she says.

After the body of the chair or stool is made, it is spray-painted gold or black, and a stuffed velvet seat pad is attached. The furniture is then suitable for use as a pin cushion, although many are bought simply as ornaments or for furnishing a doll house.

Her mother and mother-in-law have both sold pieces for Mrs. Bunnett, and she has some for sale at the Latin General Store near her home. Most of her orders, however, are as a result of her work being seen in homes and offices. She take orders through friends, and upholsters in whatever shade of velvet is required.

Unique pop can furniture, three or four inches high, elegant velvet and gilt.



Nancy Bunnett starts work on a soft drink can.

TOMMY

When you first meet 12-year-old Tommy, you are impressed with his eyes, the most striking feature of an attractive face. You are also impressed with his quiet, serious manner. Tommy is shy and reserved, not ready to accept strangers as immediate friends. With people he knows he is pleasant, cooperative and helpful.

Though Tommy is a registered Indian, he may have some black ancestry. He has light brown, very curly hair, hazel eyes and medium complexion.

Tommy is healthy and active, happiest when he is outdoors. He loves camping, hiking, anything to do with water and woods. He has recently developed interest in sports but is not involved in any teams himself because they are not available in the area of his foster home.

Tommy is an average student in Grade five. He likes school, is fond of reading and writes poetry. He enjoys music, especially Country and Western.

Good at working with his hands, Tommy likes wood working. He has made bows and arrows and carved figures. He is interested in farm machinery and how it works.

Tommy will require time to feel he belongs in a new family but he wants to try. Girls will be a fine asset for a mother and father who can help him believe he is really wanted and loved.

To inquire about adopting Tommy, please write to Today's Child, Ministry of Community and Social Services, Box 888, Station K, Toronto M4P 2H2. In your letter tell something about your present family and your way of life.

Nutrition Advice for Mothers

Marcia O'Linsky, speaking to Mothers' Group.

If you think you're the only one who has problems preparing dinner for your pre-schooler, you're not alone.

The subject was under discussion Friday when the Mothers' Group met for their weekly session at the Corby Public Library. Guest speaker was Marcia O'Linsky, public health nurse for Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Health Unit, who told the mothers that proper nutrition for preschoolers can be difficult.

"Nutrition can be a problem," said Mrs. O'Linsky. "A well-nourished child has a better chance to grow, learn, feel and look good," she said.

Mrs. O'Linsky suggested mothers balance their children's diets by giving them a lot of nourishing foods they like, to make up for those foods that they won't eat.

Mrs. O'Linsky also suggested that children help prepare the food in the kitchen. Gimmicks such as making food designs on the plate and serving food in unusual ways can also be used, she said.

Examples of teaching children good nutrition were demonstrated in a film called Jenny Is A Good Thing-from Project Head Start in the United States. The project has been operating for a few years in schools for children in poor communities.

Mr. and Mrs. Kirk Francis Genereux

Genereux — Farrell

The Church of St. Michael the Archangel was the scene of the November wedding of Mary Ellen Farrell and Kirk Francis Genereux.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Joseph M. Farrell and the late Joseph Farrell; the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Genereux.

Father Ken Stitt officiated at the ceremony, where Lois Farrell and Duane Freeman, sister-in-law and brother-in-law of the bride, were soloists.

Given in marriage by her brother, Richard Farrell, the bride wore a qiana gown with sheer organza insert trimmed with seed pearls in a scroll design. The gown has a high mandarin neckline and long sleeves. The A-line skirt features a chapel length train. Her full length veil was trimmed with seed pearls and lace and she carried a cascade of red roses and baby's breath.

Donna Freeman, the bride's sister, was the matron of honor in a royal blue velvet gown with puffed sleeves and sweetheart neckline. She carried two white mums.

Attendants were Jeanne Genereux, the groom's sister, and Debbie Dafoe, in rose velvet gowns and carried two mums.

Junior bridesmaid was Joanne Farrell, the bride's sister, who wore royal blue.

Ed Palin was groomsman, assisted by the groom's brothers Paul Genereux and George Genereux.

A dinner and dance followed at the Elk's Lodge.

After a wedding trip to Acapulco, the couple took up residence in Kitchener.

Burning Rectal Itch Relieved In Minutes

One of the most common afflictions is a condition known as "Itching Piles." It is most embarrassing for the sufferer during the day and especially aggravating at night.

If you want satisfactory relief—here's good news. A renowned research laboratory has found a wonderful healing substance with the ability to promptly relieve the burning itch and pain. It actually shrinks hemorrhoids. This substance has been shown to produce a most effective rate of healing. Its germ-killing properties also help prevent infection.

In one hemorrhoid case after another "very striking improvement" was reported. This improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions.

All this was accomplished by a healing substance (Bio-Dyne®) developed by a world-renowned research institution. This substance is now obtainable in ointment or suppository form known as Preparation H. Ask for Preparation H Suppositories (convenient to carry if away from home) or Preparation H Ointment with special applicator. Available at all drug counters. Satisfaction or your money refunded.

Ann Landers

Education Prevents Sexual Exploitation

Dear Ann Landers: I have struggled with this letter for several days, trying to get it just as concisely as I can. This is the best I can do. The subject: Relatives and the Sexual Exploitation of Children.

I am 25 now and have vivid memories of three such experiences. The first was at 4 years. I was only six years old at the time. He followed me into the bathroom when we were alone in the house and took sexual liberties with me. I was warned not to say anything to anyone or something "bad" would happen to me. I didn't realize what he was doing and was just plain terrified. I never told a soul.

The second encounter was with my own father when I was 11 years of age. I would rather not go into the details of that mind-searing experience. I never told anyone about it because I was afraid it might destroy my mother.

The third was a friend of my parents. I was 14. He was drunk, had passed out in our house during a party and came to my bedroom at dawn. It's hard to believe I was so naive. I never told a soul what happened. I realize now I COULD HAVE become pregnant.

I will be 33 years of age next week and just lost a boyfriend I really cared about. Our romance lasted only three months because I'm afraid to let a man get close to me.

How can these hideous experiences be avoided? The answer is education. Parents should talk freely to their children about the sanctity and privacy of their bodies. Children should be instructed at an early age (four isn't too soon) not to allow anyone—friend, neighbor, or relative to take liberties with their bodies. Moreover, children should be told that if anyone tries to get intimate to report it to a parent at once.

I know now that I was a victim of exposed to these early sexual experiences. I know, too, that many of our innocent child is being exploited in every state in the union. Please, Ann, print this letter and help open the eyes of both parents and children. It's a wonderful opportunity to educate millions. Thank you. — A Victim

Dear Friend: You are the one who should be thanked. I hope every parent and child who reads this column will pay close attention.

You didn't ask for any personal advice but I feel compelled to offer it. If you haven't considered therapy to help resolve the problems created by YOUR early traumatic experiences, I hope you will do so immediately.

Dear Ann Landers: A close friend has taken up oil painting as a hobby. She claims it has done her more good than three years with a shrink. Last week she surprised us with a housegift—a beautifully framed monstrosity for our living room.

The canvas is enormous and the painting looks like either a barn that has caught fire or an industrial accident — depending on your imagination. My bluegrass band says we must hang it for a while at least. I can't bear the thought, yet I'd hate to hurt her feelings. She's a dear person. Please advise. — Tora

Dear Tora: Sounds like a great conversation piece. Hang it for a while—then rotate your art (many people do this) and move the picture to a closet shelf.

Abortion Laws Still Unfair, Discriminate Against Poor

TORONTO (CP)—Three doctors said Thursday that lower-income women have just as much difficulty ending unwanted pregnancies as they did before the Criminal Code was amended five years ago to permit abortion on medical grounds.

Dr. Ben and Linda Rapson and Dr. Hamilton Wendell Watters, members of the steering committee for Doctors for Repeal of the Abortion Law, told a news conference they have compiled a report titled Survey of Hospital Abortion Committees in Canada.

"A number of Toronto physicians charge well over the OHIP rate . . . and those who can afford to pay get abortions," said Dr. Cohen.

Police PR Program 'Cops and Kids' Improves Images

HALIFAX (CP) — A two-year-old program named Cops and Kids is successfully giving the Halifax Police Department a more kindly image.

The co-ordinators of the police department's community-relations section, Inspector Noel Westfall and Constable Bob Cook, started the program when a schoolteacher and three education students suggested they spend two hours with Grade 5 students of the Westmount School two nights a week. This year it is being expanded to take in three more schools.

The students travel throughout the city with Inspector Westfall and Constable Cook in an unmarked police car and listen to the police radio.

Cruising through the city, they stop to watch policemen investigating automobile accidents and doing other police work.

Children are encouraged to ask questions and the two policemen explain police procedures.

At the end of the two hours the two policemen go into the children's homes and visit their parents.

Since the program began all Grade 5 students at Westmount School have had a chance to participate. Of the 35 who participated, only two said they felt police were "meaner" than before their experience.

Twenty-three indicated they would have liked to spend more time in the car, 31 felt a policeman's work was hard and 34 indicated they would like to do it again.

Inspector Westfall said the program's success has a great value in preventing crime.

Children rarely see a policeman in other than an aggravated, tense atmosphere when he tells them to think of policemen as "bad people" who harass them or their parents, he said.

Parent participation is important because the children relate easily to the parents. In the first year, it took children half the night to start relating to the policemen because they had to get over their initial fear of them. She said with parent involvement the children seemed more secure.

WI Changes Priorities

OTTAWA (CP) — The Federated Women's Institutes of Canada has decided to change its priorities, its president said in an interview Friday.

Mrs. Ellen McLean said the 37-member national board, after a two-day meeting here that wound up Friday, has a list of topics to bring back to provincial branches for discussion.

Land use, the use and misuse of resources and credit, strengthening of the family unit, the role of women in public life and human rights should be stressed by the organization next year, she said.

She said the 35,000-member institute has a lot of political clout. Although its membership is primarily rural, it's "started the ball rolling" for many community self-help projects across the country, she added.

"We've re-interpreted in municipal and provincial governmental circles because we do our homework when we approach a problem and the solutions we propose are very practical."

Mrs. McLean said the institute has specialized in nutrition education during the past year and plans to continue this program.

"We hope to reach more low income people," she said, "What's the good of a welfare cheque if you don't know how to spend it properly?"

Mrs. McLean said a woman-to-woman approach in small communities probably is the best way the institute can spread its nutrition education.

"Up to now we've been preaching to the converted," she said. "It's time to go out and reach the people who need the information."

Lunches Paid

MONTREAL (CP) — The Protestant School Board of Greater Montreal has decided to pay lunchtime supervision costs for students this year rather than have parents assume the expense. The board decided by a 8-to-4 vote that the costs which totalled $303,836 last year, were the responsibility of the schools, not the parents.

Lewis Criticizes Undue Delays in Compensation

TORONTO (CP) — Stephen Lewis, leader of the Ontario New Democratic Party, said Monday that the province's Workmen's Compensation Board (WCB) is taking undue lengths of time to process claims by widows of asbestos workers who have died of cancer.

Speaking during a meeting of a committee of the legislature studying WCB spending estimates, Mr. Lewis said he has documented evidence of three cases in which widows have been waiting since early this year for the board to issue decisions on their claims.

He said the Ontario government had been aware for many years of dangers facing asbestos workers and "I just don't understand how the government could be so negligent and so wrong in dealing with health hazards."

WCB chairman Michael Starr told Mr. Lewis that he regretted the time it took to process claims.

Mr. Lewis said there has been lack of communication between WCB and physicians expert in environmental health. He cited wht he called a silicosis problem at Canada Porcelain Co. Ltd. of Hamilton, where "cases are starting to assert themselves in profusion."

Labor Minister Bette Stephenson, whose ministry is responsible for the WCB, said she could see no reason for any lack of communication between the board and doctors.

John Sweeney (L.—Kitchener-Wilmot) said claimants often wait more than three months before they hear from the board. Part of the delay is often caused by a doctor who fails to fill out reports properly, he added.

Dr. Stephenson agreed. "They just don't seem to understand the urgency," she said.

Earlier Monday, Mr." Lewis asked Health Minister Frank Miller in the legislature whether he was aware that three recent tests at the Canada Porcelain plant showed silica counts in excess of the allowable amounts.

Mr. Miller replied that he recalled only one test done a year ago and said he would look into the situation.

Dr. Charles Stewart, WCB consultant on chest diseases, told the committee that 17 claims are pending from coke oven workers at the Hamilton plant of the Steel Co. of Canada Ltd.

The WCB is awaiting doctors' reports in some of the cases—seven of which involve cancer—and job classification in others.

There are also three cases pending from Algoma Steel Corp. Ltd. in Sudbury, Dr. Stewart said.

Mr. Lewis said in an interview that the WCB should agree there has been ample evidence to support claims of lung disease caused by asbestos dust at the Canadian Johns-Manville Ltd. plant in Tenaille.

He said the board granted benefits to a woman who wheeled a coffee cart through the plant for only two years when she was a teen-ager.

Dr. Stewart had told the committee that the woman's disease was diagnosed as mesothelioma, a serious ailment caused by asbestos dust.

Some Soft Drinks Removed From Shelves Due to Lead

MONTREAL (CP) — Several brands of canned soft drinks marketed in Quebec and Ontario by Seven-Up Ltd. are being removed from grocery store shelves as a precautionary measure after tests revealed the drinks may contain unacceptable level of lead, it was announced Monday.

The recall affects all cans of Grapette, Sprite, Welch's Schweppes, Seven-Up and Diet Seven-up, a company spokesman said.

Canned varieties of the affected products are marketed throughout Ontario and Quebec with the exception of the Ottawa area, which is unaffected. An exception are Schweppes mixes which are also sold in the Maritime provinces and Manitoba.

The action follows preliminary tests which indicate some of the drinks may contain a higher than permissible level of lead, apparently resulting from the solder used in the manufacture of the cans, the spokesman said.

"There is no danger of a person becoming immediately ill from drinking the canned products," he said.

"However, even the suspicion of a problem of this nature is enough to concern us and we want to see the worst foot too."

However, police will call witnesses to testify on police training when the commission begins hearing public submissions on Jan. 12, he said.

The commission was set up by the province in 1974 to investigate allegations of brutality by Metro police. Its job is to decide whether mistreatment is a tendency or practice and to investigate whether the use of force is necessary.

The terms of the inquiry allow Mr. Justice Morand to recommend changes in police recruiting and training.

The 17 cases heard so far by the commission invariably boiled down to a question of credibility, he said. In every case, there were "two gruops of people telling directly opposite stories and we had to decide who was telling the truth."

Police officers often were asked whether brutality was common in the force. On some occasions an officer would say he had heard stories but had never seen examples, Mr. Justice Morand said.

Police Commission Will Interview Toronto Cadets for Information

TORONTO (CP) — A royal commission investigating the practices of Metropolitan Toronto police will privately interview training officers in an effort to get more information on what goes on in police schools, says the head of the commission.

Mr. Justice Donald Morand of the Ontario Supreme Court said in a recent interview that hiring and training practices of the force will be important factors when the commission makes its recommendations to the provincial cabinet in April.

Mr. Justice Morand said commission hearings may not be the right place for the public to find out how officers are trained, adding that the public will get information more quickly if he acts as an intermediary.

"I may find out things they are not prepared to show you," he said. "People tend to put their best food forward in public.

Spending Restraint in 1976 Will Further Depress Quebec

MONTREAL (CP) — Restraint in capital expenditures is expected to lead the Quebec economy into a lacklustre 1976, following an even more depressed 1975.

Most forecasts suggest a five-per-cent growth rate for Quebec and Canada in 1976, although the Quebec government has predicted the province could slightly surpass the national average.

This growth anticipated for 1976 follows a stagnant 1975, which witnessed the Quebec and Canadian economies barely breaking even as they tried to shed the shackles of a recession and inflation rates unparalleled in peacetime.

Although the shackles will bind the economy less tightly in 1976, cautious fiscal policies by government and business will result in few major construction projects—the traditional mark of a booming economy.

Guy Saint-Pierre, industry and commerce minister, said the high cost of the James Bay hydroelectric power project will permit the provincial government to become involved in only two other major projects.

These two projects are a $600-million iron-ore development at Fire Lake in northern Quebec and a $1-billion aluminum smelter near Quebec City.

Restraint is also expected to be the key philosophy of the private business sector.

Robert Baguley, senior economist with the Royal Bank of Canada, said that canital outlays for non-residential construction and for new machinery and equipment will increase by only three per cent in 1976.

Although the economy will be healthier in 1976 than in 1975, Mr. Baguley said corporations will avoid major expenditures of staff increases in their efforts to boost productivity, which now l. lagging in comparison with the United States.

Construction activity, however, in 1976 is expected to reach the 1975 level as major projects started in previous years continue. Such projects include the $13-billion James Bay development, the $1-billion 1976 Olympic Games and various commercial high-rise projects in Montreal.

The value of Quebec construction projects reached $6 billion in 1975, compared with $5.3 billion in 1974, reported the Construction Association of Montreal and the Province of Quebec.

Economic predictions for 1976 have been muddied by the federal government's price and wage guidelines announced on Thanksgiving Day.

Although ceilings of eight to 10 per cent on wage increases were demanded, many pundits are unsure whether these rules will be enforced.

Had the government not invoked these measures, the 17-per-cent average wage increases which characterized 1975 were expected to recur.

The average wage increases for 1976 will largely be determined by any exceptions the federal government permits.

Thirteen Montreal economists predicted in a survey that despite the controls, prices will increase more than nine per cent in 1976, one per cent above the government goal.

They also expected unemployment will remain at the relatively high rate of about 7.5 per cent.

"Over all, it's not a terribly rosy picture," said Paul King of Informetrica Ltd.

One of the more heated debates concerning Quebec's economic future involves controversial language legislation which promotes the use of French in the business environment.

The government has said companies which do not adopt French as the language of work will not receive government contracts.

Major opponents of the legislation, as it affects business, appear to be corporations based outside of Quebec. However, these are not the companies the province is most actively courting.

Unlike some other provinces, Quebec ardently courts American and other foreign companies, promising them a happy marriage as long as they respect the cultural milieu of Quebec. Such respect implies use of French as the language of work.

For the American firms planning investment in a foreign country, it makes little difference whether the language of work is English, French or Spanish, many corporation executives have said.

Quebec - based companies seem less wary of the legislation than other Canadian companies. The Quebec-based companies have either learned how to live with growth in Quebec nationalism or have adopted policies allowing them to skirt language issues.

Another major monkey-wrench in Quebec's economic future is the financial status of the province's largest city, Montreal. The city is burdened by debts, which will multiply with the $650-million deficit expected from the province.

Although Mayor Jean Drapeau's metropolis enjoys built-up safeguards against the kind of money crisis afflicting New York City, the opposition municipal party says a "dangerous pattern" of financing has evolved just the same.

A prospectus for a recent Montreal debenture issue indicates revenues and expenditures for 1976 will be $644,271,700 compared with $440,000 in 1971. The 1976 debt service, excluding local improvement debentures, was put at $103,971,900, compared with $64,446,427 in 1971.

The city's current per-capita debt—believed to be the highest in Canada—is $743 compared with $825 in 1971.

Dr. Victor Goldbloom, Quebec municipal affairs minister said the government is "concerned with the financial status" of Montreal.

He said "there's always a possibility" the provincial government will impose a form of control on the city similar to the government's recent takeover of building and financing of the main Olympic facilities.

Labor Co-op Aids Community

ANTIGONISH, N.S. (CP) — A group of students at St. Francis Xavier University here is earning financial aiding the community at the same time through a labor co-operative.

The co-op provides inexpensive student labor for odd jobs in business establishments or around the home. From babysitting to snow shovelling, and from typing to window washing, the students pe. almost any work for minimal wages.

Commercial establishments are charged the provincial minimum wage. The rate to home owners is negotiable, ranging from $1.50 to $2 an hour.

The project, headed by two adult education students, will continue until examination time and then will resume in early January if demand is sufficient.

Mail Strike Delayed Parking Tickets

HALIFAX (CP) — The national postal strike is causing Halifax police trouble in collecting payments on parking tickets but the ticket bokders will pay or it in the end.

Sgt John Conn said the ticket department had about $165,000 worth of parking tickets outstanding which is about $37,000 more than usual.

Parking fines were recently raised in the city to $15 for most non-meter offepces from $5.

Sgt. Conn said a drop box has been set up and tickets can be paid during regular office hours but people seem to be avoiding both methods of paying.

When we save energy we fight inflation.

One solution to two problems.

Inflation is a priority problem. The Federal Government has introduced new legislation and appealed for individual restraint.

Energy is another urgent problem. Supplies are dwindling and costs are soaring.

Many of us overlook one important fact: energy conservation fights both dilemmas. Here's how the two problems come together in one solution.

(Reading time: 8 minutes)

On October 13, the Prime Minister spoke to the Canadian people. He said, in part,

"We have come to expect that there is some magic by which we can have cheap and plentiful food, energy, housing and government services, together with an ever-improving standard of living.

"I am asking you to live by the fact that all Canadians must restrain their rising demands upon the nation's wealth, so that Canada as a whole will be able to live within her means. That is the only anti-inflation weapon which offers hope of permanent success."

All of us in the community—individuals, companies and governments—are grappling with inflation. We tend to think of energy as a separate problem. It's not.

When we put energy conservation practices to work—with enthusiasm—we're tackling inflation head on.

1 Energy conservation saves you money.

This year the average Canadian family will spend about $1,000 directly on energy. Money for gasoline, heating fuel and electricity. And prices will undoubtedly go higher because new supplies are high cost.

But you're not helpless. Energy conservation will cut consumption and save you money—or at least help to offset rising prices. You'll have a little more cash to cope with other forms of inflation.

For example, setting the thermostat back 2C° (4F°) will save you $30 to $40 this winter. Better furnace servicing, while it costs a little, can cut as much as $100 from your fuel bill each year.

■ Insulation, weather-stripping and storm doors and windows involve an initial investment but can save 10% to 50% on your annual heating bill. That's probably between $30 and $200 a year.

■ Buying a compact car instead of a gas guzzler can save you $500 a year on gasoline. You'll probably also save on the lower purchase price, plus lower costs of maintenance, repairs and insurance.

■ Frequent tune-ups, slower highway driving, car pools and public transit all help.

■ Other measures: turning out lights, cooking efficiently, saving hot water, buying returnable bottles and avoiding throw-away products. They all save energy and money.

That's fighting inflation!

2 Energy conservation cuts business costs.

One of the reasons for the higher prices of most manufactured products and many services is the spiralling cost of energy. Think of all the times in the past year you've heard: "We've had to raise our prices to cover the higher energy costs.".

For business, energy conservation is an excellent cost-cutting tool. It works to hold down the costs of such basic commodities as cement, steel and paper; such consumer goods as food, furniture and cars; services ranging from taxi fares to health care.

How much can business save?

Many companies have cut 5% to 15% from their energy bills simply by good housekeeping. New equipment and process changes, which require an initial investment, can save a good deal more—30% in some cases.

And of course all these savings should be passed along to the consumer.

That's fighting inflation!

3 Conservation cuts future capital costs.

If we continue to gobble up energy at our present rate of increase we'll need many more pipelines, tar sands plants, electrical generating stations, powerlines, uranium and coal mines, gas and oil wells. The projected capital cost of these projects is at least $110 billion between now and 1985. That's an investment of about $20,000 for each Canadian family.

Present energy prices are rising to help pay for that investment and future prices will be even higher in order to carry and pay back the tremendous debts incurred.

This investment requires a doubling of the proportion of our national wealth which is allocated to energy development—from 3% of Gross National Product to almost 6%.

The key question is, where will the money come from? In a tight capital market it will have to come from money otherwise destined to finance schools, hospitals, business expansion and social programs. They may have to wait.

And what effect will such massive capital demands have on interest rates, foreign ownership, the value of the Canadian dollar and the balance of payments? The answers are worrisome.

How much of this projected capital investment can be eliminated by conservation? If we can lower the annual growth rate in energy consumption from 5.5% to 3.0%, then we can reduce our capital investment by 1/3. That's $7,000 per family. That's fighting inflation!

Where can the savings come from? Some examples: If we cut our annual growth rate of energy consumption by only 1/10 of 1% per year the energy saving in 1990 will be more than the total output of a tar sands plant at a current cost of $2 billion or five nuclear power stations at a current cost of about $5 billion. How could we do it? Simply by turning down all residential and commercial thermostats just 2½C° (5F°).

If we improve car mileage from the current 17.5 mpg average to 28 mpg in 1985, we'll save the equivalent output of two tar sands plants at a cost of at least $4 billion.

Yes, some conservation measures do call for an initial investment, but a modest one when compared with the energy saving. For example, a national program to reinsulate only the most inefficient houses would cost about $300 million —but the saving would amount to 10 million barrels of oil every year. That's ¼ of the output of a tar sands plant.

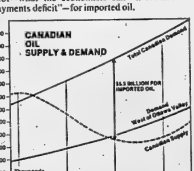
That's fighting inflation!

4 Conservation cuts the costs of imported oil.

Right now, the Atlantic provinces and Quebec use expensive oil imported from the OPEC nations. It costs about $12.50 a barrel and is subsidized by the Federal Government to bring the price down to the $8 per barrel paid by the rest of Canada for western oil.

That $4.50 per barrel is paid for by the tax on oil exported to the United States and by the 10¢ per gallon excise tax on gasoline used for non-business purposes.

But as our production of western oil declines in the years ahead, our exports will be cut back. We'll lose the revenue and tax on exported oil. We'll begin to build up a tremendous national debt—what the economists call "a balance of payments deficit"—for imported oil.



If the growth of demand continues unabated, by 1985 this deficit could be a staggering $5.5 billion per year in today's currency—that's $212 per person. That money is shipped out of the country. It doesn't work for our economy. It doesn't provide jobs or incomes for Canadians.

Here again, conservation can make a world of difference.

By saving oil (and electricity) in the Eastern provinces, we can reduce our need for imported oil. By saving oil in Ontario and the West, we can divert some of our western oil to Quebec (via the new Montreal pipeline) and further cut our need for imported oil.

That's fighting inflation!

5 Conservation cuts "energy costs."

Our growing energy appetite is forcing us to develop more remote and more "complex" sources of energy. Examples: the tar sands, nuclear power, distant hydroelectric sites, Arctic oil and gas.

Of course to find, extract, transport and process these sources of energy takes energy. In fact, we are expending more and more energy to make a unit of useful energy available.

With rising costs for energy inputs, we're spending more and more money for less and less energy.

The proportion of our national energy budget which is consumed by the energy industries has already doubled—from about 6% in 1957 to almost 12% in 1971.

By cutting demand we can lower future energy costs.

Energy conservation can be one solution to two problems.

We can all help.

In a sense we're fortunate. One solution can help solve our dual problems of inflation and energy. All of us—individuals, companies and governments—can play a major part and reap both immediate and future rewards.

Conservation can stretch our energy reserves, cut costs, reduce inflation, improve our environment and our way of life far into the future.

That's a powerful weapon.

Think about it.

If you're not part of the solution, you're part of the problem.

Officials Say Intersection Doesn't Need Lights

A parish priest has registered the latest warning on the need for increased traffic controls at an eastend suburban Belleville intersection.

City council's traffic committee heard a letter from Msgr. J.A. Carley, of St. Joseph's parish, indicating his belief that more precautions are needed to safeguard youngsters at Herchimer and Victoria avenues.

"How many of these children do we have to lose to prove that something must be done to protect them from this dangerous situation?" wrote Msgr. Carley. "I sincerely hope, for the sake of those responsible, that it will not be a matter of too little, too late."

The intersection has been a source of frequent complaints as city councillors who have mentioned it at various committee meetings.

It cross up in committee at least four times a year, commented Ald. George Zegouras, who said he supported Msgr. Carley's remarks.

At the intersection, Victoria is posted as a stop street, with Herchimer a through route.

"Do we have to wait for someone to get hurt?" queried Ald. Zegouras. He also said an area resident claimed it is "almost impossible" to cross Herchimer in rush hour.

But the committee was told that a study by city engineer Joseph Angelo again had shown the intersection does not meet provincial government traffic conditions to justify traffic lights.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie also noted there is a school guard stationed at the crossing. Installation of traffic signals would mean removal of the guard. In such an event the intersection could even be less safe for children.

Mayor Ben Corke said there is no easy solution in the situation but "somewhere along the line" committee members have to "hang our hats" on the traffic formula needed before lights are warranted.

The committee took no action as it voted to receive Msgr. Carley's letter.

Fair Exchange

Seven-year-old Jimmy Ferry decided Monday that sitting in the driver's seat of a fire engine was a fair exchange for a toy donation. Jimmy is one of 35 boys of the 17th Beaver Colony of Eastminster Church who were given a tour of Fire Station No. 1 for their donations to the firefighters' Christmas toy drive.

Sidney St. Sidewalk Issue Again Returned to Council

A resolution calling for a sidewalk along Sidney St. as a safety measure for school children is being returned to city council by its traffic committee.

The committee a month ago recommended council consider the sidewalk in its 1976 budget.

The walk was part of a safety plan in the area round Our Lady of Fatima separate school. It would extend from the recently-installed lights at Graham St., across the intersection of Wilson Ave., then along the north side of Wilson towards Elgin St.

City council returned the recommendation to the committee after Ald. Joe Cox suggested the Wilson intersection — with heavy truck traffic turning into nearby industry — might be a dangerous crossing for children. He suggested the sidewalk go up the south side of Wilson, allowing youngsters to cross further away from the intersection.

But, Ald. Paul Russell told the committee, drivers had a better view of pedestrians at the intersection, and traffic slows rounding the corner. Children should also be taught how to cross at every intersection in the city, he said.

The committee supported his view that the original proposal go back to council.

Information Centre Gets Federal Aid

The federal ministry of consumer and corporate affairs is giving the Quinte Information and Assistance Centre $15,000 to enable the consumer help group to operate in 1976.

In a telegram addressed to centre board chairman Vera Heimbach, Monday, Minister Andre Ouellet commended the centre's "consumer services," saying after reviewing its program, he decided to extend the funding.

The grant is the second from the ministry, following close on the heels of a $12,000 grant received in April this year.

It is also the sixth federal government grant the centre has received, based on its present name and that of the Citizens Bureau, since 1972, when it began its operation in Belleville.

Mrs. Heimbach termed the grant "a vote of confidence in what we're doing."

"I'm pleased at the amount. It certainly makes it easier to operate and work up a budget."

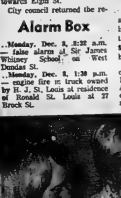
She said the size of grant will allow for a part-time centre operation. This year, when $15,000 was received, "it left us in a deficit position."

The chairman said that the previous grant was intended to last until March, but a recent budget review prompted the board of directors to conclude money was available only till the end of this month.

The minister's telegram didn't come as a surprise, the chairman said. Since the application was filed in August, correspondence and contact with Ottawa indicated the funding request would be received "favorably."

She said she did not know when the group will get the funds promised in the telegram, saying, "but once it comes, it will mean "we can keep right on rolling."

The telegram indicated that either Mr. Ouellet himself or some other ministry official only be in Belleville to open the centre officially under the new funding.



Logo Contest Winners

Ken Graham, an art teacher at Sir James Whitney School, took first place and Kent Munro, a Grade 7 student at Sir Mackenzie Bowell elementary school, took second in the city's centennial committee logo contest. About 75 logos were submitted for consideration. Contest winning logos will not necessarily be those used in centennial promotion.

Report a Surprise

Educators Told Space Needed

Branch No. 17 of the Ontario Department of Travel and Publicity

Increasing enrolment in Hastings County elementary schools has created a shortage of classroom space, a report of the board of education indicated Monday.

Board trustees expressed shocked at the report from Eric Runacres, education director, which recommended the use of a variety of public buildings within the county to absorb the surplus students.

Unlike the provincial average of declining elementary enrolments, Hastings County is on an upward enrolment trend due to natural growth is the Bayside and Stirling areas and Belleville, the report says.

Most trustees were astonished at this trend and asked the administration council to provide more statistics and information to back up the director's recommendation of finding more space.

Mr. Runacres report, presented to the board Monday night for quick action, prompted officials to call a special meeting later this month. The board had planned on cancelling the next meeting in December due to Christmas.

The director himself was not present at the meeting. A board official said he was in Toronto preparing for an education film sponsored by the Ontario Education Communications Authority.

However, the report on behalf of the report, deputy director J.F. Reid set trustees that capital funding for new construction, renovations, additions and new programs appeared to be extremely low this year far below the expectations of the board.

In the past six years spending ceilings have drastically reduced new construction.

In his report, Mr. Runacres urged the board to make an immediate study of all available accommodations in the county. The board accepted this point but flatly rejected his following suggestions.

The report urged the board to immediately re-activate the Avondale school building to develop an arts centre for a group of elementary schools in west Belleville. The cost would be $44,200.

Trustee Ed Paquet, who said he found the report disturbing and completely unacceptable, said the board should not approve this kind of expenditure until it knows definitely what its financial outlook is for the next year.

Mr. Paquet warned that if trends continue the board may be forced to make staff cuts next year as well as reducing educational programs. He said the province may be handing down the toughest budget boards of education have ever seen.

The report also recommended that several closed schools be re-opened to act as satellite facilities for newer schools. The old Fothers school was also on the plan to re-open and make use of these facilities.

Mr. Runacres even went as far as telling trustees that the board may have to rent some homes, churches, warehouses, apartments, shops and other schools to accommodate the projected enrolment.

Chairman of the board Jean Hutchinson, who said the situation is "frightening" asked the administration council to prepare a detailed account of their recommendations for the next meeting.

New Dispatch System May End Staff Hunt

Hastings County Board of Education Monday approved a no-cost modified central dispatch system for supply teachers.

Dale Denyes, the board's manager of staff services, recommended to the board a trial central dispatch system be implemented in the county to solve the long-standing supply teacher problem that has given many headaches to elementary school principals.

Mr. Denyes explained that for several years principals have spent undue time in the morning hunting down supply teachers, some of whom would not accept assignments at certain schools. They argue time was lost each day through confusion and as many as 19 phone calls to obtain one supply teacher.

Mr. Denyes recommended that the board hire a part-time secretary at a cost of $4,000 a year to administer the central dispatch system.

Casting doubt on the program Stirling trustee Don William said the $4,000 was an unnecessary expense. He suggested that a secretary at the Ann St. Education Centre could be available for four hours to operate the system.

He then said that if the system works the board could take a second look at the operation and evaluate whether a part-time secretary should be hired.

Mr. Denyes agreed to the proposal adding schools in the Trenton, Centre Hastings and North Hastings areas would remain on the old systems. Each area apparently has a qualified and reliable pool of supply teachers.

The dispatcher would receive requests from principals at a designated time in the morning and then from a rotating list of names would try to reach a supply teacher.

Tuning In

Eastern Ontario String Quartet violinist Marion Stratton tunes her violin prior to a one and a half hour mini-concert by three quartet members at Glanmore House, Hastings County's museum, Monday. The concert is one in a series of musical and theatrical events planned at the museum this week as part of Christmas festivities.

Overtime Offered To Posties

Belleville postmaster Roy Wainwright said he will follow the postmaster-general's orders to give regular postal workers as much overtime as common sense permits.

It will mean, says the postmaster, a corresponding decrease in hiring of casual workers-certainly it takes a briefly during heavy mail movement.

"We'll have to cut them down," said Mr. Wainwright, who had earlier predicted his office may be forced to follow the postmaster-general's orders to give regular postal workers as much overtime as common sense permits.

"We'll have to cut them down," said Mr. Wainwright, who had earlier predicted his office may be forced to follow the postmaster-general's orders to give regular postal workers as much overtime as common sense permits.

Although the postmaster-general did not put a limit to the overtime by regular workers, Mr. Wainwright said common sense will prevail.

"You're not going to work them till they drop," he said.

Committee Limits Parking

One side of Singleton Dr. — a street used by Unemployment Insurance Commission workers to park their cars — should be banned to parking, city council's traffic committee decided Monday.

The east side of the street — where new homes now are occupied — should be declared a no-parking area, the committee agreed with Police Chief Douglas Crosbie.

Monday, few cars were seen on that side of Singleton. The chief later said UIC employees now mainly park on the west side of the street anyway. But, his recommendation was to make the pattern official.

Sign to Warn Motorists Of Change in Lanes

Motorists heading for Belleville's downtown will soon be alerted to traffic problems on North Front St.

The problem area is immediately south of the Canadian National Railways overpass where North Front's four lanes narrow to two.

The approaches for driver heading downtown should be posted with a cautionary sign, city council's traffic committee decided Monday.

The sign is that people driving south to the city's centre may not be aware of the traffic problem until they break over the brow of the overpass and are confronted by the backup.

The committee agreed that a sign with flashing lights should be considered for the overpass near King George Public School.

Making It Official

Cars of Unemployment Insurance Commission workers line west side of Singleton Drive Monday. Few park on opposite side of the suburban street, said police. But to make it official the city's traffic committee approved a police suggestion that parking be banned on the east side.

Union Leader Says Workers Confused Over Government Policy

BY CLIFF KENYON
Staff Reporter

Trade unions will oppose federal wage and price controls and some labor leaders are going to end up in jail, a union representative said in Belleville Monday.

"They are not convinced and government has said nothing to convince trade unions that prices are going to be controlled the same as wages," said Edward Seymour, education and publicity director for Textile Workers' Union of America.

Mr. Seymour, however told members of Belleville Rotary Club he believes the trade movement will "assist in a positive manner" when they are convinced all sections of the economy will be under the same controls.

Workers, said Mr. Seymour, have seen their purchasing power decrease during the past two years and feel they have been betrayed by government and management.

"The group of people responsible for administering the guidelines...just before they were announced...got a 23 per cent increase," he said.

Mr. Seymour, who works out of the Toronto office, said the guidelines could be more easily accepted by trade unions if they knew what the government is doing and felt government knew what it is doing.

"We are in difficult times — the trade union movement doesn't know what's happening," he said.

"Already the government has gone against its own guidelines," said Mr. Seymour, referring to the government decision that wage increase controls apply to striking Metro Toronto teachers even though their last contract was signed prior to 1974.

"How can we convince our membership to restrain demands when they can read of price increases every day," he said referring to proposed rate increases by Bell Canada and Ontario Hydro.

"The field of collective bargaining is going to be one of more turmoil than in the past," said Mr. Seymour, an affiliate of Canadian Labor Congress.

In essence, he said, unions now are trying to get contract agreements so their wages can catch up with losses during the past three years.

He termed federal government attitude to the recent postal strike as the "most anti-labor campaign" conducted by any Canadian federal or provincial government.

"It seems to me, despite all government efforts, union leadership did have support of members."

Almost half of Canadian Union of Postal Workers opposed acceptance of the contract, said Mr. Seymour. "I question what kind of situation is going to exist in the post office."

Jim's Juveniles Down Bowmanville

BOWMANVILLE (Special) — Allan Pertt and John Merrill shared the Belleville Jim's Pizzeria Juveniles goaltending here Saturday night as the visitors rolled to a 7-4 exhibition win over Bowmanville.

Merrill was brought up to the team after Mark Meehan broke a finger on his catching hand in an off-ice practice session last Thursday, explained coach Keith Kaine.

"Merrill and Pertt gave us a solid goaltending," said Kaine.

Jim's took an early two-goal lead in the first period but Bowmanville battled back to get on even terms. Belleville had a 3-2 lead heading for the second period and broke it wide open with the only three goals of the middle frame. The home side held a 31 edge in the final 20 minutes.

Marty Lowry and Mark Foster each fired a pair of goals for the winners. Chalking in with singles were Gord Male, Tony Bennett and Paul Haynes. Roger Chapman helped himself to four assists.

The Belleville team is at Kingston Township for an 8 p.m. game tonight.

BCI and Moira Split Victories

Belleville Collegiate Institute and Moira Secondary School traded victories in Bay of Quinte Basketball Association midget and junior A Division action Monday night.

Don Wilson and Mike Wright popped 13 apiece in leading the Collegians midget team to a 41-19 win. Bob Dall had six and John Henry four for the Trojans.

Moira juniors stayed face when they engaged in a defensive battle. Neil Zinck's seven was cut to top BCI's Bruce McKay by one point. Zinck's mates with 15 and teammate Colin McKay got 10. John Cross led seven for BCI and Don Smith and Jeff Cass added six each.

Taking Aim On Turkeys

Enjoyment was the key word as members of the Quinte Curling Club took to the ice on the weekend for their annual Turkey Bonspiel.

In keeping with the holiday season, plenty of prizes were presented with Ken Wormald skipping his rink to the top of the field in the two-day event.

Second place went to a rink skipped by Jim Muteti. Curling with Muteti were Nel Moffatt and John and Jackie Hughes.

Next in line was a foursome comprised of Bob Alexander, skip, Ann Alexander, Brian Jones and Jean Jones.

12-year-old Player Dead

KINGSTON (Special) — A 12-year-old Kingston hockey player died in Hotel Dieu Hospital here, Sunday, after collapsing during a game at Wally Elmer Youth Centre.

Michael Rowbotham was a member of the Centre 79 Peewee team.

He was stricken early in the first period of an exhibition game with Kingston Young Nationals.

Dr. Clifford Meyer, coroner, said as far as he could tell, there was no "unnatural physical contact" in the game.

The death was still under investigation, Monday.

McNevin Award To Becker

On Sunday afternoon at the Memorial Arena the Tommy McNevin Memorial Award was presented. The trophy is unique, in that the player receiving it must also show proficiency in music and academic studies.

The award was presented by Gerry O'Connor to Clinton Becker, a goaltending star and for the Bandit Shoes Atom Minor Hockey team.

"This award isn't one which emphasizes A for ability, but E, for effort" stated O'Connor.

At present, Becker is playing goal for the CHRIA Towers Food City Major Atom team.

"This award is very special since the youngster has to excell in three categories — academics, music and sports to win it" stated Cliff Belch of the Recreation Centre.

Presenting the trophy were O'Connor and Peter McKevin.

Bob's Sports Winner But Can't Widen Lead

Bob's Sports extended its unbeaten streak to six games with a 5-3 win over Bel-Con Engineering Monday night, but it did nothing to improve the team's breathing room at the top of the Gas House Hockey League heap. While Bob's was running its streak, so were the Yardmen.The BYBF crew dumped Bi-Temp Airconditioning 7-2. In the third GHHL contest Monday, Constellation doubled up on Murray's Food Market 8-4.

The victory gave Bob's eight wins and a tie for the first half of the Gas House season. Their 17 points however is just one more than the Yardmen and while both have completed 10 games, they have to look out for Chuckwagon Foods which stands in third place with a game in hand.

The shutout was the fifth of the season for Vern Whalen and left his goals against average at a round 1.00 in 10 starts.

Russ Harrington topped Bob's firepower with two goals and Dumos Richardson. Bob Mulvihill and Robb Harrington each collected singles. Bob Wludyka drew three helpers.

The Yardmen's win was their fifth straight, Ron Richardson led the way with three goals and Dan Lupenette got two. Rob Brown, Pat Mullins and Doug Thompson scored once apiece.

Bi - Temp found themselves shortstaffed and alternate goalie Steve Campbell was forced to take the role of an attacker. Despite playing between the pipes all season, Campbell scored once and drew an assist on Steve Dextator's marker.

Ron Mitchell was a one man bombardment leading Constellation to their victory. The hitchhiker forward pumped in five goals and collected two assists. Singles went to Dave Murray, Eric Dupuste and Gord Vesterfelt. George Johnson was credited with three helpers.

Ken Forsythe, Warren Rushlow, Joe Cordeiro and John Royal replied for Murray's.

Islanders' Rookie Setting Hot Pace

MONTREAL (CP) — Bryan Lee Anges Kings. Trottier, the sensational rookie centre with New York Islanders, is the hottest rookie point-scorer in the National Hockey League since at least 1967-68.

Red Wings. Trottier is far ahead of Dionne's pace of that season when the centre had five goals and 13 assists after 20 games.

If Trottier were to maintain his current point-scoring pace for the remainder of the season, he could end up with 105 points.

He is half way to equalling team-mate Jude Drouin's rookie assist record of 52 while he was with Minnesota North Stars.

Hartland Monahan of Washington Capitals is the second best rookie scorer with eight goals and 16 assists for 24 points, followed by Dennis Maruk of California Golden Seals, who has nine goals and 13 assists for 21 points. Four of Maruk's goals have come with the Seals shorthanded.

Guy Lafleur of Montreal Canadiens holds the over-all points lead with 46 on 18 goals and 28 assists. Peter Mahovlich of the Canadiens is next with 37 goals and 27 assists for 64 points while Bobby Clarke of Philadelphia Flyers follows with 15 goals and 36 assists for 51 points.

Montreal's Ken Dryden has the best personal goals-against average with a 1.85 mark for 1,200 minutes played. Dryden also logs the NHL with four shutouts and he and Michel Larocque have combined to give Montreal the league's best team goals-against average—2.17.

Dave Schultz leads the penalty parade with 121 minutes.

Teams Favor Merger

TORONTO (CP) — Several teams in the National Hockey League are pressing again for merger between their league and the World Hockey Association, the executive director of the NHL Players' Association (NHLPA) said Monday.

Alan Eagleson said such a merger could not take place without the consent of his association.

"Although many clubs have contacted me in this regard I am unable to discuss the topic due to the nature of the five-year agreement," he said.

The agreement between the league and players states that in the event of a merger, the players will be entitled to terminate the agreement with respect to certain provisions in the standard player contract.

In the event of a merger, the players would ask that compensation and option clauses be removed from the standard player contract.

NHL president Clarence Campbell said in Montreal he couldn't foresee a merger taking place in light of his league's agreement with the players.

Sources say the NHL teams pressing for a merger are Philadelphia Flyers, St. Louis Blues, Pittsburgh Penguins and New York Rangers.

Mariners' Star On the Move

TORONTO (CP) — After a slow start, Andre Lacroix of San Diego Mariners is approaching the leaders in the World Hockey Association scoring race.

Lacroix, who won the league scoring championship last season as well a six 1972-73, has collected 23 points in his last 16 games and stands 11th in the ball scoring race with 22 points.

Lacroix holds the record for most points in the WHA with 282. At the start of the 1975-76 season, the San Diego centre had 103 goals and 206 assists.

He achieved that total with four different teams—the now-defunct Philadelphia, New York and New Jersey franchises, and San Diego.

Statistics released by the league Monday show Marc Tardif of Quebec Nordiques in the lead for this year's scoring championship with 44 points on 20 goals and 24 assists.

Team-mate Chris Bordeleau of Nordiques with 42 points and Bobby Hull and Ulf Nilsson of Winnipeg Jets are tied for third with 42 points.

Winnipeg's Anders Hedberg follows with 37 points, one more than New Quebec players, Real Jean Houle and Serge Bernier.

Hedberg, Hull and Nilsson play on the same line.

Edmonton Oilers' Wayne Jets continues to lead the league's goaltenders, posting a 2.16 goals-against average and four shutouts. Quebec's Christer Abrahamsson of New England Whalers follows with a 2.37 mark, although he has failed to register a shutout and has won only 12 of 15 games he has appeared in.

Howe Suspended For Two Games

TORONTO (CP) — Gordie Howe doesn't hold a grudge.

On Friday night, the president of Houston Aeros was upset with referee Ron Asselstine he hustled and elbowed his way into the first suspension of a 29-year playing career.

By Monday evening, he was calling Asselstine "the best ref-eree in either league" and saying he holds no animosity toward him.

Earlier in the day, chief executive officer Ben Hatskin and Bud Poile, vice-president in charge of hockey operations, announced the suspension at games and added an $850 fine to the automatic $150 that went with the game misconduct handed Howe by Asselstine.

Goalie Ron Grahame, who also drew a game misconduct in Friday's game, had his suspension lifted and his fine left at the automatic $150.

Both Howe and Grahame were handed indefinite suspensions by the league Saturday and missed that game with Phoenix Roadrunners. Hatskin's ruling means they will miss tonight's game with Cincinnati Stingers before returning to action.

Asselstine was given time off to decide on his future. On Friday night, he said after the game he was waiting because of his run-in with Howe.

"I still think he can handle a game," said Howe of Asselstine in a telephone interview from Houston. "I may be the one of those nightmares in Phoenix the night before and I think the thing was weighing on him.

"These poor guys are worked too hard anyway. I think they should be loaned, too, just like some overworked hockey players."

When the enraged Houston crowd booed Howe's ejection he referee left the game and only returned 15 minutes later after being urged by Houston coach Bill Dineen and Winnipeg coach Bobby Kromm.

After the game, Asselstine said: "I'm finished. When the man who is supposed to be the craftiest who has ever played the game drives me in the pits, it's obvious I'm not the man for the job."

Poile said he considers Asselstine a good official but that he acted unwisely by leaving the ice after the Howe incident.

"I can't condone his leaving the ice, but you have to consider there was a lot of pressure," he said. "I guess they were everything except the meats at him. To his credit, he came back and finished the game without any problem."

Howe, 47, went after Asselstine when he was handed a high-sticking penalty in the second period. He first argued the penalty, then bumped Asselstine into the boards.

"I tried to give his attention to the telescreen which showed the Winnipeg goal holding my stick," he said. "When he refused to look at it, that's when I elbowed him in the ribs."

The $1,000 fine isn't likely to come out of Howe's pocket.

"Actually, as president, I'm in a good position," he said. "I can give myself a bonus to make up for the fine."

How said he has no intention of fining himself for drawing a two-game suspension from the World Hockey Association. Earlier in the day, there were reports Howe may fine himself for his pay, $1,500 a game, for the games he will miss for abusing the referee.

OHA RELEASED

BOSTON (AP) — Bobby Orr, Boston Bruins' star defenceman, was released from hospital Monday after undergoing surgery for an injured knee. A spokesman for the National Hockey League club said Orr was expected to rejoin the team Feb. 1.

Defence Sharp As Oakland Tames Broncos

OAKLAND (AP) — Oakland Raiders defence rose to the occasion by knocking down Denver quarterbacks John Hufnagel and Steve Ramsey all night.

"Ten sacks!" said rookie Oakland safety Charles Phillips, who intercepted three passes as the Raiders 17-10 win over the Broncos. "That's what makes my job easy—when the line is putting pressure on the quarterbacks."

Otis Sistrunk, from his defensive tackle position, led the charge on the Denver passers. He took part in five of the sacks which took some heat off the Oakland offence and helped the playoff-bound Raiders win their seventh successive National Football League game.

"Our defence always rises to the occasion," Phillips added. "But our offence is so potent that it was just a matter of time until we scored."

The time seemed interminable to Oakland fans, who did some booing during the 28-minute wait.

The normally explosive offence run by quarterback Ken Stabler seemed to be working with a silencer. Denver was ahead 7-6 on Jim Turner's 18-yard field goal which followed an Oakland fumble in the first quarter.

"They took almost everything away from us," admitted Stabler, who completed just two of his first nine passes and suffered two interceptions. Oakland's offensive efforts had accounted for only 30 yards by late in the second quarter.

But Horace Jones then sacked Hufnagel, making his first NFL start, at the Denver 32-yard line and the Raiders drove 44 yards after taking a short punt.

Alberta's Ron Hayter Says CFAB in Trouble

EDMONTON (CP) — An Alberta Baseball Association official said Saturday the Canadian Federation of Amateur Baseball (CFA) is threatening with extinction if provincial defections result from the federation's Good lack of aggressive national programs.

Ron Hayter said the CFAB is "shirking its responsibilities by not aggressively promoting national championships in all age classes."

Hayter was canvassing on a conference made last week by Bill Donovan of Saint John, N.B., CFA vice-president, that Hayter was dreaming if he thought Canada could afford age-class tournaments.

"Donovan says my proposal for national age-class competitions is impossible. That's a coach of hogwash," Hayter said in a statement.

Donovan said individual towns cannot afford trips to national competitions, nor can shoot half the provinces, it costs $4,000 to send a team from St. John's Nfld., to British Columbia, he said.

Hayter agreed costs can be high, but the benefits of the experience are worth the price and "the CFA should be striving to find ways of easing the financial burden on teams competing in national championships rather than curtailing or abandoning this vital segment of national programming in amateur baseball."

Last Pass for Dawson?

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Len Dawson's long, distinguished career may have ended in the shadow of his own goalposts, in pain and frustration.

If so, it would seem an unsung way for the American Football League's all-time leading passer to go out.

The 40-year-old Dawson has maintained that this, his 19th season as a professional quarterback, may be his last. But he insists he still has not made a decision and will not do so for several weeks.

In any event, he will play no more this year. Midway in the fourth quarter of Sunday's game between the San Diego Chargers and Kansas City Chiefs, Dawson fell beneath a Charger pass rush and broke his right thumb.

The Chiefs went on to lose to lowly San Diego, 28-20, dropping their record to 5-7. It was San Diego's first win of the season.

An obviously disappointed Dawson said later: "It sure wasn't a very glamorous finish if this is the way I went out."

From 1962—Dawson's rookie year at Pittsburgh—through his last play Sunday? he passed for [illegible] yards and 239 touchdowns.

[illegible] figures represent American Conference records. On the all-time National Football League quarterback list, Dawson ranks fourth behind Johnny Unitas, Fran Tarkenton and Sonny Jurgensen.

Dawson languished for three seasons at Pittsburgh and two at Cleveland before switching leagues in 1963 when Hank Stram brought him to the struggling Dallas Texans in the Young American Football League.

Dawson promply led them to the AFL championship over Houston Oilers in pro football's second integrt game.

The next year, owner Lamar Hunt moved the Texans to Kansas City and they became the Chiefs.

Cards Make Room for Hector Cruz

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — St. Louis Cardinals have turned third base over to hard-hitting minor leaguer Hector Cruz by sending Ken Reitz to San Francisco Giants for left-handed pitcher Pete Falcone.

"He (Cruz) has been the best ballplayer in the minor leagues the past two years," Cardinal manager Red Schoendienst said Monday in announcing the trade at baseball's winter meetings.

"The Giants have needed a third baseman for a number of years and Reitz is a good ballplayer," Schoendienst added.

Cruz, who teamed with his brothers, Tommy and Jose, in the St. Louis outfield when called up late in the 1973 season, was named the Most Valuable Player in the American Association last season.

He clubbed Class AAA pitching for 29 home runs, 116 runs batted-in and a .303 average.

The trade is subject to approval by the National League because of the impending sale of the Giants.

Reitz, 24, gives the Giants the league's Gold Glove winner of 1975. He hit .269 with five home runs and 43 runs batted in last season after a .255 rookie year in 1973 and a .271 campaign in 1974.

Falcone, 22, who was 13-11 with an earned-run average of 4.17 as a rookie in 1975, joins right-handers Lynn McGlothen, Bob Forsch, John Denny and Harry Rasmussen as starting candidates along with southpaw John Curtis.

A draft session earlier Monday found only five clubs willing to part with $75,000 to grab minor league talent.

Detroit Tigers, drafting first, took 22-year-old right-handed pitcher Bruce Taylor from the Cincinnati Reds' Indianapolis farm club of the American Association.

Others picked were right-handed pitcher Gilbert Rondon by Houston Astros, left-handed pitcher Luis Quintana by Atlanta Braves, outfielder-first baseman Ed Kurpiel by California Angels and first baseman-outfielder-designated hitter Tom Robson by New York Yankees.

Meanwhile, organized baseball's official rules committee made the designated hitter rule an official playing rule Monday, optional for use by all major and minor leagues.

The actin does not affect a pending American League proposal to use the designated hitter in World Series, all-star and exhibition games at all parks.

The baseball meetings resume today.

DH Rule Optional

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — Organized baseball's official rules committee decided Monday that the designated hitter rule would be optional to all teamsr—both major and minor.

The action put the DH rule into the official playing rules for the first time. The American League has used the DH rule for the last two seasons on an experimental basis and plans to continue using it.

The action does not affect the AL proposal that the DH be used in the World Series, all-star games and exhibitions at American League parks. That proposal will be voted on later this week.

The brand new 1976 Honda Civic looks increasingly familiar.

We didn't invent the idea of not changing models completely every year. All we did was invent the Honda Civic.

Which proved so sound an idea that thousands of Honda Civics now catch your eye on Canadian roads. In fact, it's Canada's fastest growing import car.

For 1976, we've made a handful of changes to further improve what is already a beautifully efficient machine.

Never fear. Honda Civic will still give you top mileage per increasingly expensive gallon of gas. Honda Civic will still be the lowest priced Japanese import.

And Honda Civic still comes complete with state-of-the-art performance features. Such as rack and pinion steering, MacPherson strut suspension independent on all four wheels, disc brakes up front, and front wheel drive.

The few changes for 1976 are mostly interior. Your nearby Honda Civic dealer will be happy to review them with you in detail.

As long as you're there, take a test drive. And find out how good it feels to drive a Honda Civic instead of looking at one.

Stingers Get Back on Track

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Stingers Lave skated in and out of danger for most of their short existence in the World Hockey Association.

The Stingers got off to a 9-1 start in their first season, then, as coach Terry Slater describes it, "all of a sudden we got bombed."

"Injuries have been the big thing," said Slater. The fallout coincided with the loss of veteran goalie Sergio Aubry, who suffered a groin pull.

"When Aubry got hurt, we had to rely on the kids," said Slater.

One of these youngsters has helped the Stingers break out of their slump.

"It's the goaltending," said Slater, praising rookie John Kiely, a product of the University of Vermont. "Everyone is back playing his position because they know they can trust the goaltending now. They're not all trying to play goal."

After suffering through eight successive defeats, the Stingers won their second in a row Sunday night, and amazingly found themselves on top in the WHA's East Division.

"We were fortunate that the other teams in the division were struggling too," said Slater, who is undergoing anything but an easy year with the Stingers in first-year team.

The front office, in the midst of the losing streak decided a shakeup was in order. Norm LaPointe, a 20-year-old rookie goalie, was returned to the minor leagues, Gary Veneruzzo was traded to Phoenix for Ron Serafini and Kiely and Rich Coutu, another young goalie, were brought up.

"We could go with older pros, but we're building for the future here," Slater said. "The big thing is if we can keep three goalies together we'll be alright."

Unhappy In Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — Howard Darwin says he and Earl Montagano, owners of the Ottawa 67s, will sell the franchise or move the team if attendance doesn't get better.

"You just wouldn't be a businessman if you didn't move the team or sell it if things don't improve a lot," Darwin said Sunday night after an OHA Major Junior A hockey game which the London Knights won 3-1.

Only 1,904 spectators showed up for the game at the 9,355-seat Civic Centre and the owners could only give away 135 free tickets and hockey packs slated for the first 1,000 children who came accompanied by an adult.

Darwin said tickets to Wednesday night's game against the Moscow Selects are selling slowly—1,300 so far.

To add injury to insult, Mike Hodgins, who broke his nose again, and Tim Higgins, who aggravated a nagging hamstring, will be off the rink with Jim Roberts and Warren Holmes Wednesday night. Before Sunday's game, Roberts suffered a groin injury and Holmes, an injured knee.

Lancers Hang On For Win

LINDSAY, Ont. (CP) — Lindsay Lancers scored four goals in the first period and held on to defeat Cambridge Hornets 4-3 Monday in the only Ontario Hockey Association Senior A game.

The Lancers got goals from playing-coach Bob Rivard, Tom Lee, Bob Taylor and Wayne Hamilton.

John Rutherford scored twice for Cambridge and Doug Schoenfeld got the other goal before 300 spectators.

Lindsay held a 4-2 margin after the first period and took a 4-3 lead into a scoreless third period.

Lindsay goaltender Jackson Lum stole 38 shots, compared with 35 for Cambridge's Gerry Gray. Lindsay received eight of the 14 penalties.

Play resumes Thursday with Napanee at Whitby.

DON'T BE DISAPPOINTED BELLEVILLE

After midnight, December 31, New Car Buyers in Ontario will have to spend hundreds of dollars more for most models.

Under existing legislation Ontario new car buyers must complete their deal prior to January 1, 1976, to be eligible for the provincial government 5% Sales Tax rebate on most new models. At that time as well, the currently reduced provincial sales tax will revert to 7%.

AS OF JANUARY 1, 1976 NEW CAR BUYERS WILL BE OUT OF POCKET ANOTHER 7%

As they say, "All good things must come to an end", and the countdown has already started all across Ontario to end the Provincial Government's 5% sales tax Rebate on most new cars. As well, the current 5% sales tax is due to revert to 7%. The deadline is midnight, December 31.

After that, new cars are going to cost Ontario consumers everywhere a lot more, hundreds of dollars more.

There's still time for you to move up to a new model at a real saving. Now is the time for wise buyers to take action. Whether you're thinking domestic or import, full-size right through to Subcompact, don't delay your buying decision, visit these reputable district dealers this week and compare. Every model in town is competitively priced. Special deferred terms can be arranged and remember, your trade-in is probably worth much more than you think! Make this test drive week . . . do it now!

BLAKELY — Bill and Bonnie Blakely (nee Robb) wish to thank God for the safe arrival of their daughter Joshua, on November 7, 1975. Proud grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Ken Robb, Belleville and Mr. and Mrs. Bill Blakely, Miami. Thanks to Drs. Allen, Tanton, Hodgson and the 2nd floor.

In Memoriam

STANSFIELD, Marjorie (Carr) — In loving memory of a dear mother and grandmother who passed away December 9, 1973.

Sweet memories smile to gone forever, Love for her we can never touch, Still we have to make memories, Of the one we loved so much.

Her memory is our keepsake, With which we will never part, God has his own beautiful flowers, We have her in our heart.

— Lovingly remembered by the family of Dr.

MALVOY — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, James Malvoy, who passed away December 9th, 1974.

Just looked around His garden, And found an empty place, Where he looked upon this earth, And saw your smiling face.

He put His arms around you, And whispered "Come to me", God's garden needed flowers, For He only takes the best.

If tears our eyes could bring you, But you did not go alone, For part of each of us went with you, The day you left us for heaven.

— Ever loved by wife Corrinne and son Les.

MARACLE — In loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather who passed away December 9, 1971.

Our family circle has been broken, A link gone from our chain, A voice we loved is stilled, A place is empty, A heart we loved is at rest.

Sorrow may we hope to meet you, Some day in the land of the blest, We shall meet in a better land, Where we shall part no more.

— Sadly remembered by daughter Bernice.

Bridge Stronger Than First Thought

TRENTON — A ministry of transport and communications test of the Dundas Street Bridge has shown that the structure is basically more sound than a previous report filed by a municipal consultant indicates, council was informed Monday.

Council was informed the current station limit could be raised to 15-tons and then lifted entirely if stop-gap repairs recommended in the earlier study are completed.

Arie Hoorweg, commissioner of public works, told the group the repairs would cost about $75,000 and could conceivably be completed by spring.

"It is not a major job to complete the repairs," said the commissioner. "If the repairs are made the bridge can last for as long as 100 years."

Mr. Hoorweg told the council engineering consultants on the bridge by eliminating left-hand turns on and off of Dundas at Pivot Street. The topic of the constant bottleneck at the bridge was introduced by council members and Mr. Hoorweg was asked to explore ways of alleviating the problem.

Another Artist Withdraws Work

Another Belleville artist has withdrawn their work from the International Belleville Biennial Art Show at Corby Public Library.

Lindsey Hallam said today she withdrew her work-three water color paintings and two children's paintings, one worth $1,200 — because the work was not on display in either the Upper or Lower gallery.

"I took my stuff out of the show because I have some personal dignity," she said.

She added the paintings were found in the closet of the show that was organized by Dave Brockelsby.

Oddities in the News

Shark Bites Boat

SYDNEY, Australia, (Reuter)—A couple returned from a weekend fishing trip with what they said was a record-breaking shark catch and a tale of man's tack on their 25-foot boat by another shark.

Pam Hadspeth told reporters she and Farrell were fishing off Sydney's northern beaches during the weekend when a 14-foot white pointer shark stuck its head over the stern.

"We were terrified," she said. "It tried to take a bunk out of the back of the boat, like in the film Jaws."

She said that when Farrell tried to push it away with a pole, the enraged shark put its snout under the stern and tried to toss the boat into the air.

Later, Farrell fought the shark with a rod, but it snapped the line and swam off, she said.

The pair later landed a Mako shark weighing 775 pounds which they said bettered the old world record of 680 pounds.

BOISE, Idaho (AP)—New York City is about $300 richer. That's how much Shirley Greer Shark collected in a garage sale to help the city deal with its financial woes.

"The main impact has been on public opinion to the point they realize New York is our neighbor and they want to help," she said after the sale Saturday.

Mrs. Clark began her campaign to help New York several months ago by sending $10 to the mayor's fund. So then came up with the garage sale idea.

"I first started because I was angry for people putting New York down," she said. "I'm interested in helping New Yorkers caught in the middle-people who are getting it from both sides. The rich people don't need help and neither do the robbers."

Sign Language Lesson

Sir James Whitney assistant superintendent Bill Williams gives industrial sociology student Art Jones a crash course in sign language — commonly used by the deaf. Looking on is Fred Abrams, president of the Bay of Quinte Chapter of the Society of Industrial accountants. Mr. Williams gave a presentation of his school to the association meeting Monday.

Loyalist College Board Loses Two Key Directors

Loyalist College Board of Governors will lose two of its most experienced members Dec. 31 in the persons of Wilf Wilkinson of Trenton and Reg Loader of Belleville who have served the past 7½ years.

Both Mr. Wilkinson, a Trenton appointee, and Mr. Loader, a provincial government appointee, are retiring after serving during what they chairman. Previously he served as chairman of the board's finance committee for five years and during two of those years, he doubled as board vice-chairman.

During an interview following this week's board meeting — his last regular session as member Mr. Wilkinson said his major efforts were to help place the college on a sound administrative footing both financially and in terms of operation.

"I had the opportunity of being part of the board's task force which visited other colleges in 1969 to see how they were run," he related.

Mr. Wilkinson said he realized personal satisfaction at the end of each college year when signing diplomas "and meeting somebody's benefitting from the time that is being put in. That's what it's really all about."

He said one of his biggest thrills was "presiding over the first convocation in our own college building in 1974."

Mr. Loader said his biggest thrill was being elected chairman of the board's management committee for five years — an ironic fact in view of his extensive involvement in the labor movement in the Quinte area.

Recognized as being largely instrumental in developing the college's manpower retraining division, he said he was keenly interested in the Loyalist extension program and was chairman of a committee which named the college buildings.

"Although I feel I'm leaving something, I feel we are moving into a new phase at the college," he commented. "It's about time for new faces."

The departure of the two veterans leaves Rev. H.J. Maloney of Bancroft as the only active board member from the college's formative years.

Father Maloney, who also served on the former joint Sir Sanford Fleming — Loyalist board years ago before Loyalist became a separate entity, told the board Thursday he will likely retire at the end of 1976.

Deaf Can Still Contribute To Hearing World: Educator

Deafness is an educational handicap that can be overcome, says Bill Williams, assistant superintendent of Belleville's Sir James Whitney School.

Mr. Williams made the comment in the context that deaf people are not necessarily intellectually handicapped and often become valuable assets to the community in the labor force.

He made the comments Monday while speaking at a meeting of the Bay of Quinte chapter of the Society of Industrial Accountants.

Underlining his point, he told the meeting about of three deaf students who last year attended a special teaching seminar which eventually led to one student becoming a full time teacher at the Belleville school.

Following the meeting he remarked the one successful student had, several years before, been a graduate of Sir James Whitney.

This year he said three more deaf people are in the special teaching program and all three have teaching positions waiting for them at schools for the deaf in Milton and London.

While none of the people have Ontario teaching certificates, they all have an intrinsic knowledge of deafness," he said.

"Their knowledge of deafness — having gone through the system themselves — dictates the need for an Ontario teaching certificate," said Mr. Williams.

All of the teachers have completed a five-year arts course in Washington's Gallaudet College near the only post secondary school for the deaf of its kind in the world, he said.

These people teaching is a new horizon — a new barrier that's been overcome," he said. "Having completed their education they have to be very able," said Mr. Williams commenting on their qualifications as teachers.

In capsule version, Mr. Williams gave association members and their wives a slide show tour of the school which employs 381 staff members in the care and teaching of 378 students.

The student to teacher ratio is five to one, which Mr. Williams says is "near perfect."

Sir James Whitney teaches children and young people ranging in ages from five to 20 in language, arts and vocational courses.

Detour Details Released

Detours around a major city traffic link are expected to be in effect next week.

Through traffic will be directed off East Dundas St. — onto Bridge St. when work begins on the first phase of the Dundas reconstruction scheme.

Local traffic will not be affected, city engineer Joe Angelo told city council's traffic committee Monday.

Nonetheless, some committee members reacted with surprise to the announcement.

Mayor Ben Croke noted the detours would be effective about 19 days before Christmas.

Westbound through traffic will turn off at Herchimer, travel Bridge St. and return to Dundas by Coleman St. Eastbound through traffic will follow Pinnacle to Bridge and back onto Dundas by MacDonald Ave.

Dylan Plays For Convicts

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Bob Dylan sang "He could have been champion of the world" and Muhammad Ali seemed to agree.

But the subject of the song, Rubin (Hurricane) Carter heard it all the previous night in prison, where he is serving a life term for a triple murder nine years ago that he says he did not commit.

Dylan and the other assorted entertainers of The Rolling Thunder Review sang for Carter and the 200 other prisoners in the jail Sunday.

Tremors Can Be Family Pattern

By G.C. THORTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband has had a tremor in his right hand for many years, caused, he believes, by working long hours under pressure. Recently it seems to be appearing in his left hand, too.

He is 75 years of age, is excellent health, has never had a serious or even near-serious illness.

We would appreciate any suggestions you might make.—Mrs. C.H.S.

There are several possible causes of tremor, so I cannot comment in any detail on your husband's symptoms specifically, only offer a few suggestions.

Some tremor appears to run in families. Diseases affecting the central nervous system can cause involuntary tremor. In elderly persons, an overactive thyroid gland or faulty circulation in the brain due to arteriosclerosis can be involved.

The fact that your husband's tremor has coincided with, or even appeared in the other hand, strongly suggests the possibility of psychogenic disease. This is often the pattern of development. In this instance, the onset can be insidious, progressing slowly and gradually over the years.

Your husband should be checked for this despite his appearance of general good health. Your personal physician or a neurologist would be able to diagnose the condition rather easily. Drugs sometimes used in Parkinsonism with the newer drugs can do much to arrest the disorder.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I began having soreness and swelling around my fingernails a year ago. They have become those around the sides and have started breaking off. A creamy discharge follows after the soreness and redness.

I soak them in warm salt water, which usually helps for the soreness. But the condition returns in a day or two. The creamy discharge is what bothers me. Can you comment?—Mrs. M.W.

The creamy discharge is the most common symptom you mention. This suggests an infection that could be caused by the staphylococcus germ. Sometimes a cut on the finger or a hangnail is often painted around the cuticles will help. If severe cases removal of the nail is necessary if the infection lies deep in the bed.

You should really see a dermatologist. Something more sophisticated than your salt bath is obviously needed.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What happens to matter caught in the pouches in the intestines as it twirt.

diverticulosis? I'm thinking of a bit of broken tooth swallowed. Also, I'm thinking of small seeds. Please relieve my anxiety.—Mrs. D. S.W.

The fragment of tooth undoubtedly did right past the diverticulum and is long gone. Most of these small cavities off such bits of material. In the rare event of something becoming trapped, there would be irritation (known as diverticulitis inflammation). This would cause pain.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I take quinine capsules nightly for leg cramps. Could this cause a loss of hair? My hair seems to be thinning rapidly in the point where I am nearly bald.—Mrs. D.B.

I have never heard of quinine causing this, and I doubt it would.

Older women can lose hair rapidly for no reason other than the loss of follicle stability. A hormone deficiency (thyroid or estrogen) can be involved. I suggest you be checked for this. The problem would be corrected with appropriate supplements.

Bounsall Attacks New Labor Bill

TORONTO (CP) — Employers would not be required to bargain in good faith under a private-members bill to amend the Labor Relations Act, The Bounsall (NDP—Windsor - Sandwich) said Monday.

Mr. Bounsall was commenting in the legislature during debate of the bill introduced by Liberal Leader Lightbody which would allow the labor minister to order a 60-day, cooling-off period when a strike or lockout of entire industries endangers the provincial health, safety or welfare.

Collective agreements was reached during the cooling-off period, then employees would be allowed to continue the strike.

Mr. Bounsall said such legislation would only encourage employers hit back and wait for the minister to order workers back to work.

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

The forcing two bid with the least two notrump response was invented by Theodore Lightner. Waldemar von Zedtwitz and Oswald Jacoby helped him perfect it, a hand that led us to that conclusion.

Jacoby, who sat South, opened one spade. He hoped that he would get a second chance and he did when the unfortunate East player reopened with two clubs. Young Jacoby simply jumped to seven hearts.

The old was spectacular and successful, but it succeeded because North held four hearts and two spades. North actually held the heart queen, but all he needed was four hearts.

Experts used it for about 30 years and then started to get away from it because of two weaknesses. The first was that you used four bids to cover the two hands that demanded opening force. The second, that the negative two notrump response tended to describe the wrong hand declarer at notrump.

In the next article we will show how the experts have found ways to handle forcing opening bids in better manner.

Ask the Jacobys

A Nebraska reader wants to know if many experts use a one club opening as a forcing bid.

The answer to this question is that a very small number do. Probably about 50 of the top thousand bid masters, if you want to use that as your criterion.

Ottawa Will Accept Province's Terms

OTTAWA (CP) — Faced with reluctance by provinces to commit themselves to the full length of the federal anti-inflation program, Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said Monday that Ottawa is prepared to take provincial participation for an 18-month term, implying a compromise with Leader Robert Stanfield in the Commons. Mr. Macdonald said he would prefer the provinces sign up for the full three-year length of the program, but a shorter commitment was better than none at all.

The provinces would be able to sign formal agreements to limit their wage guides to apply in provincial jurisdictions for a shorter period such as 18 months, he said in anticipation" their participation would be reviewed and ex-tended at the end of that time, he said.

All provinces have expressed support for the program but have withheld formal agreement pending the new legislation setting out the details.

Provinces most affected, Ontario and Alberta, said at a federal-provincial finance ministers meeting last month that they would be unable to initially commit themselves for more than a one-year term.

The selective wage and price controls were imposed Oct. 14 and are to run 3½ years to Dec. 31, 1978.

The Conservatives tried unsuccessfully to limit the length of the program to 18 months. The government did amend the bill to provide for a parliamentary review of the program after that period.

MacBeth Will Amend Store Hour Laws

TORONTO (CP) — Solicitor-General John MacBeth indicated Monday he is willing to amend law enforcement's proposed Sunday retail legislation to exempt more small businesses and certain religious groups.

In amendments proposed before the select committee studying the bill, Mr. MacBeth suggested that persons be exempted considering Saturday a holy day may be exempt from the law if they close Saturday.

His amendment would exempt small operations under 2,000 square feet in floor space and employing three or fewer persons if the owner acts as a full-time clerk.

The Jewish sabbath traditionally begins at sundown Friday.

Other proposed amendments would exempt stores selling arts and handicrafts.

As drafted, exemptions were provided for service stations, antique stores, nursery stores and flower shops and fresh fruit stands in the summer months only.

The minister's amendments would allow exempted stores to sell related goods. For instance, a gas station would be allowed to sell soap kitpops, while a fruit stand could sell bread, milk or maple syrup.

The amendments also would allow restaurants, real estate offices, travel and boat and motor car-rental agencies to remain open Sunday.

Mr. MacBeth suggested a possible exemption to allow pharmacies to open on Sundays if they close at 6 p.m. and have other employees in the store besides pharmacist who is working. He said this would ensure that the store would be open only to dispense drugs.

David Warner (NDP—Scarborough-Ellesmere) said the bill should be used to put an end to the practice of malls stores which "drive the little guy out of business." He said such stores should be forced to close on Sunday unless they provide better working conditions for their store managers.

Vernon Singer (Liberal-Niagara) said such changes should be made through legislation governing working hours and minimum wages.

Committee study continues.

Backroom Masterminds Set Election Moods

VANCOUVER (CP) — With the British Columbia election only two days away, the factions have taken on the roles that are masterminding the final thrust of a vibrant election campaign.

Backroom strategists are responsible for the inflexible premiers of the Social Credit campaign, the organized disorder of the New Democratic Party's bid for re-election and the budget-conscious, seat-of-the-pants approach by Liberals and Progressive Conservatives.

Action central in Tory leader Scott Wallace's Vancouver Island home riding of Oak Bay is a converted boy scout hall.

At a final meeting Sunday to fire up the workers—about 250 showed—the furnace was cut off. When they decided to warm up with a cup of tea, the fuses blew.

Ottawa Won't Change Pornography Laws

OTTAWA (CP) — Solicitor-General Warren Allmand said Monday that the government hasn't considered changing laws dealing with pornography.

The question was raised by James McGrath (PC—St. John's East) who referred to a recommendation of an Ontario coroner's jury last week calling for a ban on pornographic material in Ontario.

Mr. Allmand said the RCMP is responsible for policing the importation of pornography into the country from outside but it was the provinces who police the pornographic laws within Canada, he added.

The minister said he would consider Mr. McGrath's suggestion that laws dealing with pornography be included in Criminal Code amendments now to be introduced in the Commons.

Bobby Orr's HOCKEY TIPS

By BOBBY ORR
Copyright 1975, Toronto Star Syndicate

The Wrist Shot is the Most Important Shot

Everyone likes shooting the puck. It's a common sight for youngsters to get on the ice and forget about some of the other basics for shooting the puck.

Often, youngsters will neglect working on some of the more essential shots in favor of the slap shot. This is wrong because if you aren't spending time on your wrist shot you're not developing the most important shot in hockey.

From my position (defence), I generally use more slap shots than wrist shots. However, I know that whenever I move in close to the opposing net and need a more accurate shot, I use the wrist shot.

With younger children, we find that with any kind of shot they seldom hold the stick properly. The trouble is they hold the stick too loosely in their hands. This is the first key — not only for the wrist shot but all shots — hold the stick firmly.

The wrist shot involves a sweeping motion where the puck is brought from behind. Your wrists are cocked and as you bring the puck forward you release your wrists.

Most vital in any shot is your weight. As the puck is brought forward, the weight is also brought forward. When you shoot, all your weight goes into the shot . . . all your weight is on that front foot. That's where your power will come from and is indoctrinely first and foremost order to obtain it, you must put each day.

Richard Martin of Buffalo Sabres has got a great wrist shot. Hasg and he's let it go. Because Martin's wrist shots are accurate and extremely hard, he most definitely is a player to watch.

Although Phil Esposito's shots don't seem too hard, believe me, he's got a very heavy wrist shot. His shot is like being hit with a brick or stone. On top of that, Esposito's shot is very accurate. There are many others with excellent wrist shots but Martin and Esposito are two of the best.

The only way for your wrist shot to improve is to work on it industriously first and foremost

Kevin Allen rounded out the scoring with his pair of goals and an assist. Doug Rathbun in net for the Falcons did his share in holding down the score for the losers.

Randy Hutchison, Paul McLellan and Ron McFarlane each potted a single tally for the Falcons with McFarlane and Hutchinson assisting.

Tom MacDonald was the only Bourcai to beat the Yankees' goalie, Dave Casselman, as the Bourcais fell prey to the Yankees by a 4-1 margin in the second game of the day. Wayne Brown fired two goals and added an assist- for the winners with singles going to Bruce Lloyd and Barry Brewster.

Controls Extend To Key Trades

OTTAWA (CP) — Thousands more companies and workers now may be under the federal anti-inflation program as a result of an announcement Tuesday night by Finance Minister Donald Macdonald.

The minister told the Commons he will ask the anti-inflation board to consider the situation of companies and employees in key transportation, grainhandling and construction industries now not under the guides.

If the board rules they should be covered, all will be subject to price-and-wage controls retroactive to Tuesday, said Mr. Macdonald.

He spoke just before the Liberal government defeated 108 to 79 a motion of non-confidence moved against it by the Social Credit party.

The motion, condemning the government's social and economic policies and urging interest-free loans to the provinces was supported by the Progressive Conservatives and New Democrats.

House seat standing: Liberal - 140, Conservative 85, NDP 16, Social Credit 11, one independent, one vacant.

The Commons also approved a $1.75 billion package of supplementary spending estimates which the government announced Nov. 12 it would be requiring. But on procedural grounds Speaker James Jerome ruled out a provision for the supply bill allowing the government to borrow $2 billion for public works and other programs.

The supplementary estimates raise projected government spending for the year ending March 31, 1976, to $31.34 billion, 11 per cent above a year ago.

The amount provided Tuesday includes $383 million for consumer oil subsidies, $250 million for interest payments on federal debts and $177 million for increased medical costs.

Although the anti-inflation program has yet to get final Senate approval and royal assent, it has been law since midnight Oct. 13, a few hours after Prime Minister Trudeau announced it on nationwide television.

Under the legislation, the anti-inflation board has the power to bring companies and employees not specifically named under the program.

Already subject to the guides—limiting employees to pay raises of about 10 per cent in the first year and limiting price increases to amounts covering production costs—are firms with more than 500 employees and construction companies with 20 or more employees.

Mr. Macdonald, whose announcement came as a surprise, told MPs the cabinet had decided to ask the board for a ruling on:

"The trucking industry; the construction industry, and here we are considering, of course, firms with less than 20 employees; the shipping industry on the West Coast of Canada, the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence; the bargaining industry, and the grain handling industry with a view to recommending whether, in what manner, and to what extent, designations should be made. . . .

"If the anti-inflation board makes a positive recommendation in respect of any or all of the foregoing industries, and if the governor-in-council (cabinet) decides to designate some or all of these industries, the designation will take effect as of today and the designation will be applicable to both prices and compensation (wages)."

Mr. Macdonald said outside the Commons it was important to make the announcement as soon as possible so companies would be warned. This would force them to take the restrictions into account in making corporate decisions, he said.

If the request is approved by the board, all companies in specified industries would be covered, regardless of the number of employees.

Knee-deep Wading in Season

Nicholson Catholic College students clammer off a city bus on Pinnacle Street this morning and step knee-deep in banks of snow rolled up onto roadsides by city plows overnight. Students in Belleville, those unaffected by cancelled school bus runs, waded through the aftermath of a storm that hit southeastern Ontario overnight and left 11.4 inches (29 cm.) of wet, heavy snow in the city.

If Contract Not Approved

Mackasey Will Fight Anti-inflation Board

OTTAWA (CP) — Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey said Tuesday he would fight any move by the federal anti-inflation board against a pay award that put striking postal workers back on the job a week ago.

The possibility that the board might intervene the award to 22,000 indoor postal workers was raised inside the Commons and outside.

Union officials speculated that the board might feel forced to denounce the 39-per-cent under the program.

The program places a basic ceiling of 10 per cent on pay increases in the first year, 8 in the second. It provides for some exceptions.

But Mackasey has said the post office award is justified on the ground that the indoor workers are receiving the same as letter carriers. The award was before the pay-control program was introduced Oct. 14.

However, some government officials speculated that members of the board oppose making an exception in this case.

Replying to James McGrath (PC—St. John's East), Mr. Mackasey said he is ready to defend the pay raise to the board if necessary.

Layoff Threats Hurt Salary Talks: Smith

By JERRY BROWN
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — Continual threats of layoffs made by town council during bargaining sessions with the local firefighters association have made normal contract talks impossible said Capt. Dennis Smith, a spokesman for the men, Tuesday.

Capt. Smith said that council's refusal to make decisions concerning salary requests are being made by the administration because the politicians refuse to make a judgement themselves, he said in a lengthy rebuttal to a report council heard at Monday night's session.

"We don't like negotiating through the media but we are forced to do it," said Capt. Smith.

Capt. Smith said the firefighters were aware of a responsibility to the town when they devised their demands.

"We don't realistically expect to receive what we have asked for, said the captain. "But that is the way negotiations are conducted, said the captain. "You make an offer, the town makes one and then everyone compromises, but that is not the way it has been with our contract negotiation," said Capt. Smith.

In a report filed by town clerk Aubrey Sharp, it was recommended the town explore the possibility of replacing the current permanent fire department with a fully volunteer brigade if the firefighters don't modify salary demands. Mr. Sharp said the recommendation was not meant to be taken as a threat to the firefighters association but Capt. Smith said he felt differently.

"How can this be anything but a threat," said the firefighter. Every year we are threatened with layoffs if we don't accept council's offer, said Capt. Smith.

The spokesman for the firefighters association, concerning with views expressed by Trenton Fire Chief Cecil Ellis, said it would be impossible for the town to switch to a volunteer system.

"Where would the fire people we took out of the Gilbert Hotel have been if we had not arrived," said Capt. Smith.

Volunteers Slow Down Fire Brigade Says Chief

TRENTON — The town's proposed plan to disband the regular fire department and replace it with a volunteer brigade system would probably increase response time to a fire by at least 600 per cent, said Trenton Fire Chief Cecil Ellis, Tuesday.

It is currently possible for the department to be at the scene of a fire anywhere in the municipality within three minutes but this would probably increase to almost 30 minutes with a volunteer system, said Chief Ellis.

"The volunteers must first assemble at the fire hall to mobilize the truck before anyone can be dispatched to the scene of a fire," said chief Ellis.

Say Cheese Team Asks for Money

BY HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Hastings Agricultural council has found a tasty alternative to a request for financial aid to run a local team to a hockey tournament in Austria.

The request came earlier this year from the Marmora-Trent Valley Canoe Oldtimers aiming to participate in annual oldtimers hockey tournament in Letbridge next February.

Tuesday, council's finance committee decided the proceeds would be set by allocating such a grant.

The novel solution: Present the team with 30 lbs. of county cheese. It would be distributed by the team or provided at any tournament in Lethbridge while simultaneously promoting Hastings County products.

When Your Money Is Short

Trustees Raise Salaries Behind Closed Doors

By RON CARSON
Staff Reporter

Hastings County Board of Education trustees went behind closed doors Tuesday night and with a 9-8 vote increased their monthly salary by $100 to $320 from $300.

Trustees last increase occurred a year ago when the honorarium was increased to $300 from $200. The ministry of education allows no more than $400 a month salary for Ontario trustees.

Sitting trustee Don Williams, who opposed the increase, said Tuesday the board's action is inconsistent and provides poor leadership for Ontario wage and price guidelines. The board's increase represents an 11.8 per cent hike.

"I feel we are elected representatives and should be providing some leadership for the government's restraint program, otherwise, we are headed for problems," he said.

Mr. Williams, who asked for a recorded vote, criticized those trustees who during the open session showed fiscal restraint as two programs, and then later voted in favor of their own increase.

Trustees who favored the increase were Carl Brant, Earl Hawley, Ed Poquet, Emerson Robinson, Fraser Ross, Raymond Rowe, Ralph Swan, Don Thrush and Rick Wilson.

Trustees who opposed the increase were Jane Bateman, Ken Forbes, Kirlam Graham, chairman Jean Hamilton, Ken Little, Bob Ord, Jim Spry and Don Williams.

Mr. Williams, who said the increase should have been dealt with in open session, said the taxpayers had a right to know how the individual trustees felt about the matter.

Supporters of the increase argued that the board decided last year there would be an increase and that $320 brings the board more in line with neighboring boards.

The Peterborough County Board of Education pays trustees $400 a month while the Prince Edward County Board of Education pays $100 to trustees. The Lennox and Addington Board of Education pay $300 while Kingston's Frontenac County Board of Education pays the maximum.

Trustees attend at least four meetings a month and some spend many more hours on special committees. However, the Hastings trustees do not hold regular meetings during July and August.

Mr. Graham, vice-chairman of the board, said Tuesday she could not morally vote in favor of the increase because of the guidelines. However, she defended trustees by saying that the job is worth far more than $400.

Indonesia Suspends Trade Talks with Holland Over Incidents

AMSTERDAM (AP) — Indonesia has suspended trade talks with the Netherlands, apparently because the Dutch government has been unable to end the occupation of the Indonesian consulate in Amsterdam by South Moluccan nationalists, the Dutch economics ministry announced today.

Representatives of the two governments have been meeting in Jakarta, the Indonesian capital, to discuss the sale of several hundred million dollars worth of ships and perhaps planes to the former Dutch colony.

A ministry spokesman said all indications are that suspension of the talks is the direct result of the action by the two South Moluccan groups holding an estimated 53 hostages in the Amsterdam consulate and aboard a train in northern Holland.

South Moluccan nationalists hold the hostages for nearly a week have demanded a meeting in Geneva with Indonesian President Suharto, but an Indonesian representative said the demand will be rejected.

A Geneva meeting between Suharto and Johan Alvares Manusama, a leader of a community of South Moluccan exiles in the Netherlands, was among a series of demands submitted to the Jakarta government by gunmen besieging an estimated 25 hostages in the Indonesian consulate in Amsterdam. They seized the building last Thursday.

An emissary of the South Moluccans met Sarjadi Kromoni-hardjo, political counselor at the Indonesian embassy in The Hague, Sarjadi, who said he was not meeting in an official capacity, said the demand to meet Suharto will be "categorically refused."

The Indonesian ambassador, Lt.-Gen. Sutopo, said in a radio address that "there will be no political concessions from the Indonesian government."

Dutch authorities believe the train hijacking Dec. 2 and the consulate attack in Amsterdam two days later were staged to focus attention on the demands of the South Moluccans for independence for their home islands in the Indonesian archipelago.

The train hijackers have killed three hostages and released a number of others. Late Tuesday, they released another hostage who was reported suffering from a heart condition.

An Indonesian injured escaping from the consulate died Tuesday. He was the only fatality so far in the siege there.

Students Hope to Take Play Repertoire on Road

By MARG. HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

BLOOMFIELD — The Prince Edward Youth Theatre next summer hopes to "hit the road" with a trio of children's plays but restrictions with transportation is responsible from the Prince Edward board of education, says theatre director Larry Taylor.

Mr. Taylor, who met with school trustees this week to discuss the project, says 11 Prince Edward Collegiate Institute students participate in the youth theatre presentations.

The purpose of the group is two-fold. It is to produce and present children's plays in 1975-76 and to perform them in various locations in the Quinte area," he told trustees.

Mr. Taylor said the group's first production, Pig Tales, already has been performed in the Picton area and at the end of December work will begin on two other productions.

The theatre's next play will carry a nautical theme to tie in with the sailing Olympics and will be presented at the Children's Festival of Arts in Belleville next March.

The third play slated for production was written by two former PECI students. Marie Mary MacDonald and Nicola Brookes and tells the story of, a little girl lost at the Sandbanks.

Mr. Taylor said that to use the theatre group hopes to present its trio of plays at summer resorts and provincial parks throughout the area.

The Kingston Olympics Public Events Committee has invited the actors to join in their festivities.

For six weeks the Prince Edward Youth Theatre would perform in the Quinte area and Kingston if plans are approved.

Mr. Taylor said if the project has local support the group can qualify for a Wintario grant.

"We are the first school group in Ontario to approach Wintario about this type of grant," explained Mr. Taylor.

He added that local service clubs and municipal councils will be approached for assistance with raising funds for the performance of the plays next summer.

Mr. Taylor said transportation is a major problem for the group and he has requested the board to provide direct financial assistance through van rental and gasoline costs or loan of the board mini-bus and the services of a driver. An alternative suggested by the theatre group was loan of the mini-bus with permission for Mr. Taylor to operate it.

Mishap on 401 Tuesday Snarls Evening Traffic

BRIGHTON — A two-vehicle accident sent one man to the hospital, caused more than $2,000 damage, and reduced traffic to a crawl in the eastbound lane of Highway 401 during Tuesday's snowstorm.

Injured in the accident, was Bruno Gabriel, 38, of Kitchener. He is listed in satisfactory condition in Trenton Memorial Hospital suffering from facial lacerations and multiple injuries.

Police spokesman for the Brighton OPP said the Gabriel vehicle was travelling westbound in the eastbound lane of Highway 401 when the mishap occurred. A tractor-trailer driven by David Dickson, of Scarborough, was travelling eastbound, took evasive action, entered the median and rolled over.

Dickson was not injured. There was $2,000 damage to the Gabriel vehicle which was in collision with the tractor-trailer. Police estimated damage to the truck at $1,000.

Constable B. J. McArthur said the mishap is still under investigation.

Three Hurt In Crash

CROFTON — Three persons received minor cuts and bruises Tuesday afternoon in a two-car collision on Highway 33 about one quarter mile north of Crofton.

Injured were driver of one of the cars, Phillip Levick, 61, of 91 Main St., Bloomfield, and his passengers Edith Levick, 56, and Edward Heath, 37, of Bloomfield, owner of the vehicle.

Driver of the second car William George Rodgers, 36, of RR 2 Picton was not injured.

Damage to each vehicle was estimated at $500 in the collision which occurred shortly before 6 p.m.

Damage Extensive

BATAWA — About $800 damage was caused in a two-car collision about 3:30 p.m. Tuesday on Highway 33 near here.

Roland Sabouin, 48, of Campbellford, was driving northbound when he was in collision with a vehicle driven southbound by Iris Redford, 48, of Frankford.

No one was injured and no charges were laid, said Belleville OPP.

Meberships Under Review

City council next week will finish drafting appointments to the various boards and commissions which play an integral role in Belleville's local government.

Council met in caucus early this week to consider membership on the various groups for 1976.

However, the task wasn't completed, reported Mayor Ben Corke.

Plans are to meet a half-hour earlier next Monday — council's regular session — and finish drawing up the list of new year appointments, he said.

Traditionally, memberships on civic boards, committees and commissions are announced at the first council meeting of the year.

Political Prisoners Crowd Jails in an Imperialist-leaning Indonesia

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Indonesia is a sprawling nation of 100,000,000 spread over a vast stretch of the Southeast Asian seas, a collection of thousands of islands large and small.

Perhaps the best-known in the West is the exotic island of Bali, renowned for its dancers and beautiful women - and rightly touted as a major tourist attraction in Asia.

But Indonesia is a troubled nation, its spread of island-to-island domination challenged in the South Moluccas at the western end of the archipelago, while the central government in Jakarta proceeds to annex-re-training portions in the eastern end not under its rule.

In 1962 Indonesian armed forces led, by a cruiser, took control of East Irian, that portion of the vast island of New Guinea which had been part of Holland's vast Asian empire before World War II.

And this week another Indonesian task force, again headed by naval units supplied originally by the Russians, seized the capital city of tiny Portuguese Timor an island 90 miles off the troubled Portuguese homeland since the 1500s.

These imperialistic excursions of a country born out of the decline of Dutch empire in Asia, the pre-war name for the region being the Dutch-East Indies, do not hide the growing cries within one of the Third World's most populous and richest post-war nations.

Indonesian Premier Sukarno came to power after a shocking bloodbath and near-civil war which resulted in the death, execution and assassination of an estimated half million Indonesian Communists, and the end of a pro-Soviet era under the late and discredited founding president Sukarno.

Remember him from the early 1950s when the likes of Vassar in Egypt, Nkrumah in Ghana, the emergent Castro in Cuba and Sukarno in Indonesia seemed to be the evicdial charismatic leaders of the future in the Third World.

Instead Sukarno debauched a mandate guaranteed to him after World War II during which he fought as a resistance leader against both Japanese imperialism and the earlier more benign Dutch variety.

Jakarta in 1958, the Indonesian capital, was not only the seat of expensive and lavish Asian games with their own political overtones, but of one of the first of many conferences of non-aligned nations.

At that time the People's Republic of China was persona grata to Indonesia with Premier Chou En-lai on hand for the big event of 20 years ago.

Sukarno's excesses, economic, social, as well as personal, left his sprawling nation in a mess, with certain regions like the Moluccas showing signs of incipient secession.

The military which overthrew him, backed by the Communist friends and allies and tried to make his own state enterprises run efficiently, have also fallen on evil days.

If Sukarno languished up his political prisoners, he never did it to the extent President Soharto and the Indonesian generals have done.

An estimated 50,000 Indonesians are in jail with no hope of any due process of law, since Soharto took over.

Indonesia is so deprived and bankrupt-American or Asian mistake. She is mineral and oil-rich; a vast nation with vast potential.

And yet her present internal upheavals have spilled over into world news only when Mrs. Soekarno hijacking and kidnapping in Holland. Indonesia looks like a nation without a national course.

Teachers and Politics

A number of city secondary school teachers have telephoned staff members of The Intelligencer to voice their displeasure at a Dec. 5 headline that read "Walkout On Teacher Plan."

That heading appeared above a Canadian Press story that read: "Officials of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation (OSSTF) said Thursday that a withdrawal by Ontario's 34,000 secondary school teachers to support their striking colleagues in Metropolitan Toronto will be considered today by the OSSTF executive council."

One spokesman, London district vice-president John Meal said the council meeting was "to decide whether we will strike."

Hastings division OSSTF president Judie Carty was quoted as saying secondary school teachers in this county want to stay within legal bounds and not participate in any province-wide walkout or slowdown which she termed "illegal."

That didn't deter Hastings teachers who participated in the Dec. 18, 1973 province-wide walkout.

We think the public is getting fed up with the teaching profession as a whole, and the teachers are getting a little bit edgy about the situation.

There was a time when many teachers were underpaid. But we think the Metro Toronto teachers' quest for 43.9 per cent pay increases plus a cost-of-living allowance is stretching the profession's credibility with the public. How many people do you know that make $10 - $20,000 for 197 days of work a year, including 12 for "professional development?"

If Hastings County teachers are touchy about headlines that appear such as on Dec. 6 ("Pay hikes Will Defy Ottawa, Price Guidelines") they have two courses of action open to them.

They can stand up and openly declare their support for OSSTF spokesmen who are spouting such tripe, or voice their opposition to statements made by their federation representatives.

One gets the impression many teachers are playing both ends against the middle.

Role of Exercise

Film from President Ford's visit to China shows the emphasis placed there on exercise for the masses, from mass morning activity in factory and school to the rigors of table-tennis, Chinese-style, to the varied repertoire of classical ballet.

Sport, athletics and recreation as we are accustomed to it here is somewhat different. It is the compulsion of what after-all is a state-directed program in China, but we could learn from the latter nevertheless.

Meanwhile here in Belleville it is good to observe initiatives at city level directed toward improvement of overall recreation facilities locally — as witness Council's move, in conjunction with the recreation arena committee, to lease gym facilities for Procter and Gamble at Sir James Whitney School.

Interesting to see the firm is planning a family recreation program, also the fact the arrangement will be at no cost to the city.

There is evidence too of attention in future years at the harbor, with word that additional docking space for pleasure craft will be built this winter.

Belleville is keeping pace in these and other areas. It's the kind of progress that will stand the city in good stead in the years ahead.

Christmas Sharing

Christmas is not far off and it is good to see the spirit of this season, in the context of helping others, is very much alive.

We note the activities of the Firefighters and the Students' Association of Loyalist College in providing toys and food for needy families. Then there are the area schools that are involved in similar thoughtful initiatives, not to mention the community-wide Christmas Sharing Program.

Quinte Mall cinema manager Stella Culhane, along with her staff, joined in also with Sunday's cartoon show for which admission was a toy donation.

Christmas is enhanced by the selflessness of these and other citizens who give of themselves in this way. Peace and goodwill may not be universally in evidence in the world just now, but at least they are qualities that do surface in this and other communities throughout our own land.

Dave Barrett Has Charisma Lacking in Canadian Politics

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — The people of British Columbia must have fun with their elections.

Perhaps they don't think so.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS
Dec. 10, 1975

The British battleship Prince of Wales and the battlecruiser Repulse were sunk 34 years ago today—in 1941—by Japanese aircraft torpedoes off the Malay coast. The Prince of Wales had been completed earlier the same year. The two warships were trapped by bombers as they sailed to intercept Japanese transports approaching Malaya. Some 2,300 of the 2,800 men aboard were rescued after the sinkings.

1961 — George Knudson, 34, of Toronto won $20,000 Coral Beach golf tournament in Florida by a margin of one stroke with a score of 65.

But if they were tied up in one of ours and then compared the two they would realize they have much.

Witnessing Dave Barrett in action in itself is worth the price of admission.

Barrett is one of the old-time political showmen.

And in any day and age politics he would have been great.

Today he is outstanding.

He realizes the importance of drama and humor—and of extemporaneity.

When attacking his opposition he doesn't go into a routine diatribe but says, "They first called me a socialist, then they called me a reactionary . . . and now they call me FAT!"

And he delivers the line with the timing of an old vaudeville pro.

Then talking about natural gas prices, which he had raised, he says, "Now they are calling me an Arab—what do you think my father and mother feel about that?"

Or again, referring to a U.S. senator, he has said, "Let the senator get Texas straightened out before he passes judgment with us."

This is great stuff on the hustings and something we haven't seen here since the days of Mitch.

What we have seen recently have been the professional denouements of Premier Davis, the banging harangues of Bob Nixon and the sophisticated cynicism of Stephen Lewis.

Not a really good political playmaker from the whole crowd.

Prone to flat, there was the chairman of the board pronouncements of John Roberts and the pulpit lectures of Leslie Frost.

No pep.

And politics needs pep.

Even the public often complains that our politics are dull forsooth-perceiver always rely.

The late Drew Ontario Arsenals couldn't seduce Dave Barrett as their leader.

Strike Comment

Anyone For Democracy?

Editor,
The Intelligencer

I write in the hope of arousing immediate citizen support for those fellow human beings at Belleville Post Office who defied the International Law enforcing the limits of their own union executive by refusing to work when it became apparent to many reasonable persons that the welfare of the nation had to be placed above fractional goals.

I am not opposed to labor unions, many of which have a noble history, but I know personally many of the workers involved in the post office. Fine, hard-won principle is being dominated by petty leaders motivated by selfish greed, if led by darker intentions.

You quote a local union president as threatening that the five workers (out of 43) will "be completely ostracized . . . treated as if they didn't exist." Does a union official really wield this kind of power inside Government of Canada structure in Belleville? A local Labor Council vice-president is quoted as advising people to "drive to another town" for cards now that they are scabs." (He might note that scabs eat only on rotten flesh.) The union president adds that "we'll take the heavy back inside with us." Does this kind of incitement and threat not infringe civil rights as guaranteed to all under the Canadian Bill of Rights?

Who is for democracy? Not the gentlemen quoted. It is on the public record that, despite the union executive action in preventing some thousands of its members from voting in the strike ballotting, a majority of the members still decided to return to work on the terms offered by the Postmaster-General and his negotiators.

Belleville is still a kindly city of modest size where we know our neighbors. I hope that those whose business or private affairs require them to use the Post Office will make it clear to the union executive, recommend and peaceful actions that they will not stand by apathetically and permit those nonexistent few to be victimized in the slightest way for their public-spirited act. Perhaps the city's mayor, as putative leader of the community, might place a motion or communication before his council. If any complaint of intimidation is received should reach the police. Brisk action for charges should ensue.

As for the 60 who left the public to ransom to the blitzfruitless end, let us all hope the greater number of them were merely misguided pawns of an executive having dangerously to the dirge of a distant drummer.

L.F. HANNON,

Democracy CUPW-style

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

In regard to your editorial, Icing of Free Speech.

I believe that you are aware that the Union I made, was not to support those councillors in their best efforts, and to ask my friends to withdraw support from them. I believe this is my democratic right.

I believe that as individuals these people have a right to any opinion and I will defend that right. But as members of city council they were out of place with their prejudicial remarks.

If you believe these words held people to ransom and have no right to act a union to their labor, then perhaps you will remove the pace from the feet of your paper and accept what it is the lower and ultimately as much your employer, as you are mine, should determine to be.

Please allow me this same freedom to work and to freedom from your threats, that you have used in the city council members.

WALTER S. YATEMAN
President CUPW Belleville.

An 'Atmosphere of Greed'

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

There is no doubt that Canadian mean business when it comes to inflation, Finance Minister Donald Macdonald declared. The teachers are calling for a province-wide strike. The doctors are threatening a one-day affair. Messrs. Davidson and Parrot premier and union leader can vs. Post Office, organized labor flatly rejects the government's call - inflation program, the corporations indicate that they must have a larger share of the pie, and the rest of us are told we have just plain" got to have more" in order to pay the price the others are asking.

The government and opposition leaders agree on one thing. "They are more interested in having their pensions reflect the erosion of inflation.

So it is an atmosphere of deliberated greed and uncontrolled drift (inflation) and inevitably toward total collapse of all that we know and understand.

Where we are headed nobody seems to know and what is worse, nobody seems to care. It seems to me that most of our problems are the direct result of the failure of the free enterprise capitalist system. We certainly we cannot blame Moscow and Peking for our problems. Neither can we blame the Arabs, who after all, have been using the capitalist principles of free enterprise.

Solutions to the ills seems to be replacing the present government with a new. Economist Richard Needham reminds us that the great years of the Conservative Diefenbaker government. He reminds us that Mr. Diefenbaker and Mr. Towers, then Governor of the Bank of Canada, had the courage to completely force the Bank of Canada to inflate. He adds "that opening Lapland and Siberia is a new row". So we cannot expect help from the Soviet Union.

WILLIAM C. HOCKLEY.

Ontario Wineries Will Adopt Uniform Labelling Standard in 1976

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs
Analyst
Thomson News Service

This is the time of year that traditionally sees a big bulge in sales of Canadian wines.

To some extent consumers must grope in the dark because of the lack of straightforward product information of the kind that's required by law to be shown on bottle labels in France and some other countries with a highly-developed wine market.

Now there's some help, either on the way or already here, for the confused Canadian consumer.

Early this year—in to late for the big holiday buying period—several major wineries will jointly adopt uniform standards of labelling information that the consumer will be able to depend upon.

A group of 13 wineries in Ontario—which accounts for the biggest share of Canada's production—will start labelling their products according to standards drawn up by the Ontario Wine Council and to be supervised by the province's Liquor Control Board.

Labels will give such information as the minimum aging period and alcohol content, and an indication of the type and quality (rare, superior, etc.) used.

In the meantime, consumers can find a certain amount of guidance in the newly revised Pennsylvania Wine Guide by Gail Donner and Cocy Waverman (Fitzhenry and Whiteside Ltd., 175 pages, $3.95).

The guide is based on comprehensive tests by a panel of Canadian experts of 200 wines available across Canada that cost less than $3.

One difficulty in publishing such information is that it's likely to be overtaken quickly by events. The new edition replaces a 1974 version that became outdated, and a number of wines that might interest pennsylvanians have already made their appearance since the latest edition went to press.

This is nevertheless a useful and unpretentious guide to the purchase of a product that is labelled far too rarely and unreliably in most cases.

The authors' comments are often short and sharp (one wine rates a simple "yuk"), and are annexed book. The province-by-province list of best buys.

The guide contains a couple of suggestions for any pennsylvanian who wants to carry economy still further: Join or form a wine club to buy in bulk. Or make your own wine.

Wine-making will find worthwhile advice of a more general nature in another newly-published book, The Canadian Guide To Home Entertaining by Una Abrahamson (Macmillan, 176 pages, $14.95).

Miss Abrahamson, chairman of the Ontario Task Force on Nutrition and Culinary Arts, opines that an imported wine is not necessarily superior to a Canadian wine, nor vice versa.

Her advice is to try a half-bottle of a given wine—even though it is relatively more expensive than a full bottle—to learn about taste, flavor and degree of excellence.

The author's scope goes well beyond wines, to cover the whole spectrum of home entertainment.

There's a valuable section on business entertaining (you don't invite the boss first, and if you're after you have been entertained by a superior, it's a delicate matter whether you return the invitation?).

And there's a timely treatise on how to survive that potential pitfall, the office party.

Miss Abrahamson's counsel could be a form of unemployment insurance, in view of the ease with which business careers can be ruined at such functions.

Five Youths Fined on Liquor Charges

MADOC — Five Madoc youths were fined $50 each in provincial court here Tuesday after they pleaded guilty to being on licensed premises while under 18 years of age.

The youths, charged under the Ontario Liquor Licensing Act (OLLA), are: Alex Casselman, 17, Ronald Holmes, 17, John Parks, 16, Dennis Bruce Rooney, 16 and Richard Scero, 17.

Casselman pleaded guilty to an additional charge of being intoxicated in a public place and was fined $35.

A charge of being on licensed premises while under 18 years of age against Scero Alexander Nickle, 17, of Madoc was withdrawn due to a technicality and Ontario Provincial Police (OPP) at Madoc say Nickle will be recharged.

An additional Liquor Control Act charge of having liquor in his possession while under 18 years of age against Rooney was also withdrawn.

The charges followed a raid Nov. 21 at Madoc Hotel at 33 North Durham St. by OPP and liquor law enforcement officers.

Madoc Hotel Ltd. and Carl Spatola, 23, of Madoc, a hotel bartender, was remanded in provincial court here Tuesday to a tentative date of Dec. 23 for trial on OLLA charges laid against them in connection with the raid.

The hotel company is charged with permitting persons under 18 years of age on licensed premises and Spatola is charged with knowingly serving liquor to persons under 18 years of age.

It was incorrectly reported in The Intelligencer late last month that Joseph Rossio, 24, of 147 East Elgin St. in Madoc, hotel owner and manager, had been charged with the offence for which the hotel company is charged and that Rooney's additional charge was having liquor in a place other than his residence.

The story which contained the errors was published in the Nov. 26 edition of the newspaper.

Correctional Officer Remanded On Six Charges, Including Assault

MADOC — Peter John Rusakow, 32, of 178 Kent St. in Campbellford was remanded in provincial court here Tuesday to Jan. 20 for a preliminary hearing on six charges, including one of assaulting a police officer.

Rusakow, a correctional officer at Warkworth Institution, is also charged with assault causing bodily harm, resisting arrest causing custody, impaired driving and failing to supply a sample of his breath.

Ontario Provincial Police at Madoc say Constable Glen Fowler stopped a pickup truck in Marmora Nov. 4 and was assaulted when he attempted to arrest the driver.

Police say the driver escaped and was arrested about 30 minutes later in the village by Constable Walker Brown after other officers were summoned to assist in the search.

Anna Cullen, one of the staff at the Reading'n Greeting Shop, sorts through the large selection of Christmas cards.

Postal Strike Over, Card Sales May Not Recover

Although mail is moving again across the country, many people are not sending Christmas cards this year. Or, says some managers of local shops selling greeting cards, next year either.

"A lot of people have commented they are not going to bother with Christmas cards anymore," said Ralph Hodgson, manager of Hodgs Book Store.

"I think this will hurt sales next year too," he said. "People will discover how much money they will save."

Mr. Hodgson said it is too early to judge the impact the strike had on Christmas.

He said cards and calendars are beginning to sell.

A spokesman for Shopsite managers of local card shops say many people are not purchasing Christmas cards this year.

also said cards are now beginning to sell. She added there is no way of estimating whether they would all sell before Christmas.

The Reading 'n Greeting Shop owner Ernie Colebourne said the bulk of Christmas card sales were usually handled in November.

The postal strike began Oct. 21 and Dec. 2.

Mr. Colebourne said there is only a 40 per cent potential

Meter Decision Delayed

A police proposal to meter parking on both sides of Coleman St. between West Moira and Harriet Streets has been returned — to the police.

City council's traffic committee Monday asked Police Chief Douglas Crosbie for further study of how commercial operations on the street's east side would be affected by such a move.

"People are not going to buy cards the way they did before," he said. "As a retailer it's up to me to promote business back to the way it was."

Russ Davis, operations supervisors at Sears, said he was not authorized to make any public statements.

The Sears store, located in Quinte Mall, has a section donated to Christmas cards and wrapping paper.

Adopt an Old Custom: Serve a Holiday Seafood Feast

Many cultures include a special Christmas Eve treat—an all seafood buffet. Featuring several delights that may include such exotic fare as octopus or such simple favorites as tuna salad.

Here are some suggestions if you'd like to institute this tradition in your home.

Special Tuna Salad

9 oz. tin tuna
one large can pitted black olives
¼ cup salad dressing
one tsp lemon juice
¼ cup mayonnaise
1 pkge (4 oz.) refrigerated crescent rolls

Drain and slice olives. Combine all ingredients and chill at least three hours.

Salmon Brunch Pinwheels

1 can (7¾ oz.) salmon
¾ cup grated Swiss cheese
2 tbsp chopped green onion
2 tbsp chopped stuffed olives
½ tsp dill weed
½ tsp pepper
2 tsp lemon juice
¼ cup mayonnaise
1 pkge (4 oz.) refrigerated crescent rolls

Drain salmon, reserving the juice for Parsley Sauce. Flake salmon with a fork and combine with remaining ingredients, except crescent roll dough. Pinch sections of refrigerated rolls together to make two rectangles. Spread with salmon filling. Roll up from long side. Cut into 12 pinwheels. Place pinwheels cut-side down, in buttered baking dish. Bake at 375 degrees F for 30 to 35 minutes or until golden. Serve with Parsley Sauce. Serves four.

To make Salmon Pinwheels hors d'oeuvre size:

Prepare salmon mixture as above. Divide dough into 4 rectangles, pinching seams together. Spread ¼ of the salmon filling over each rectangle. Roll up from long side. Cut each roll into 10 pinwheels. Place, cut-side down, on buttered baking sheet. Bake at 375 degrees F for 18 to 15 minutes or until golden. Makes 40 appetizers.

Parsley Sauce

2 tbsp butter
2 tbsp flour
½ tsp salt
¼ tsp pepper
½ tsp dry mustard
Reserved salmon juice
1½ cups milk
2 egg yolks, beaten
2 tbsp snipped parsley

Melt butter. Blend in flour and seasonings. Add salmon juice and milk. Cook, stirring constantly, until thickened and smooth. Add a small amount of sauce to beaten egg yolks, then add egg yolks to remaining sauce. Cook, stirring constantly, until thickened. Add parsley and serve. Makes about two cups.

Salmon Pizza Pie

2 cans (7¾ oz. each) salmon
2 cups packaged biscuit mix
¾ cup water
½ cup grated Parmesan cheese
1 can (20 oz) tomatoes, well-drained
1 can (10 oz.) mushrooms, drained
½ tsp oregano
½ tsp sweet basil
2 tbsp cooking oil
1 medium onion, grated
6 oz. Mozzarella cheese slices

Drain and flake salmon, mashing bones to mix with salmon. Mix biscuit mix and water; knead for 1 minute on a surface dusted with the mix. Roll into a large circle about ½-inch thick. Place into a 13-inch pizza pan, pinching edges to make a rim. Arrange flaked salmon on top of dough, and then remaining ingredients in order listed, cutting the Mozzarella cheese slices into strips and arranging them last in a pattern. Bake at 425 degrees F for 20 minutes. Serve in wedges. Serves six.

Halibut Baked in Foil

2 lb. piece of Pacific Halibut
4 tbsp soft butter or margarine salt and pepper to taste
½ tsp thyme leaves
1 can (10 oz.) mushroom pieces and stems
2 tbsp lemon juice
1 tsp grated lemon rind
¼ cup chopped parsley

Thaw halibut for easier handling; pat dry. Measure thickest part with a ruler. Place on large piece of double thickness of heavy-duty aluminum foil. Make a paste of butter or margarine, salt, pepper and thyme. Spread on halibut. Pour mushrooms with juice over. Sprinkle with lemon juice, rind, and parsley. Fold over aluminum foil, using drug-store wrap, to make an airtight package. Place on cookie sheet. Bake at 450 degrees F for 30 minutes per inch thickness of fish. Serves four.

Baked Salmon in Court Bouillon

Place one 3-lb. slice salmon or other firm-fleshed fish in 2 carrots, sliced
2 slices onion
¼ cup celery, chopped
¼ cup butter or margarine
1½ qts. water
1 tbsp salt
2 whole cloves
6 peppercorns
2 bay leaf
¼ cup vinegar
2 cups white table wine

To prepare Court Bouillon: Brown the carrots, onion, and celery in the butter or margarine. Bring the water to boiling point, and the vegetables, salt, spices and vinegar. Simmer for 10 minutes. Add the wine. Sew or wrap the salmon in cheesecloth (or arrange on cooking rack) and lower into boiling broth. Cover and simmer for 20 to 30 minutes, or until fish begins to flake. Retain Court Bouillon for use in Sauce Piquante below.

Sauce Piquante

2 egg yolks
2 tbsp butter or margarine
½ cup Court Bouillon
¼ cup white table wine
2 tbsp. lemon juice*
¼ cup pickles, chopped
1 tsp capers

Beat egg yolks until very light. Add to the butter or margarine, stirring until creamy and smooth. Heat Court Bouillon and wine and add to creamed egg and butter mixture gradually. Cook over low heat until thickened, stirring constantly. Add the lemon juice and chopped pickles. Add sugar if desired.

Fillet of Sole

8 small fillets of sole or flounder
1 tbsp butter or margarine
1 tsp onion, chopped
1 tsp parsley, chopped
2 or 3 mushrooms, chopped fine
1 stalk celery, chopped
1 bay leaf
½ cup white table wine
¼ cup water
1 bouillon cube
Salt and pepper fillets. Melt the butter or margarine in a large skillet and add other ingredients. Lay the fillets in the hot liquid and let simmer for five to 10 minutes, until barely tender. Remove carefully to ovenproof platter or shallow baking dish. Boil down the liquid in which fish was cooked until about ¾ cup remains. Add two tablespoons cream, more seasoning if needed. Strain the liquid over fish in the baking dish, sprinkle grated Parmesan cheese over all, and bake on the upper shelf of a hot oven (450 degrees F.) for about 10 minutes, or until the top is lightly browned.

Crab Meat in Avocado

2 medium avocados
1 cup crab meat, cooked or canned
¼ cup sherry
1 tsp lemon juice

Peel avocados and cut in half lengthwise. Remove stone. Marinate crab meat in sherry for 30 minutes. Fill avocado with crab meat and sherry, add a dash of lemon juice, and serve garnished with slice of lemon and a bit of curly endive.

Crab Meat Newburg

2 tbsp butter
1 lb. or 1 large can crab meat
paprika
¼ cup sherry
2 egg yolks
½ cup cream
1 tsp. lemon juice
Melt butter in large saucepan. Add the flaked crab meat. Season with salt and paprika, and saute lightly for four or five minutes. Add sherry, and let simmer for five minutes. Ann Landers

Chummy Women Should Be Discreet

Dear Ann Landers: She is a beautiful woman (36), he is a handsome man (32). They have two lovely children. He is a hard worker, a good father and generous with his money. They have a lovely apartment and a new car.

Six months ago she decided she was bisexual and became involved in an affair with a woman who lives in the same apartment complex. When the whole business came out in the open she said she was going to get help. But so far she hasn't done it. Instead she makes a habit of her friend's apartment as soon as her husband goes to work. All the neighbors are wise to the arrangement.

Her kids hate their mother's woman friend, but I don't think they know yet. Sooner or later they're bound to find out. What will this knowledge do to them? Maybe if the mother sees THAT in print she will mend her ways. Or perhaps her husband will figure out a course of action. Right now he is just waiting. Comment, please.—No Name

Dear N.N.: You write as if you know for certain these women are lovers. Were you there? If it is indeed a lesbian relationship, it will not be terminated by pressure from relatives—not even the disdain of her children. I would hope, however, that the women be circumspect. If they are carrying on, no one need know. Lesbians are less visible than male homosexuals because it isn't considered unusual for girls to be very chummy.

Dear Ann Landers: A reader asked what to do about his dog who became very upset during thunderstorms—broke the furniture, etc. You told him to check with his veterinarian and get some tranquilizing pills. I have another suggestion.

A dog's ability to sense an impending storm is much more acute than a human's. By the time the owner notices a storm approaching, the dog is already anxious and upset. A tranquilizer will not take effect until after the storm.

My suggestion is this: Have the owner get a tape recorder and equip it with a loop, or continuous tape. Record a thunderstorm's sound and fury. Then on a quiet day, play the tape back to the pet at a low volume for about an hour. Repeat the tapes on successive days and increase the volume. This should have a desensitizing effect on the animal. Sincerely yours—Lawrence M. Fan, D.V.M., River Grove, Illinois

Dear Doc: Many thanks for the helpful hint. And now, if anyone out there tries it, please let me know how it went.

Dear Ann Landers: You usually advise parents to MYOB when it comes to the weight problems of their children. But my problem is different from that of most mothers who yearn for their daughters to be thin.

Eighteen months ago, our daughter lost a lot of weight by systematically starving herself. She began passing out and having crying jags.

We were told to get her to a psychologist, which we did. She then started to eat again, felt better emotionally and now is 30 pounds overweight. Into the way she looks, but will not go back to the psychologist. She continues to gain. What can I do? —Distressed

Dear D.: Very little. The girl must want to return and let's hope she does soon. The psychologist got her over one hump; now she needs help to pull her back from the opposite extreme.

Chinese Children Take Classes To Retain Cultural Heritage

WINNIPEG (CP) — Every Sunday, about 75 children of Chinese ancestry gather at the Manitoba Academy of Chinese Studies. Their purpose is to retain some degree of cultural heritage while integrating into the mainstream of Canadian society.

Dr. Yanlay Tsai, academy secretary, says one of the main reasons the school was formed two years ago was to fill a gap created by the almost total absence of Chinese culture and history in Canadian textbooks. Also behind the school's formation was a growing concern that children born locally were becoming more isolated from their first-or second-generation immigrant parents.

Its segment courses on Chinese culture, history and geography, children are instructed in the delicate art of writing and speaking in the dialects of Mandarin and Cantonese. For those without any knowledge of Chinese language, special English-speaking classes are arranged in culture, history and geography.

Len Hew, president of the academy, sees the school as an answer to the federal government's policy of multiculturalism.

"Every group has something to contribute," he said. "This is our contribution."

Dr. Paulina Zillman, the academy's principal, says the classes are aimed at enhancing rather than detracting from traditional Canadian education.

"We don't impose," she said. "We provide a facility and service to the community."

For funds, each child is assessed $8 on a sliding scale that decreases if more than one family member registers.

With the success of the school at pre-adult level, administrators are anticipating introducing classes for parents. A committee is also researching the possibility of compiling a textbook that aims at combining work and exercise book. Primarily directed at the needs of local Chinese, the proposed textbook may be of use nationally, school officials say.

Making It in the Fashion World

TORONTO (CP) — For the past year Lorraine Dolcet, 28, a native of Dominica in the West Indies has been designing clothes from her two bedroom apartment.

She admits it takes courage for a young designer to leave a paying job and try it on her own in the tough, competitive world of fashion.

"I wanted to find out if I could support myself by designing," she said. "People started coming to me when they saw something I created and, they encouraged me to go out on my own."

Now she's busy building up a clientele because she plans to open her own boutique next spring.

"I enjoy creating fashions that are regular, avant-garde not the run-of-the-mill kind," she said. "I want to design clothes at a price most women can afford."

She sees a tailored pantsuit selling for $175 and wants to give her customer the same quality of merchandise and workmanship for half the price.

"It's not that difficult. Adding to the overhead of selling imported fashions are such things as duty and the cost of manufacturers' agents. That's where the buyer's money goes, not for the merchandise."

Lorraine who moved to Toronto in 1968, learned to sew back home. Her mother sewed for her and at 14 she was making her own clothes.

On her arrival in Canada, she worked as a clerk in an accounting department for a couple of years and then left to take a year's course in fashion merchandising.

After graduation, she modelled for a dress manufacturer for four months and then worked for a manufacturers' agent, doing modelling and office work. But her heart was in creating fashion, which is why she quit her job.

Protest Prompts Review Of Ban on Parking

Citizen reaction has sent a proposal on parking restrictions in the East Hill area back to the drawing board.

Extension and changes in no-parking regulations over a six-block residential area was approved by city council's traffic committee a month ago.

By the time the plan — based on a police department survey — reached council a week later protests and a petition had been sent city hall.

The reaction involved the area from William St. to Lingram St.

Council sent the recommendation back to the traffic committee. This week the committee sent the proposal back to the police department.

"I think we'll have to completely review the whole area in light of the submissions," agreed Police Chief Douglas Crosbie.

Quinte Residents Digging Out from Season's First Major Storm

By AL ZARAS
AND CLIFF KENYON

Abandoned cars still block some streets today after Tuesday's a storm dumped up to 13.8 inches of heavy, wet snow on the Quinte area.

Jack Costain, city public works superintendent, said today his department began clearing snow from city primary and secondary arteries at 4:30 p.m. Tuesday.

All available equipment and men are out and plowing is continuing today, he said Snow removal is scheduled for Thursday night.

"The snow was heavy and hard on equipment. It takes longer to clear," said Mr. Costain.

Residential streets are being cleared today after one pass over Tuesday night.

He called it the worst snowstorm of the winter, adding that it was the first time city equipment have been called out in force.

Belleville Police Chief Douglas Crabbe said today many cars were abandoned on city streets. Police did not grant permission for overnight street parking.

He said cars not removed today are subject to removal to facilitate snow clearing.

At CFB Trenton, where a snowfall was recorded 13.8 inches, crews are clearing parking lots and runways. A base spokesmen said two flights were delayed 24 hours and non-essential personnel were requested not to come to work until noon today.

A spokesman at Belleville OPP said early today Highway 401 was snowcovered and trucks were travelling about 30 to 35 miles an hour.

Bill Moreau, manager of Central and Checker Taxi, said today cabs were running about an hour behind.

"It was pretty hectic. It's grim," said Mr. Moreau. He said they had 60 cars in operating Tuesday and kept their low track busy all night getting them out of snow banks and ditches.

Dough Harris at Doug's Esso Towing service said today they are starting to catch up on the backlog of calls. They have three trucks in service.

He said they were busy all night and only accepting local calls - except for the 50 km wreckers working on Highway 401 towing transport trucks.

Vaughn Richmond of Richmond School Coach said their town truck was busy early today getting school buses out of county road ditches.

Several school bus runs in Prince Edward and Hastings Counties were cancelled

Ambulance Firms Offer Ministry Counter Plan

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Ambulance operators from Belleville, Trenton and Picton say they will "work within the ministry of health's guidelines" for staffing and number of vehicles.

During the last year the ministry undertook an intensive study of the ambulance companies in an attempt to reduce costs after officials termed Belleville "a high cost area" for ambulance service.

Jerry Bahr, eastern District representative for the ministry said, after of the yearlong study on Belleville, said today, "if the study is accepted by the local operators, approximately $100,000 could be saved in the area . . . with the majority of the saving coming from Belleville costs."

Following a closed session meeting of ambulance operators Tuesday, the four companies announced in a joint press release "a collective proposal has been submitted to the ministry of health dealing with all aspects of ambulance service in the area." The companies are LaSalle, City Ambulance, Rushwell Ambulance in Trenton and Bond's Ambulance in Picton.

The operators have also requested another meeting with ministry officials to discuss their counter proposal.

The operators declined further comment until the meeting with the ministry has been held.

Mr. Bahr said the gist of the ministry recommendations on staffing and number of vehicles means reduction of one ambulance from each of three shifts during the day.

Under the recommendation, three ambulances would serve Belleville during the day, two in the evenings and one at night. In the event any of these ambulances is tied up during an extended trip, standby crews will be available.

"It will mean the four services operating more as a unit than as individuals," said Mr. Bahr. "If Picton's ambulance is away from its base, a Belleville ambulance will have to be called in to stand by until the local ambulance returns."

Following the meeting of local operators Tuesday, one official who asked to remain unnamed said "the operators have tentatively agreed it (ministry proposal) could work with minor modifications."

The official said these minor modifications form the text of a counter proposal that will be made to ministry officials next Wednesday.

Mr. Bahr said he was happy that local operators had agreed in principal with the study.

He said providing the study is implemented, ambulance operators will have wider scope in how they handle their budget allocations.

He added a central dispatch system in Belleville General Hospital will erase the need for each operator to have his own radio station which will also reduce the over-all cost of ambulance service in the area.

County Officially Ends Financial Role in EMO

Hastings County council Tuesday officially withdrew from participation in the Quinte Emergency Measures Organization (QEMO).

The move came with approval of a bylaw - a sequel to an earlier decision which saw council refuse additional funding to salvage QEMO after senior government withdrew financial subsidies covering major operating expenses.

QEMO was wound up last summer.

A few weeks ago hopes for reviving some form of emergency measure organization flickered again as the federal government indicated it would pay 75 per cent of such costs.

However, Prince Edward County council opted not to participate.

Hastings' finance committee recommended the bylaw following rescinding county participation in QEMO — after "taking all factors into consideration."

County council's formal moves followed withdrawal earlier by Prince Edward County and Picton making the organization officially defunct, said Angus Duffy former Quinte co-ordinator.

Some weeks ago Belleville city councillor Stu Meeks proposed the formation of a volunteer emergency group.

Neighboring municipalities could "conceivably wish to participate, said Mr. Duffy.

Four to Seek Top County Position

Four Hastings County reeves will contest election to the county government's highest office early next year.

The quartet of candidates announced their bids for county warden — council's leadership post — as council ended its final session of the year Tuesday night.

The contestants:

Reeve Gordon Wilman, of Sidney Township, now in his third year on county council, who unsuccessfully sought the wardenship for 1973.

Reeve George Lyons, of Deseronto, five years a county councillor and also a former candidate for the office.

Reeve Cecil Woods, Madoc Township, a veteran of township government since 1956 and six years on county council.

Reeve James Pollock, Rawdon Township, three years a

Sentencing Date Set

Floyd Johnston, 25, of 38 Centre St. in Belleville was remanded in provincial court here Tuesday to Jan. 12 for sentencing after he was found guilty by Judge J. L. Clendening of assault causing bodily harm.

Johnston had been on trial for three days on the charge laid in connection with an attack on a 33-year-old Belleville woman Oct. 6.

The zoning regulations "fit urban situations" and "we don't feel the same regulations should apply to rural land severances."

His committee he said will seek another meeting in Belleville with ministry officials. Failing success, they'll go to the minister. Reeve Browne said he is "very confident" ministerial approval could be obtained before Jan. 15-when council next meets.

"We're just tired and fed up with the bureaucratic control of this province. We want the elected representatives to have more say," said Reeve Browne.

Reeve Calvin White, of council veteran and member of the board, told council he is "disgusted" with ministry officials' response to the plan.

"They told us all along we were developing planning for Hastings County. It's a plan the Hastings County council and council, not the ministry."

council and chairman of its finance committee.

The winner will succeed Warden William McCrea of Hungerford Township who quit election this year.

Electing a new warden is one of the first acts required of council at its annual inaugural session — this year scheduled to start Jan. 12, earlier than usual because of tight budget pressures.

By long tradition the voting is held in closed session. The balloting results are never revealed.

In his end-of-term speech Warden McCrea said the position has ended the year by yearly good financial shape."

A traditional policy of pays-as-you-go and retiring capital debt by short-term debentures meant county government has no big accumulated debt, he said.

Only Way to Travel

Susie Boyce enjoys a new kind of transportation during a shopping trip today as her mother, Beverley, pulls the sled along Front Street. Tuesday's storm dropped over 11 inches of snow on the city.

Province Warns County To Cut Spending to Bone

Hastings County council has set its seal to 1974 as a year of fiscal austerity for its county government administration.

At its final session of the year Tuesday, it voted to accept the example of senior government anti-inflation guidelines.

The consensus supported a letter from Ontario Treasurer Darcy McKeough urging that increases in county spending should follow the 10-per-cent restraint being exercised by the provincial government.

The province in turn is supporting the federal anti-inflation program.

The vote came early in the session which left councillors sharply conscious that local government is facing into a bleak budgetting year.

Mr. McKeough's letter also reminded them that increases in provincial payments to municipalities will be kept to five or six per cent.

Because of the restraints council:

(1) Must meet a week earlier than usual in the New Year so that the process of budget-drafting can be speeded up. It has to approve its 1974 budget by March 31 - a month earlier than this year.

(2) Heard warnings that anti-inflation guidelines could be a major problem in contract negotiations now underway with inside administrative staff at the county buildings and workers at Hastings Manor for the aged in Belleville.

The overview of 1974 financing was a sobering series of cautions that started soon after council began winding down the year's business.

The McKeough letter warned council it should put its local boards and commissions on notice that their 1974 budget demands must be pared to the "maximum extent."

He asked local government to join the province in a "total effort" to "cut spending to the bone".

Carl Bateman, county administrator, presented council with a report that warned "times ahead are going to be trying indeed."

Lineman Recounts Hair-raising Story

BY CLIFF KENYON
Staff Reporter

"It seemed as if my muscles had frozen," an approved Ontario Hydro lineman told members of Belleville, Kiwanis Club Tuesday.

Ken McAlister of Cornwall was explaining to Rotarians his feelings a year ago when while training as a lineman he was electrocuted when he accidentally touched a 7,200 volt wire.

"It kind of set me back a bit," said Mr. McAlister who was saved by a fellow employee who administered mouth - to - mouth resuscitation when the shock victim's heart stopped.

"I could see and hear everything going on," said Mr. McAlister recalling the scene. He said he couldn't speak to move or breathe but could hear and see the activities of his surroundings.

Following the accident he said he was in hospital for six weeks, didn't work for six months, and is now a fourth-year lineman apprentice with Ontario Hydro.

Mac McLeod, safety officer for Ontario Hydro Eastern branch, guest speaker at the club's regular meeting, said each of Ontario Hydro's male employees is trained in artificial resuscitation.

"It's paid off," said Mr. McLeod saying hydro employees have revived persons other than fellow workers.

He said people should become familiar with methods of artificial resuscitation.

Alarm Box

Belleville firefighters responded to the alarm box 46 for assistance during a 24-hour period which ended at 8 a.m. today.

Tuesday, Dec. 18, 7:02 p.m. - fire caused by steel beams being welded near exhaust fan at Army Navy & Air Force Veterans—The Duke of Edinburgh Unit at, 167 Front St., minor damage to a wall.

Officials Balk At Health Council

Hastings County councillors Tuesday again steered clear of immediate participation in evolving a district health council as proposed by the provincial government.

Councillors for the second time in two months withheld a decision on joining a steering committee-this time after hearing from Donald Soutter, ministry co-ordinator in eastern Ontario.

Mr. Soutter, councillors gave a cool reception to the health council proposal-some reeves suggesting it imposed another layer of bureaucracy in local processes.

The same warnings were echoed during Mr. Soutter's presence.

A steering committee is the organizational preliminary to a district health council for Prince Edward-Hastings.

Among its assignments are to overview health-care planning, identifying gaps and overlaps in services and act as a co-ordinator.

Mr. Soutter said health care delivery costs in Ontario are mounting. Five years ago he said it cost $214 per person; that's now up to $355, and by the 1980's could reach $1,000- for a total of $10 billion.

Reeve Felix Browne reiterated the fear that a district health council means more red tape.

Reeve George Lyons, Deseronto, said he believes such council would caused more confusion.

15 Days For Offence

Dean Lang Robinson, 21, of 128 Hastings Dr. in Belleville was sentenced to 15 days in county jail by Judge J. L. Clendenning in provincial court here Tuesday after pleading guilty to driving a motor vehicle while prohibited.

Robinson was arrested Oct. 19. He had been prohibited from driving for 6 months in Canada by Judge Clendenning June 25 when he appeared for driving while disqualified.

Judge Adds Fourth Charge at Hearing

Dennis Craig Moule, 24, of 21 West Lane Apt. 2 in Trenton was committed for trial on two counts of personation, possession of a firearm for the purpose of trafficking and possession of drugs obtained by crime following a preliminary hearing in provincial court here Tuesday.

Moule was originally charged by Ontario Provincial Police at Belleville with one count of personation and both possession charges but after hearing evidence, Judge J. L. Clendenning, in a rare legal move, committed Moule on the second personation count as well in connection with an incident in Trenton Oct. 5.

No date has been set for trial.

Police say the original charges followed a routine traffic check on highway 2 at Bayside Oct. 16

Ottawa To View Increase

A request to permit pay increases for nurses at Hastings Manor — the county home for the aged in Belleville will be taken to the federal anti-inflation board.

Hastings County councillors were told of the move Tuesday by Reeve Kenneth Smith, personnel committee chairman.

The problem: Traditionally the county pays the nurses the same rate that achieved by province-wide bargaining with the Ontario Nurses Association. That was earlier this year. But the county date for wage adjustments is Jan 1. Federal anti-inflation guidelines are to be made retroactive to October.

Therefore, said Reeve Smith, his committee will apply to the board for relief — since "we feel this group should be paid the same rate as is paid across the province."

Freeing Hydrants

Bill MacCormack, a Belleville Public Utilities Commission employee, clears the snow away from a fire hydrant on Bridge Street early today. The crew cleaned a path around all fire hydrants in the city.

'Nit-picking' Delaying County Plan

Delays in approving Hastings County's official plan was blamed by a county councillor Tuesday on "nit-picking" by provincial government bureaucrats.

Pynaraian at the logdraws process seeking provincial endorsement of the plan broke to the surface at the year's last session of county council.

The plan approved in June 1974 - was despatched for review by housing ministry officials 18 months ago.

Now, if the approval process isn't speeded up the issue will be taken to Housing Minister John Rhodes, said Reeve Felix Browne, of Sangor-Wicklow-McClure Township, who is county planning board chairman.

The problem is - "strictly a matter of academics" between civil servants and the board, he said.

Outside the meeting he said about 75 per cent of the plan's contents still under review is "just a matter of interpretation and words."

Ministry officials are "nit-picking" over such items, he said. The major remaining problem involved differences over land severances and rezoning for rural residential lots.

His committee he said will seek another meeting in Belleville with ministry officials. Failing success, they'll go to the minister. Reeve Browne said he is "very confident" ministerial approval could be obtained before Jan. 15-when council next meets.

"We're just tired and fed up with the bureaucratic control of this province. We want the elected representatives to have more say," said Reeve Browne.

Reeve Calvin White, of council veteran and member of the board, told council he is "disgusted" with ministry officials' response to the plan.

"They told us all along we were developing planning for Hastings County. It's a plan the Hastings County council and council, not the ministry."

recommendations of the civil servants in the department."

"I'm really disgusted with the disciplerial attitude that the civil service seems to have."

Both he and Reeve Browne stressed, however, they did not blame the minister.

Reeve Barbara Allen, of Tweed, said the situation was "completely contrary" to the spirit of decentralization we were led to expect."

Study Reveals New Aircraft Could Be Operated Profitably

OTTAWA (CP) — Studies indicate the Canadian-built, 48-seat DHC-7 aircraft could be operated profitably on the current unprofitable STOL air route between Ottawa and Montreal, says Malcolm Armstrong, a top transport department official.

Mr. Armstrong told the Senate finance committee today that studies by the department suggest the de Havilland DHC-7, or Dash 7, could be operated at a profit of $1 a passenger between the cities.

The current STOL takeoff and landing) service on this route uses de Havilland Twin Otters, an 11-seat aircraft. The Service is losing $3 a passenger now he said.

He said the figures are based on regular operating costs and do not reverse without including the airports for which two-year demonstration flights they say.

The larger Dash 7 is considered more economical to run than the small Twin Otter on busy inter-city routes.

Transport department officials say many customers have had to be turned away at peak hours on the Montreal-Ottawa service, operated by Airtransit and Air Canada subsidiary.

Less fuel is used per passenger in the Dash 7 and its engines are considered more efficient than the Twin Otter's in a way of preserving orchids

Technician Finds Way To Preserve Orchids

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — A technician at Queen's University has discovered a process that has preserved orchids and other flowers in their natural form for up to three years.

Jack Walsh, chief technician of the biology department, was given the job in 1972 of finding a way of preserving orchids so they would retain their color when suspended in a liquid.

Experimenting with various chemicals, he has been able to preserve the color and texture of orchids, lock the chlorophyll in a leaf to keep it soft and supple, retain the leaves on a conifer twig and preserve a cactus durable enough to be passed from hand to hand and studied minutely in a classroom, then returned to be stored with other objects for further use.

"After three years, there is no deterioration," he said. "I don't know how long the preserved specimens will last. It could be forever—but forever is a very long time."

He said that with a combination of chemicals, a dehydration process takes place. The treatment "holds the chain of carbons in the plant instead of what usually happens—a breakdown."

1975 - a Year of Triumph For Alberta's Lougheed

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta gave an overwhelming vote of confidence to Premier Peter Lougheed in 1975, providing the mandate he said was needed to deal with Ottawa on energy issues, and received a commitment that he will not leave the province to enter federal politics in 1976.

It was a year of glittering personal triumph for the 47-year-old Progressive Conservative premier, as his party won re-election by taking 69 of 75 legislature seats in the March general election.

And it was a dismal year of political humiliation for the once-mighty Social Credit party, ousted from power by the Lougheed Conservatives in 1971 after 36 consecutive years of governing the province. Social Credit, troubled by internal problems, won only four seats and party spokesmen readily conceded that a major overhaul is needed if the party is to survive.

Energy matters, which have occupied so much of Mr. Lougheed's time since 1971, remained in the forefront. Alberta joined with the governments of Ontario and Canada to pump in funds to save the massive Syncrude Canada Ltd. oil-sands project in northeastern Alberta.

The province, planning for the day when non-renewable energy resources run out, took steps to expand petrochemical and processing industries and appeared to be entering a new stage of co-operation, rather than confrontation with Ottawa on energy.

Mr. Lougheed received a larger mandate in the election than he sought. Stating that he wanted to go to the April energy conference with "the full confidence of the people of Alberta," the premier said he would consider a gain of one seat [o 58 as a strong mandate to negotiate higher energy prices.

Instead, his party gained 5[illegible] seats from the 49 held at dissolution and Social Credit tumbled downhill from the 22 members elected in 1971.

Under increasing pressure from federal Conservatives to run for the national leadership in 1976, Mr. Lougheed flatly turned down a series of overture. "I consider myself fully committed to completing the job I was elected to do, to guide Alberta, as premier, through the difficult transition period of the '70s."

Mr. Lougheed came to widespread national attention in 1973 and 1974 during the often bitter close struggle with Ot.awa over oil and natural gas. He fought vigorously to raise prices, saying producers needed incentives to find new supplies, and challenged what he considered to be federal attempts to take control from the province of resources.

The energy conference and subsequent negotiations resulted in oil prices rising to $8 a barrel from $4.50, with federal commitments to eventually move up to international levels. Natural gas climbed to an average wellhead price of 97 cents per thousand cubic feet, a six-fold increase from the prices in existence when the Conservatives took office.

Price increases plus Ottawa's decision to allow exploration companies to deduct on federal income tax part of the royalty payments made to the province, keynot "certainty and stability" to the resource industry the premier sold.

And instead of the unfriendly peril of recent years when Alberta temporarily broke off energy talks with Ottawa and severed the federal government's wide-line pricing agreements, Mr. Lougheed talked about the two governments "working cooperatively in concert in the best interest of Canadians."

The mood of co-operation was seen when the Syncrude operators ran into financial problems and the three-company consortium threatened to slow construction unless more money was found. Recognizing the urgent need to develop energy sources to fill the gap when conventional supplies are depleted, Ottawa put $700 million into the project, Alberta $300 million and Ontario $100 million.

Proposals for more than 20 petrochemical plants, mostly based in central and southern Alberta and costing billions of dollars were formalized in 1975 as the province announced intentions for a world-scale petrochemical industry.

One of the largest proposals is a $1.5-billion plant in the Red Deer region that would use Alberta natural gas to produce ethylene, the chief ingredient in a wide range of plastic products.

"Instead of continuing to ship good jobs down the pipeline to Ontario, we will start to process these resources here in Alberta," the premier said. With major petrochemical developments, "our young people will not have to leave the province to find jobs in the future."

Shuts Shop

LUTON, England (CP) — A witchcraft shop kept by Bernie Ratcliffe, 24, was the object of prayers that it would close down, says Rev. David Redall and his Baptist Bible study group. Redall insists that the prayers helped in closing the shop which was selling books on witchcraft and black magic and was a blot on the town." But Ratcliffe says he finally had found an ideal shop in Whitby after three years of searching.

Salvation Army Spread Westward with Evangelism

Written for CP
By LESLIE K. TARR

"Send more officers ever to help us," cabled the Salvation Army leader from the whole Northwest at a time of inflation."

That crisp, colorful message was sent from Winnipeg to Dresden to report the Salvation Army's entry into the Canadian West in 1882. Just four years earlier, the Army had stormed into Canada to commence its rescue crusade.

From all parts of the country they sent back to headquarters the startling reports. Two lost men per day dead to Hell. Everybody on the march and some on their knees. What a graphic dispatch from Victorian times!

By that year, The Salvation Army had spread from coast to coast in an unprecedented five years of whirlwind evangelism.

Although its growth in recent years has not been so spectacular, The Salvation Army still is very much on the march. In 1978, the census showed 16,000 Salvationists. By 1981, that had increased to 18,000. The Army has 362 citadels or congregations across Canada.

As its name suggests, The Salvation Army sees the spiritual life as warfare. When converted, the Christian is to become an active soldier of Christ who wages battle on every front.

Fervently evangelistic, The Salvation Army mobilized all its members and Territorial Commanders released a statement reaffirming that all soldiers were to abstain from alcohol.

The battle against alcohol, however, does not consist of a series of bitter crusades. Salvation Army Harbour Light centres and Canadian clinics have been instrumental in assisting thousands on the road to sobriety. Started in 1865, they express Christian compassion in practical terms.

Such social services is seen as the other side of the coin of evangelism. The Salvation Army hospitals in Canada have 969 halfway houses, and homes for unmarried mothers are other expressions of Christian compassion a story told by Catherine Booth.

Since its inception, The Salvation Army has been concerned for prisoners. In major Canadian cities, Army officers are assigned to full-time court duty and prison chaplaincy.

Every member of The Salvation Army is expected to be an active soldier for God in the local corps, he or she will find many service opportunities — community service, Christian education, youth work, band, visitation teams.

Officers of The Salvation Army (the equivalent of ministers) are trained in the two colleges of Toronto and St. John's, Nfld., men and women work side by side, and married women assume the same rank of the officer as their husbands. One notable Evangeline Booth, daughter of the founder, became a general and served as international leader.

A Canadian, General Clarence Wiseman, heads the international Salvation Army. Elected in 1976, he is the first Canadian to reach that rank.

The October world conference at which General Wiseman presided, left no doubt that The Salvation Army was committed to bold evangelism. The conference statement announcing the 1976 "Share Your Faith" campaign stated that it was hoped that the campaign would "commence with renewed conviction of individual Salvationists, and lead to the winning of many for Christ."

You can fairly hear the beat of the drums!

Louise K. Tarr is professor of homiletics and communication at Central Baptist Seminary in Toronto.

Minister Claims His Own People Are Misunderstood

RICHMOND, B.C. (CP) — Rev. Tom Ekhos says his parishioners are widely misunderstood.

The United Church minister runs the Aviation Industrial Ministry at Vancouver International Airport where he holds counselling sessions with groups of individuals.

Mr. Ekhos said the general public has fantasies about the people who keep the world on the wing. 24 hours a day but confesses a sense of frustration for airwardsmen and the lingering image of jet pilots just don't fit reality."

"People here have the same problems as other segments of the population," he said.

"The public did not realize the lacrimose flight crews made to keep people flying around the world," he added.

"It's a lonely job which puts great stress on people," Mr. Ekhos said. "They are away from home and can't get involved in the community pursuits that the nine-to-five guy can.

"They can't join service clubs, lodges, sports club or anything like that because they're not there long enough. Even if they are away so often. So they tend to do things like sailing, golf or anything they can do without belonging to an organization.

"After a while there creeps in a feeling of isolation and it takes pretty strong people to cope with it."

Mr. Ekhos tries to ease the load and sometimes provides his help with no compensation.

In September, there was one ball tightening so he had to manage without pay.

But the work is still there, he said. "I'm as busy as ever."

Goalie Supplies the Spark

Resch Has Islanders Flying

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Goalie Glenn Resch of the New York Islanders figures the only way to catch Philadelphia Flyers is to win almost every game you play.

Lately, Resch has been living by that formula. The youngster recorded his second shutout and third win in a row Tuesday as the Islanders blanked Minnesota North Stars 6-0 in a National Hockey League game.

The Islanders couldn't do much else but win those three games. The only goal he has given up was in the first period of a 6-1 win over St. Louis Blues last week.

"We're playing well together," Resch said. "We've got three lines flying and it's good because if we're going to make a run at Philadelphia (the Stanley Cup champions), this is the kind of hockey we've got to play.

"We have to get like Philly and lose maybe once in every 18 games."

In Tuesday's other NHL games, Atlanta Flames crushed Washington Capitals 7-1, Kansas City Scouts edged Pittsburgh Penguins 3-2 and Vancouver Canucks dropped St. Louis 5-3.

Resch, who blanked Buffalo Sabres 3-0 on Sunday night, had an easy time with the struggling North Stars, who managed only 22 shots on goal.

"I started out saying I wouldn't allow more than one goal," said Resch, "But as I got nearer and nearer the shutout, I really wanted it."

Bryan Trottier, Clark Gillies, Andre St. Laurent, Lorne Henning and Gary Howatt had a goal each for the Islanders.

Eddie Westfall of the Islanders pulled a muscle in his right biceps in the second period and had to be taken out of the game. The extent of the injury was not known.

Tom Lysiak scored two goals against the Capitals to help the Flames reach the .500 mark for the first time this season. They have 13 wins, 12 losses and two ties.

"It's a lot easier to come home against a team like Washington than against out of the say, Montreal," said Flames coach Fred "Cyclone" Taylor. "We're scoring and that's encouraging."

The Flames returned home after a long road trip in which they won three of four games to improve their record to 8-6 away from home while tumbling at home with a 5-7-2 mark.

Atlanta had 45 shots on goal, only three shy of a club record, Washington took only 19 shots.

Only 8,127 Kansas City fans were on hand to see Jean-Guy Legace score a short-handed goal in the third period to give the Scouts their win. Randy Rota and Simon Nolet scored the other Kansas City goals.

Chris Oddleifson scored twice for Vancouver in the second period in the Canucks' 5-3 win over St. Louis at Vancouver Coliseum.

Buffalo Sabres' Peter McNab slides into goal as startled New York Rangers' goalie John Davidson appears to be holding forward at bay with stick. Action took place in recent National Hockey League game in Buffalo.

seems to be doing wonders for son Mark, who appeared to have ended a season-long scoring slump while Gordie was out of two-game suspension.

Mark stepped up with his second two-goal game of his injury-plagued season Tuesday night, spurring Houston Aeros to a 4-4 win over Cincinnati Stingers.

The four goals also doubled this year's goal production for Mark, a 24-year-old left winger in his fifth season with the Aeros.

Gordie was handed a two-game suspension after drawing a game misconduct for protesting what he termed "a high-stick-ing penalty he drew in a Friday night game against Winnipeg.

He later accepted part of his elbow to punctuate his remarks to referee Ron Asselstine. The suspension was the first of Gordie's 26-year career. The same suspension handed goalie Ron Grahame for the same incident in the same game didn't appear to impair his reflexes behind Houston's goal.

The Stingers had an edge in the first period when Grahame and Howe's keep the Aeros in the game.

Mark Howe's second goal, with less than five minutes to play broke a 4-4 tie. Andre Hinse, Mike Veisor and Terry Ruskowski were the other Houston scorers.

Rookie goalie Dave Tataryn had another impressive outing for Cincinnati although he lost the Saints got goals from Bobby Leiter, Mike Antonovich, Wayne Cashman and Steve Vickers to beat the Toros.

The Toros' appearance with the Saints by Dave Keon, Norm Ullman and Terry Harper, Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League, drew only 2,343 customers.

Toros coach Bobby Baun told the players before the game he was disappointed in their performance in losing to Cincinnati two weeks after losing to the Stingers.

Baun's Toronto appearance with the Saints by Dave Keon, Norm Ullman and Terry Harper, Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League, drew only 2,343 customers.

Marlies Thrashed by Fincups

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Peter Ihnacak and Jim Corsi scored three goals and assisted on another as Sudbury Wolves moved into a first-place tie with the scoring lead in the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A League Tuesday night as Hamilton Fincups to an 11-3 victory over Toronto Marlboros.

The 11 goals increased the division-leading Fincups' total in their last four games to 43. In their consecutive home games they have scored a total of 27 goals and allowed only seven.

In other action, Peterborough Petes defeated Oshawa Generals 4-2 and London Knights stayed within four points of Hamilton by defeating Kitchener Rangers 7-4. The Knights and the Fincups are scheduled to meet Friday in a game at London.

At Hamilton, Toronto scored first but the Fincups replied with 10 consecutive goals before the Marlboros got their second goal late in the third period.

Left winger Joe Kowal scored three goals in the first period and added two assists for the Fincups.

Hamilton's Joe Contini had two goals and four assists. Archie King had two goals and Ric Seiling scored once and assisted on three others before l...061 spectators.

John Smrke and Cary Farelli scored for the Marlboros who trailed 3-1 after the first period and 7-1 after the second.

There were 13 penalties, including two fighting majors in each team and a game misconduct to Rob Mertkins of Hamilton.

The Fincups outshot Toronto 38-25.

Toronto Club Seeks Damages

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Marlboro hockey club is seeking damages for the loss of John Powell for the final 24½ seasons of his contract with the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A league.

In a statement of claim filed with the Supreme Court of Ontario, the Toronto Marlboro Hockey Club is seeking damages from Tonelli, agent Gus Badali, Gus Badali Inc., Houston Aeros and the World Hockey Association.

The Marlboros allege Tonelli breached his contract last season when he signed a three-year contract with the Aeros. The Marlboros are seeking damages for loss of Tonelli's services for services rendered to the player.

If the civil suit succeeds, the Marlboros will seek a permanent injunction that will prevent Tonelli from playing professional hockey for the duration of his junior contract without the consent of the Marlboros.

Last week, the Supreme Court of Ontario rejected a Marlboro application for a preliminary injunction to keep Tonelli from playing for Houston.

Campbell Hands Out Suspension

MONTREAL (CP) — Phil Roberto of Detroit Red Wings was given a four-game suspension Tuesday by president Clarence Campbell of the National Hockey League as the result of a fourth penalty received during eight wings' game as a Wednesday Dec. 3.

Roberto was given the penalty by referee Lewis Fair for deliberate injury after he struck Don Lever of the Canucks in the throat with his stick. Campbell suspended Roberto indefinitely after Fair's report was reported and the right winger immediately.

Detroit's last two games.

To complete the suspension Roberto will miss the Red Wings' next two games—tonight when Pittsburgh Penguins visit Detroit and Friday Light when in team visits Washington.

In addition to losing pay for the four suspension, Roberto will cote must pay the $200 fine that goes with a match penalty. Alex MacDonald, attorney-general for British Columbia, said his government is looking into the incident.

The Wanderer Is Back

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Toros of the World Hockey Association may wind up with five goaltenders if they are able to sign a prodigal Gilles Gratton.

Gratton, who quit St. Louis Blues of the National Hockey League last week, is expected to return to the Toros as goalie as he clears waivers in the WHA.

The Toros had released him with a five-year contract at the end of last season to join the Blues after a series of spats with management of the Toronto team.

If they sign him, the Toros will have Mario Viens, who has been the regular for most of this season, rookie Dave Tataryn and veterans Les Binkley and Jim Shaw, who both are injured.

Tataryn, up from Whitby Warriors of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series on a trial basis, has been playing too well to send back down, he had 26 saves in Tuesday's 3-3 loss to Minnesota North Stars.

Moscow Selects Down Voyageurs

HALIFAX (CP) — Moscow Selects came from behind in the third period to defeat Nova Scotia Voyageurs of the American Hockey League 4-2 Tuesday night.

Vladimir Devitsov scored twice for Moscow, and Alexander Kulikov and Vladimir Petrov scored single goals. Pierre Mondou scored both Nova Scotia goals in the losers' effort.

Nova Scotia fired 42 shots at Moscow goalie Vladimir Yeremeyuk, compared to only 22 shots on Ed Walsh in the Nova Scotia net.

The Voyageurs led 1-0 at the end of the first and 2-1 at the end of the second period. The Selects scored three unanswered goals in the third, including one into an empty net.

It was the first in a series of seven games in Canada for the Selects, but the Voyageurs is the only professional they will meet.

The Selects were heeled up by a number of players from the Canadian International team including Alexander Kulikov, Petrov, Alexander Filipov, Vladimir Repnikov, Vladimir Kovalev and Sergei Kotov.

Baltimore Clips Springfield 4-2

BALTIMORE (AP) — Dennis Giannini scored two goals as Baltimore Clippers defeated Springfield Indians 4-3 in the only American Hockey League game Tuesday night.

The Indians opened the scoring just 1:22 into the game as Murray Kinsk scored his fifth goal of the season. But Giannini scored for the Clippers one minute later.

Baltimore outshot Springfield 44-4 in the middle period. Springfield goalie Jerry Cheevers made several outstanding saves, however, limiting the Clippers to three goals second goal.

Baltimore's Bob Craig got what proved to be the game winner in the third period as Springfield rallied on a goal by Hugh Harvey. The Clippers' final goal came with 36 seconds remaining as defenseman Ray Newwater slid the puck into an empty net.

Richardson finished with 13 saves while his counterpart, Bob Sneddon, had 24 stops. The two were the record in a row for Baltimore while Springfield suffered its fourth consecutive loss.

The opinion of a Hockey Night In Canada or La Soiree de Hockey analyst is well worth listening to — they speak with a combined experience encompassing literally thousands of goals scored, assists earned and stiff body checks given and received. Except that they lack a goaltender they make an almost unbeatable All-Star team.

For starters the team would feature the great Jean Beliveau at centre, backed by Doug Marshall, long one of the game's most honest workers. On the right side there'd be the incomparable Maurice Richard, spelled off by Howie Meeker who might outtalk the Rocket although he couldn't outscore him. There's no problem on left wing either with Dickie Moore, Gilles Tremblay and rugged John Ferguson offering their services.

On defence HNIC's team would have to make do with Bob Goldham and Babe Pratt — no problem there. While they have nobody in the nets they'd have the puck so often they might not need anybody. If they did they could rely on defence-man Goldham who stopped more shots than many a goalie in his day.

There are many awards and honors that have been won by HNIC's All-Stars and four of them, Beliveau, Pratt, Moore and Richard have already been inducted into hockey's Hall of Fame.

Beliveau has won the Hart trophy as the NHL's Most Valuable Player on two occasions, while Richard and Pratt each won it once.

The Art Ross trophy as the league's leading point-getter went to Moore twice, in 1958 and '59 and to Beliveau in 1956. Richard led the league in goal scoring on five occasions, Beliveau twice and Moore once.

Amazing Meeker was the only Hockey Night In Canada All-Star to win the Calder trophy, awarded to the NHL's top rookie.

Ferguson, who'd be the team's policeman, led the league in penalties in 1966-67 with 177 minutes and Richard held the dubious honor in 1952-53 with 112 minutes.

Beliveau and Richard were almost automatic 1st and 2nd All-Star team selections, while Moore, Pratt, Marshall were all chosen at least once.

The colorful and enthusiastic Pratt is Hockey Night In Canada's analyst on all Vancouver home games while the irrepressible Meeker and the quiet-spoken, astute Goldham analyse how things happen in Toronto home games. Beliveau, Richard, Ferguson, Moore, Marshall and Tremblay share in both the English and French language telecasts from Montreal.

They were All-Stars on the ice and now they're doing an all-how things happen in Toronto star job behind the microphones as Hockey Night In Canada's analysts.

Lions, Jim's Play Anyway

With their Ontario Minor Hockey Association league games postponed Tuesday, Belleville Jim's Pizzeria Juveniles and Lions Major Midgets put ice time at Memorial Arena to good use, hooking up in an exhibition match.

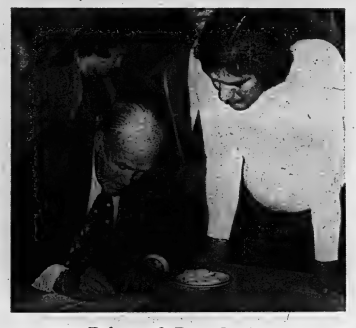
Three-goal efforts by Ray Skelly and Gord Male led the Juveniles to an 8-4 victory. Tony Bennett and Mark Foster notched singles.

Roaring for Lions were Randy Hutchison with a pair, Rob Bunton and Bobby Crawford.

The teams were all even at 3-3 heading for the third period.

In an exhibition contest, the Rollin's Preserve Majors topped Wellington 8-3. Stu Emerson and D'Arcy Meagher scored twice each and Bryson Lamont, Brian Williams, Neil McKeown and Steve Molnski each potted singles.

Tony Pitney and Alvin Holmes replied for Wellington.



Once a King, Always a King

WARKWORTH — The snow Tuesday night was so heavy that visibility was poor and driving was next to impossible. For Frank (King) Clancy, vice-president of the NHL Toronto Maple Leafs, the night meant something special and the 80-mile trip from Toronto to Warkworth in blinding snow was little problem for the ex-skater — it was the Annual Sports Dinner and awards presentations at Warkworth Institution, which Clancy has attended for several years now as the guest of honour.

"I wouldn't have missed tonight for anything," he said during one of his light-hearted addresses to the gathering of about 140 inmates and guests. "I feel like part of the game here now."

"But I miss a lot of the faces tonight that I knew a year ago and two years ago," he said, as he mentioned some of the personal acquaintances he had developed with the inmates over the years.

It was also a night for the inmates to remember Clancy, as they presented him with a plaque of recognition for the time he has devoted to them over the years. A similar plaque, given him by the inmates a couple of years ago, still hangs in his office at Maple Leaf Gardens, and he professed pride at the memories it brings, as well as the comments he receives from his daily clientele concerning it.

The star of the evening on the inmate's side of the dinner, was Louis Longpre, heralded as the institution's all-around superstar. Longpre was long an achievement during the past sports season, and was presented trophies as captain of the winning major league softball team, best male league pitcher in the playoffs, and as the Athlete of the Day at the Summer Olympics held at the institution.

Jack Schryb, director of the Junior A Peterborough Petes was also present at the dinner, and presented the inmates with tickets to see his hockey club in action.

And Stan Obodiac, public relations director of Maple Leaf Gardens, mentioned that he hoped to bring Johnny Cash to next year's dinner, should he be available at the time.

"And, God willing," quipped Clancy emphatically, "which-ever you want me or not, I'll be back too."

Canning, Hunt Lead Rolloff

Belleville bowlers Jack Canning and Bea Hunt show the way in the Carling-O'Keefe five-pin bowling rolloff after the first two 10-game legs of the competition.

When the rolloff resumes Sunday at Belleville Bowl-O-Drome, Canning and Hunt will carry comfortable leads into the final 10-game series.

Canning came out of the 10-game set in Trenton, Sunday, with a 30-game total pinfall of 5,475, an average of 272. His total in the first 10 games rolled December 30 at Brantwick Belleville Bowl, was 2,868.

Bea Hunt's 30-game total reads 5,169. She has put together 10-game efforts of 2,580 and 2,500.

Runner-up to Bea in the women's section is Belleville's Marg Rattan who has a total of 4,698. Madeline Lazore, also of Belleville, is third with 4,566.

Belleville's Jim Corlies and Trenton's Wally Hamilton are second and third, behind Canning.

Corlies sports a pinfall of 5,091 while Dance checks in with 4,923.

More Than Sinuses Clogged in Gas House

Congestion is a key word in winter and Chuckwagon Foods is making sure it applies to the Gas House Hockey League. Tuesday night, the caterers completed the first half of their regular schedule with a 6-3 victory over Jim's Pizzeria to move within one point of first place Bob's Sports.

In other GHHL contests, Bayview Orchards dumped Preston and Cambria 6-1 and Bel-Con Engineering nipped a shorthanded Rollin's Lumber 3-1.

Six players shared in lighting up the Chuckwagon half of the scoresheet. John Smith, Terry Casselman, Wayne Brown, Steve Moore, Don Donaldson and Gary Sero each collected a goal.

Jim Kincaid, Meehan Bonnar and Mike Kings were the marksmen for Jim's.

The victory gives Chuckwagon 16 points on eight wins, identical to the pace set by the Yardmen, and just off the mark of Bob's, which has eight wins and a tie in their first 18 games.

Steve Trudeau scored twice for Bayview and added an assist in leading the Orchards' team to their fifth win of the season. Dave Langtiel, Wayne Flavelle, Hyalie Bryant and Ken Bertrand scored once each.

Ron McIntyre replied for Procter and Gamble.

Bill Burley and Rob Foster were the marksmen for Bel-Con and Mike Jones tallied the lone goal for Rollins.

The newspaper, in the first of a four-part series on gay athletes, says it conducted lengthy psychologists and members of the gay community across the United States during the last three months.

The newspaper listed among its findings that:

—The intense is the anti-gay public pressure that many male athletes who prefer homosexual relationships maintain fronts as married men with children.

—The percentage of male homosexuals in sport probably is close to the same five per cent as in society at large.

—Up to 20 per cent of women athletes, including several tennis and golf stars, are lesbians, compared to five per cent in society at large.

—Gay athletes, male and female, feel that public knowledge of their homosexuality would destroy their playing careers and eliminate any outside income from endorsements or business.

HOCKEY TIPS

Canadian NHL hockey hall-of-famer

Passing and Moving the Puck

After passing the emphasis on skating, it's time to devote time to another of hockey's basic skills — PASSING.

A complete player will know how to give and receive a pass properly. Passing the puck involves the same motion used in taking a wrist shot. It's essential not to slap the puck but to sweep it across the ice to the recipient of the pass. Generally, again similar to the wrist shot, when passing you start with the puck slightly behind you and sweep it.

Before you pass the puck, make certain you have your head up and are looking at your target. Keeping your head up is also wise because it removes the possibility of an opponent checking you hard with his body. Many players are hurt because they are hit with solid body checks when they keep their eyes on the puck.

Once all the steps are done and the pass is delivered, make certain it's a nice flat pass — unless you have to flip the puck to avoid an interception or opposing player. It's not safe to make a soft pass because it leads to easy interceptions.

A quick review of passing the puck goes something like this: 1) Keep your head up at all times; 2) Pick your target; 3) Sweep a hard pass to the target like you would taking a wrist shot; 4) Follow the play on ice.

The major problem we find with youngsters is they hold their sticks too hard when receiving a pass. Once the puck hits your stick, cushion the puck by giving with the stick just a little bit. If you don't, the puck will glance off the stick.

The pass receiver should always keep his stick on the ice and offer a target to his teammate. If the pass is flipped into the air, use your glove and bat the puck down to the stick. DON'T try to bat it out of the air.

Bobby Clarke of Philadelphia Flyers is one of the better passers in the NHL which explains one of the reasons he had 89 assists last season. Watch him at work sometimes.

Passing the puck and receiving the pass are easy to practise. In workouts, pick a teammate and skate the length of the ice passing the puck back and forth. Learn to receive and give your passes on your backhand because it too is a valuable skill. Don't forget, keep your head up.

Barrie and Swedish Oldtimers Match Skills

BARRIE, Ont. (CP) — Barrie Oldtimers defeated Mora Swedish Veterans 7-3 in International Oldtimers hockey competition Tuesday.

Don Coulson scored two goals to lead Barrie. Other goals were scored by Jon Weeks, Don Graves, Gerry McBride, Bob Bentley and Ed Mayhew.

Rangers Bury Raiders

OTTAWA (CP) — Gloucester Rangers went on the most one-sided scoring spree of the Central Junior Hockey League season Tuesday, beating Nepean Raiders 14-1.

It was no contest from the outset as the Rangers outshot the Raiders 45-22 and held 6-1 and 8-1 period leads.

Louis Lortie scored four times and Kevin Benson and Steve Dawe three times each while Mark Campbell, Mario Lortie, Don Anderson and Junior D Claude Saumure scored single goals.

Billy Nell was the lone scorer for Nepean, which had only 13 players for the game, including two goalies.

The game was the only one scheduled Tuesday. The next scheduled game is Thursday when Pembroke Lumber Kings are in Rockland against the Nationals.

Backs Are Vulnerable

WASHINGTON (AP) — Running backs and defensive cornerbacks are the most likely players to be injured in National Football League games, a private study reveals.

The study, done for the NFL by the Stanford Research Institute, also shows that players so offensive teams are injured more than their defensive counterparts.

The study shows that linebackers have a higher-than-average injury rate and it says that members of special teams handling kicks sustain more severe injuries in terms of recovery rates than do players on the regular offensive and defensive units.

The study confirms that knees continue to sustain more injuries than any other part of the body. It also says younger and more inexperienced players consistently sustain a higher proportion of injuries.

Select Committe Approves Amendment for Store Hours

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government's bill to limit Sunday retail operations was approved by a select committee Tuesday with several amendments, including one that the solicitor-general said could serve doubts on the legislation's constitutionality.

The douthful amendment, proposed by the New Democratic Party members of the committee, changed an amendment proposed by Solicitor-General John MacBeth, the bill's sponsor.

Mr. MacBeth proposed a change to allow such leeway for merchants whose religious sabbaths are Saturday.

His measure would have excluded from the bill small stores that have been closed for 24 hours preceding Sunday. They would have to close from 7 p.m. on Friday. The traditional Jewish sabbath is observed from sundown Friday.

However, the NDP amendment inserted the words "for religious reasons" as a condition of closing.

Mr. MacBeth said he feels the words might form the basis for a challenge of the measure on a constitutional basis.

He said religious matters traditionally have come under the jurisdiction of the federal government, a tradition upheld by the Supreme Court of Canada.

The minister said he does not want to say outright the change makes the bill ultra vires, or outside the province's jurisdiction.

"But if I were in practice I'd say that clause would give me a place to hang my hat in a court case."

Another NDP amendment removed a clause that would have allowed the cabinet to exempt businesses from the bill by simple regulation.

As it now stands, the bill will force most retail stores to close on Sundays and eight other holidays: New Year's Day; Good Friday; Dominion Day; Labor Day; Christmas Day; Victoria Day; Thanksgiving Day and Boxing Day.

Small stores of less than 2,400 square feet employing three or fewer employees are exempt, as are small stores selling antiques, handicrafts, nursery stocks and flowers, pets and fresh fruit and vegetables in season.

Gasoline stations also are exempt.

The NDP members failed in an attempt to set a minimum fine under the legislation. The maximum fine is set at $10,000.

The bill must go back to the legislature and, if approved there, goes into effect Jan. 1.

Cottagers Take Education Board To Court Over Ban on Students

TORONTO (CP) — A spokesman for an Ontario cottagers' group said Tuesday it is planning to take the Simcoe County board of education to court over its decision to bar Metropolitan Toronto students who want to go to school in the county.

More than 85 students have asked to attend Simcoe schools during the Metro high school teachers' strike, while living at their parents' cottages.

Gordon McWhinney, president of the Federation of Ontario Cottagers Association, said in an interview that cottager owners pay education taxes and should be allowed to send their children to the schools they help pay for.

John Gillies, information officer for the ministry of education, said the board must accept the students if the parents are paying taxes.

Jack Ramsay, director of education for Simcoe County, said the issue never has been tested and "we're not sure if it's illegal. That's a question for the courts to decide."

Meanwhile, negotiators for striking Metropolitan Toronto high school teachers were asked Tuesday to consider changes in the "shaping of their" proposal as well as the number," said Montreal lawyer Stanley Hartt, one of the three mediators.

Mr. Hartt said the shaping of the proposal might include length of contract, dates when pay raises would become effective and what salary classifications would receive greater or lesser increases.

Another mediator, William Dickie, Ontario's assistant deputy minister of labor, said a settlement might be reached this week. The strike, which has disrupted classes for 140,000 students, enters its 21st teaching day today.

Ontario Removes Fortified Wines

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government has removed fortified wines from some provincial liquor outlets because of abuses, Sidney Handleman, consumer and commercial relations minister, said Tuesday.

The minister told the legislature that the government is aware of the problems cited by Jim Foulds (NDP—Port Arthur) who said fortified wines are used in some parts of Ontario as a "cheap god."

Fortified wines are kept under the counter in Kenora liquor outlets and sold to native people who come in for the liquor, he said. Such wines have an alcohol content of at least 14 per cent.

Mr. Handleman said fortified wines accounted for 67 per cent of the wine market in 1960. The percentage in 1974 was 36.1 per cent.

The government will monitor the "very delicate situation" raised by Mr. Foulds, the minister said. He said he soon will reveal the areas where stores no longer stock such wines.

The discussion on fortified wines took place during consideration of legislation allowing Ontario wine producers to use grain alcohol as a fortifier instead of higher-priced, foreign sugar.

Mr. Handleman said this legislation would allow Ontario wines to be more competitive with foreign products.

Labor Minister Optimistic Over Talks

TORONTO (CP) — Labor Minister Bette Stephenson said Tuesday she is optimistic that negotiations will resume between labor and management in Ontario's pulp and paper industry.

Dr. Stephenson said in an interview that she met privately with representatives of the Canadian Paperworkers Union and the presidents of three paper companies.

She said the four-hour meeting was useful and she will meet both sides again Saturday.

About 11,000 paperworkers have been on strike since last summer.

Last week, the legislature suspended regular business to discuss the issue which is damaging to communities where paper mills represent the main employer.

The minister said she is optimistic that progress can be made to settle the strike.

She said Tuesday's session was held at the government's initiative.

Fan Arrested

BRENTFORD, England (CP) — Town chairman Dan Tana says he arrested a Watford fan recently for chanting obscenities during a sporting event. Tana said he felt embarrassed for his wife, children and guests as he went into the crowd and told the man concerned that he was spoiling others' fun. The police subsequently took the fan away. Tana says he wants the public to know that Brentford directors will not stand this sort of language.

Lovers Hit

LONDON (CP) — Two sweethearts were run over recently as they lay making love in the northwest suburbs of this city. They were knocked unconscious but recovered. The motorist was fined $200 for drunk driving and banned from driving for a year.

Infrequent Reports Hurt Big-game Management

KENTVILLE, N.S. (CP)—The simple act of not reporting a legitimate hunt may have far-reaching effects on wildlife populations, says a big-game biologist with the provincial government.

Art Patton has nothing but criticism for hunters who have not taken more interest in the wildlife resource they hunt annually.

"A discouragingly low 24 per cent of the 1974 deer hunters cared enough about their hunting" to return a card reporting their kill, says Mr. Patton, and this makes him an angry man.

"With 76-per-cent disinterest among those directly involved in the consumptive use of our wildlife resources, it seems probable that anti-hunting groups, joining forces with those having vested interests in developing valuable wildlife habitat for other uses, could in the near future so alter the Nova Scotia environment that wildlife management, wildlife and hunting would be left space only in history books."

The game biologist and his colleagues consider data provided on the report cards by hunters as important and even essential in their research involving wildlife.

Mr. Patton says that if only one-quarter of the hunters are interested enough in the province to provide the data, then the knowledge will only be one-quarter as great and the management based on it one-quarter as valid as it should be.

If this is to be the attitude of the hunter, says the biologist, then the resource, the hunter and his fellow man would be "better off if he spent his licence fee money on an evening of bowling instead."

Ms. Patton stressed that the knowledge and the needs of the wildlife resource can only be obtained through the gathering and study of facts about a wide variety of aspects of the animals involved.

The management, therefore, was only as good as the quantity and quality of these facts, and a major source of the facts was the hunter.

Hunters had access to much information concerning a greater number of animals than was available anywhere else, of their data brought together in one single compilation could be the single greatest volume of knowledge available on a given population.

Device Bugs

NEW YORK (AP) — Float Owner magazine says that an air-ground electronic system is expected to be locating and tracking stolen trucks and freight within a year. The device which is the size of two cigarette packs laid end to end, is effective over a 25-mile range and works as long as it is not completely surrounded by metal. Key areas of use will include valuable items such as furs, television sets and appliances.

Agriculture Aided

BUDAPEST (AP) — Hungary has signed a long-term credit agreement to provide North Vietnam with aid and equipment to improve communications and agriculture, the Hungarian news agency MTI says.

Almost Fired

SOFIA (CP) — Police dog Tobuko was almost relieved from duty when he lost four teeth while trying to stop a car in which a suspect was escaping. But now he is back on duty in the Bulgarian capital with four chromium-cobalt teeth made especially for him by a leading dental laboratory.

Beginners Play

NEW YORK (AP) — Thirty-four rookies gained starting positions in the National Football League this season among 208 first-year players. Among the starters this fall was Atlanta's quarterback Steve Bartkowski, the NFL number one draft choice.

Company May Appeal

DULUTH, Minn. (AP) — Attorneys for Reserve Mining Co. are expected to appeal a judge's order that they pay $100,000 toward emergency water filtration facilities. The order was issued when the court determined the company was responsible for discharge of taconite tailings found in the water supply of six cities on Lake Superior.

Judge Convinced

LOS ALAMOS, N.M. (AP) — Fred VanderMast charged with speeding, argued that the inventor of the police radar unit therefore affects a speed radar unit. He said a thunderstorm struck in the area 15 minutes after he received the ticket. Municipal Judge Raymond E. Hunter said that static electricity in the air could foul the otherwise straight radar beam and result in a false reading. He found VanderMast innocent.

Detecting Lies

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Lie detector tests are being used by some businesses here to help screen job applicants. Small businessmen are using the test because of help hurt by employee thefts, Mel Cheney, operator of a lie detector company, said his clients are with service stations, janitorial services, convenience stores, truck stops, restaurants, inventory services and liquor stores.

Death Defined

CHICAGO (AP) — Illinois' new law defining death says it is "the irreversible cessation of total brain function according to the usual and customary standards of medicine." The Association of Illinois Transplant Surgeons supported the bill. Dr. Frank P. Stuart, chairman of the association, said that some physicians feared lawsuits if they discontinued ventilatory support even for a patient whose brain was totally dead.

Be Wary of Telephone Solicitations Warn OPP

Ontario Provincial Police (OPP) advise residents to be wary of telephone solicitations for funds and donations for needy people at Christmas.

In a news release issued Tuesday, Chief Insp. Fred R. Blucher, OPP community services branch director, said the OPP anti-rackets branch is deluged with enquiries from citizens "in regard to province wide telephone solicitations for funds or requests for donations to various charities."

"With the Christmas season approaching, the main solicitation now is for Christmas parties for the needy or handicapped children," he noted.

"Solicitors are requesting funds from the public for advertising in Christmas party programs or for the purchase of tickets that are to be given to the underprivileged or handicapped children," he elaborated.

Insp. Blucher commented although "participation in these schemes must be by individual choice — a very small portion of the gross collections ever go any further than the fund raiser's pocket."

Driver Faces Charge After Friday Mishap

GLEN MILLER — Campbell Gilchrist, 26, of 11 King St., in Frankford is charged with careless driving in connection with a one-car accident late Friday on Highway 33, ¼ mile north of this hamlet.

Ontario Provincial Police at Belleville released complete details of the mishap Tuesday which sent Gilchrist and two of his three passengers to Trenton Memorial Hospital where they are listed in satisfactory condition with assorted injuries. The third passenger was treated and released for minor injuries.

Police say a 1975 — model Chevrolet Chevelle was southbound when it failed to negotiate a left-hand curve, crossed the west shoulder and struck two telephone poles, two trees and a guidepost in its flight.

Constable Garnet Brown estimated $4,000 damages to the car, $400 damage to the poles and $15 damage to the guidepost in the 11 p.m. accident.

Louisville Bus Drivers Still Uneasy Over Busing

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (CP) — A heavy rain pelted out of the early morning darkness, gusting winds scattered the sodden autumn leaves across the gleaming pavement and bus driver Nancy Simpson was uneasy.

Not terrified, not terribly troubled, she said. Just nervous.

Nancy Simpson is one of dozens of drivers who operate the buses in Louisville and surrounding Jefferson County which carry youngsters to schools and distribute them in ways intended to create a racial balance in classrooms.

"Desegregation the court calls it. Child cruelty is what it really is," says Mrs. Simpson, guiding her bus along the twisting streets of a gracious subdivision, making the first pickup shortly after 6 a.m.

When the schools opened in September and court-ordered busing on a large scale came to Louisville for the first time, the city became, along with Boston, a hotbed of rioting, fighting and angry protest.

It's calmer now but the tensions remain. They were more evident than usual on Mrs. Simpson's Monday morning run.

The previous Friday a vicious fight had broken out at Sullivan Phillips, Durrett high school between a small group of white students and several blacks who quickly spread to engulf more than 100 youngsters.

Mrs. Simpson, her bus full, now was driving to Durrett to deposit her white passengers, where they would transfer to another bus for a 15-mile drive to one of the city's predominantly black slums for classes.

"Once there's been a flareup like this, everybody gets disturbed," she said, "because there's always a real danger the thing will explode again.

"I'm mostly worried about the kids but the drivers are in a bad spot, too. For a while we had armed guards on the buses because we were being stoned, shot at and forced off the road. We're looked on as traitors and I sure don't want to spread it around my (white) neighborhood that I'm a driver. It doesn't make you any friends."

The trip passed uneventfully to Durrett where small knots of students milled around excitedly.

Debbie Hall, a white 14-year-old, said that out of six friends she usually meets bus before being bused out to another school, only two have turned up today.

"It's the same all over," she says and the bus drivers now their agreement. "Some kids are really scared to come out, some pretend they're afraid just to get the day off and there are still some white kids (and blacks) say less than 10 per cent of the total) whose parents won't let them go to school as long as there's busing."

Debbie says Friday's fight was vicious. "I just stood and watched but I sure enough to know the newspapers didn't report hardly any of it. Kids had knives and harpins and I even saw one with a can opener."

On the 5-mile trip from Duval junior high to Durrett, 13-year-old Teddy Jones, a black sixth-grader, alternated between dozing and writing frantically to finish some homework.

"I don't quite know about busing," he says. "I got a good school now, good teachers, well, some of them and a good cafeteria.

"But how would you like to get up at five o'clock every day? How would you like that? And the bus ride has a real butt, wow, it gets pretty tiresome. Still I've made some friends, I like a few of the white kids I've met . . ."

"And one of them is his girl," yelled a giggling 14-year-old black girl across the aisle.

Then becoming deadly serious, Sandra Wilson remarked: "But it isn't going to work. Busing. It just isn't going to work because the grown-ups don't want it to work. If they'd leave us alone I think maybe we'd be able to get along. But they won't."

All over this sprawling city, the grown-ups, mainly the white ones, have made unmistakably clear their determination to see that forced busing fails.

In the windows of garages, in a ramshackle saloon, drug stores and homes are signs saying: "We oppose school busing."

Wilma Jones is a middle-aged white woman who describes herself as "an inactive member" of the racist Ku Klux Klan and an active participant in concerted efforts by the leading anti-busing organization in the city.

Toronto Reduces Rinks

TORONTO (CP) — The city executive decided Tuesday to reduce the number of outdoor skating rinks this year to 38 p'easure rinks and 21 hockey rinks from 143 natural rinks last winter.

City council, which recommended that funds be made available for rinks at all of last year's locations at the request of local residents, was to vote on the item today.

Launches Program

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto Transit Commission approved a $75,300-a-year program Tuesday to help employees with personal problems, including alcoholism.

Commissioner Karl Mallette said the plan was paternalistic and there already are cases where the union and supervisors allow men out on runs when they have been drinking.

Commission chairman Gordon Hurlburt said drinking during working hours is grounds for firing drivers. He said the ban has been enforced.

Denmark Objects

BRUSSELS (CP) — The European Economic Community (EEC) gave the stamp of approval Tuesday night to a contractual link with Canada, despite a point of objection raised by Denmark.

A Canadian spokesman said the Common Market commission of ministers approved the idea in principle and instructed an EEC committee to iron out Danish objections.

Reserves Increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reserves of industrialized countries increased by $2.7 billion during October, the International Monetary Fund reported Tuesday. The December issue of the fund's monthly publication said total international reserves of industrial countries rose to $121.3 billion at the end of October from $118.6 billion at the end of September.

Demands Answer

TORONTO (CP) — Opposition Leader Stephen Lewis asked in the legislature Tuesday why minutes of meetings of Crown corporations such as the Ontario Housing Corporation (OHC) are kept secret.

Reports Loss

MONTREAL (CP) — Reader's Digest Association (Canada) Ltd. has reported an unaudited net loss of $35,824 or 2.7 cents a share for the quarter ending Sept. 30, compared to net income of $297,697 or 22.8 cents a share in the same period last year. The company said sales revenue improved by about $312,000, but increased operating costs of about $662,000 more than offset the gain.

Seeks Aid

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Federation of Independent Business and the Canadian Feed Manufacturers Association asked themselves Tuesday to a growing list of organizations seeking federal financial assistance for metric conversion.

Trade Goes Up

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Trade between Canada and Japan has increased to 10 times the level it was 10 years ago, M. H. Miki, president of Nissan Automobile Co. (Canada) Ltd., said Monday. He said that in 1973, the estimated volume of Canadian export to and import from Japan will make his country Canada's second-largest trading partner, Canada doing more trading with the U.S.

Delays Action

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's proposed home warranty program will not be introduced until spring, Sidney Handelman, minister of consumer and commercial relations, said Tuesday. He said the delay is necessary because of the shortness of the current legislature session. He also said the province is waiting to see whether Ottawa brings in a home warranty program.

Urges Ceiling

TORONTO (CP) — The Liberal minority on a committee studying Ontario Hydro says Jan. 1 Hydro rate increases should be limited to 10 per cent. The NDP and Conservatives on the committee argue that an increase of 22 per cent in the wholesale or bulk rate for Hydro is necessary to protect the utility's financial integrity. Ontario Hydro had asked for a 25-per-cent increase. A report containing the committee's recommendations was to have come in the legislature Tuesday but will be delayed to allow Liberal committee members more time to discuss it.

No Admittance

OTTAWA (CP) — The Progressive Conservative external affairs critic said Tuesday members of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) should not be admitted to Canada unless their leader renounces terrorism and accepts the existance of the state of Israel.

No Pretext

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Tuesday that federal wage-and-price guides should not serve as a pretext for avoiding collective bargaining in the pulp and paper industry.

Sets Fee

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — It will cost a $500 licence fee to operate a body-rub parlor here in 1974, city council has decided. Council decided Monday to impose the fee under new Ontario legislation giving municipalities control over the business.

Use of French Causes Commons Disturbance

OTTAWA (CP) — The sixth meeting dispute over use of French in Quebec airspace reports erupted again in the Commons Tuesday with the government under attack from its own supporters. Pierre De Bane, Liberal MP for Matane challenged in the Commons Transport minister Otto Lang's explanation for the suspension of two Montreal air traffic controllers and later promised to fight until greater use of French is permitted.

Several other Quebec Social Credit and Liberal MPs joined Mr. De Bane in tough questioning of Mr. Lang on the suspensions.

Air Canada Challenges Parts of Estey Report

MONTREAL (CP) — Air Canada is "not necessarily in agreement" with all the conclusions of Mr. Estey report tabled in the House of Commons Monday, the airline's acting chairman, Pierre Taschereau, said in a news release Tuesday.

The report, prepared by Chief Justice Willard Estey of the Ontario Supreme Court, said the publicly-owned airline acted with "cavalier disregard of the ordinary rules of business" in some financial dealings. It also was critical of several top executives.

Mr. Taschereau said the airline's board of directors would give "the most considered action" to recommendations which fall within its jurisdiction.

He said criticisms in the report "involve only isolated instances of personal judgment and faulty managerial communications," adding that these should be viewed in "the total context of the airline's administration."

Mr. Taschereau said the inquiry "found no evidence whatsoever of personal dishonesty or any criminal action on the part of any Air Canada employee."

He named temporary replacement for Yves Fratis who resigned from his position as chairman and chief executive officer two weeks ago because of what he called a lack of support for Air Canada manage-

TORONTO (CP) — ...ronto Star's circulation administration manager, says the company agrees in principle to a fee provided it is reasonable. Another city borough charges newspapers $150 a year regardless of the number of vending ...boxes they have.

Guideline Bill Gets Approval in Principle

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's anti-inflation bill cleared the parliamentary hurdles Tuesday when it received approval in principle in the Senate and then was approved by the Senate banking committee.

Final-or third-reading debate in the Senate begins today on the legislation establishing the program of selective wage and price controls.

After third - reading approval, the bill needs only royal assent to become law.

In approving the bill, the banking committee defeated an amendment which would have included the Senate in a Commons review of the program after 18 months.

Several committee members expressed anger that Senate approval is not required in the review provision. The program would be terminated if the Commons approved a motion to end it.

Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said he agreed Senate approval should have been required and said such a provision would be included in future legislation

However, he asked the senators not to amend the bill, thus sending it back to the Commons and delaying full implementation of the anti-inflation program.

Earlier, Mr. Macdonald told the committee that employees who normally get Christmas bonuses won't be restricted by the program.

Lawyer Argues No Need To Disqualify Crowe

OTTAWA (CP) — A lawyer for the National Energy Board argued Tuesday that a previous affiliation by board chairman Marshall Crowe with a pipeline company should not disqualify him from taking part in current hearings on a northern pipeline.

Hyman Soberay told the Federal Court that under a section of legislation which set up the board, Mr. Crowe is required to gather information on such energy projects as a northern natural gas pipeline.

The fact he obtained the information as a director of one or two companies competing for the right to build the pipeline should not prevent him from ruling in the case.

The question the court faces is whether, as a result of his past association, Mr. Crowe would not be able to judge the pipeline hearing in "a fair and unprejudiced" manner, he said.

The case involves a challenge to Mr. Crowe's participation by three public interest groups on the basis that his previous affiliations make him biased towards the need for a pipeline and towards one of the two pipeline proponents.

Mr. Crowe was a director of Canadian Arctic Gas Pipeline Ltd. from 1972 to 1973, representing the Crown-owned Canada Development Corp., of which he was president.

Both Arctic Gas and its rival, Foothills Pipeline Ltd., say they have no objection to Mr. Crowe heading the board panel hearing the case.

Canadian Arctic Resources Committee—one of the three public interest groups—also argued in its brief to the court that Mr. Crowe might be biased because of his involvement in pipeline planning while he was deputy secretary to the federal cabinet.

CITY OF BELLEVILLE — LOCAL IMPROVEMENT NOTICE

TAKE NOTICE THAT:

1. The Council of the Corporation of the City of Belleville intends to construct as a local improvement the following storm sewer and asphalt road, complete with curb and gutters, and intends to specially assess a part of the cost upon the land abutting the work and the balance against the Corporation at large as follows:

STREET	FROM	TO	ESTIMATED COST	CORPORATION'S SHARE	OWNERS' SHARE	ESTIMATED COST PER FOOT FRONTAGE	ESTIMATED ANNUAL COST PER FOOT FRONTAGE
Sidney Street	Tracey Street	Approx 570 feet north of the north street line of Bell Boulevard	$304,584.86	$226,963.72	$78,515.14	$24.98	$4.24

EXAMPLE: Lot with 50 ft. frontage would be assessed as follows:
50 ft. x $24.98 — $1,249.00
If paid over a period of 10 years at 11% per annum, the annual cost would be:
50 ft. x $4.24 — $212.00.

2. The Special Assessment is to be paid in 10 annual instalments.

3. Application will be made by the Corporation to the Ontario Municipal Board for its approval of the undertaking of the said work and any owner may, within 21 days after the first publication of the Notice, file with the Clerk of the municipality his objection to the said work being undertaken.

4. The said Board may approve the said work being undertaken, but before doing so may appoint a time and place when any objection to the said work will be considered.

THE MIRACLE PRICE FREEZE POLICY

Miracle froze prices first.

On November 20th, Miracle was the first to freeze prices on everything except the items sold in the meat and produce departments. We guaranteed that prices would not go up one penny.

Even our advertised features will stay at their present low price until January 17, 1976 on non-perishable items.

Miracle brings prices down.

When we advertise an item at a new low price, we won't put the price back up like some other supermarkets do. When we bring a price down, it will stay down - throughout the freeze until January 17, 1976. on non-perishable items.

Miracle keeps prices down.

Look to Miracle to lead in bringing prices down, and keeping them down. It's one more way Miracle Food Mart is on your side.

MEMO FROM HELEN GAGEN

THE TURKEY STORY, 1975

Turkey is a Christmas-dinner must in the majority of Canadian homes. So you'll want to know the facts about availability and price this year.

It's expected that there will be an adequate supply of both Grade A and Grade B turkeys. But because prices are higher than last year you might consider buying a smaller bird this year, and make it go further by using a satisfying sausage or chestnut stuffing. Or try a Grade B instead of Grade A. You'll find Grade B turkeys when properly basted, excellent in flavour, nutritious and tender.

Before making a decision, remember that larger birds provide more meat per pound than smaller ones. If you opt for a large turkey, see that every last bit of it is used in imaginative leftovers - down to and including the bones in soup.

Oddities in the News

Santa's Helpers Replaced

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States government Santa Claus, who incurred the wrath of women libbers last year when he put two mini-skirted volunteers to work collecting money for the poor, is back at his post.

But this time, he is accompanied by Mrs. Claus, clad in a floor-length ensemble.

"I volunteered," said Lee Roberts. "I knew Santa had had trouble last year." With a wink, she asked to be addressed as Ms.

The Santa roaming the halls of the department of health, education and welfare collecting donations is her husband, Russell Roberts.

PARIS (AP) — Georgy Marchais, French Communist party leader, said on nationwide television Tuesday that French Communists will "never agree to decisions concerning ... the future of our people and our country being made elsewhere than in Moscow."

He hastily corrected himself with ". . . in Paris."

Marchais was accusing President Valery Giscard d'Estaing during an interview of selling out France's independence.

FORTALEZA, Brazil (AP) — Cosmo Vidal da Silva, 22, and Norena Barroso Lima, 71, were married Tuesday in this northern port city.

"I am absolutely certain Cosmo is not marrying me to gain anything; I am retired and earn little," said the bride, a great-grandmother twice widowed.

The groom said: "I am marrying Norena because I love her, because I haven't met anyone as good as she. I will be glad to have any children she can give me."

Library May Charge For Use of Gallery

Olive Delaney, head librarian at Corby Public Library, has proposed the library's board of directors investigate the possibility of requesting a commission on future money-making arts shows in its galleries.

Miss Delaney said at a board meeting Tuesday a small charge would cover expenses of operating the gallery.

The Belleville Biennial Art show, organized by Dave Brockelsby, now is under way in the library's upper and lower galleries.

Mr. Brockelsby said Tuesday he had previously arranged to receive a 25-per-cent commission from the artits on any art work sold as a result of the exhibition.

He said this agreement was made with artists before the show last Thursday.

The show, which includes works by international artists opened to the public amidst protests from five Quinte area potters and one Belleville artist who eventually withdrew their work due to what they termed poor display.

Mr. Brockelsby said he had underestimated the amount of work involved in organizing a show of this calibre.

He said the talent behind all art exhibitions is to sell the work, Mr. Brockelsby said he has invested $650 of his own money to organize the show. His original budget was set at $300.

Scottish Review Worth Battling Snowstorm

By EUGENE LANG

In nearly three decades of attending musical functions in Belleville and area Mother Nature's strongest offspring, the weather, has never previsted this reviewer from being on time for the opening curtain. But Tuesday the strong grip of Winter and a dead battery won. Results in brief, the Belleville Collegiate Institute auditorium was finally reached at intermission.

What did meet the eyes was a fairly good-sized crowd who were present to see and hear Scotland on Parade, a group of extremely talented young performers who are just finishing their second transcontinental tour of Canada and the U.S.A.

Once getting settled in the brittle hard seat of roaring twenty vintage, the storm was soon forgoten due to the colorful dancing and colloquial singing of our friends from the land of the thistle and the heather. The ethnic sounds of Scotch music is different from that of any other land and has an intrigue of aural reception that only those from the Celtic country can truly reveal. And reveal they did in the various numbers, whether it be the unforgettable line of Robbie Burns, either in gladness or sadness, or the updated ditties that were spiced with spicy tanginess.

The intricate sword dance brought out the traditional aspect while the bouncy reels gave flavor to the rural side of Scottish life. The pacing was quick, the patter by Host Alastair McDonald bucolic, and the singing by soloists and ensembles most pleasing in Gaelic utterances. And those pipers — tingling.

All in all an excellent evening of enjoyable entertainment.

Board Starts Gallery Committee

The Art Gallery committee has been re-activated at Corby Public Library.

Members of the library's board of directors retrived the committee at a meeting Thursday.

Originally, the committee was organized to submit recommendations to the library board about cultural events after meetings scheduled to take place twice a year.

The committee folded when the Delaney wing was added to the main building of the library moving the art gallery to the first floor of the basement.

Its renewed committee will consist of an art education representative and representatives from the Belleville Art Association, Visual Arts Committee, professional and craftsmen groups and members of the library board.

Head librarian Olive Delaney said the move is a de-in with cultural groups in Belleville.

The committee is scheduled to meet early next year.

Positive TB Tests Need Follow-up

By G.C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Recently my family and I took a series of skin tests. Among them was a TB skin test. What was the first experience for either of us with this test, and we both reacted positively.

Now we wonder if we should have chest x-rays. We've been told it is unnecessary.

I wonder if you would agree with this in a case like ours.— Mrs. M.R.E.

I believe an x-ray of the chest should be done, not only because of the positive TB skin test reaction, but because it could reveal other problems that can occur at any age.

It is not unusual for oldsters to produce a positive skin test. Such results mean only that your system has at some time in the past been invaded by the TB germ. It does not necessarily mean you have or ever had active tuberculosis.

A follow-up x-ray is a prudent precaution both you and your husband should take.

It's been found that while a sizeable percentage of the adult population reacts positively, especially in congested urban areas) a relatively small segment has the active disease. TB statistics record some grim stories. In 1900 the death rate was on the order of 194 for each 100,000 of population. The latest statistics show the rate is less than 3 deaths per 100,000.

Incidentally, if there was a spotted examination made in the course of the series of tests you and your husband had, this might have included one for the presence of the disease syphilis. Check on this, but ask your doctor to have any results taken, just to be on the safe side.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am a freshman (a boy) in high school, and I want to become a doctor someday. Although my father is not pertaining to my health, I thought that perhaps you could give me some advice.

I have read books on what doctors and their role in society. I have considered being a volunteer in a local hospital, but I don't think that would accept me. Tm 14. What should I do?—N.T.

I'm afraid most of the hospital volunteer programs are more or less female oriented, although I can see no reason why an interested young man like yourself should be barred from any such program.

There are some programs geared to teenage volunteer work, and you'd have to check with your local hospitals to see if they have any. Age limits do vary, but your age may work effective for you.

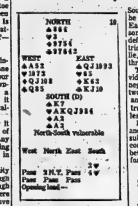
Herbert response saves set



By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

Back in the late '30s, Walter Herbert, the conductor of the New Orleans symphony and fine bridge player, proposed the Herbert convention. It was in hands such as the one shown today that gave Walter his idea. South opens two hearts and North makes the best response of two notrump.

If South jumps to four hearts and West does not open a spade, South will be held to nine tricks. He will score his honors in rubber bridge. If South raises to three notrump he will be sure of his contract if East holds the ace of spades. If some other suit is led, or if the defense can take five quick tricks. But the way the cards lie, East leads a spade and three notrump goes down.

The Herbert convention provides that the next suit is the negative response to a strong two bid. North bids two spades and South can bid three notrump and make it against any lead.

If you do play strong two bids and want to improve your results a little you can adopt the convention. However, you had better make sure that you don't forget it.

Ask the Jacobys

An Ohio reader wants to hand declarer his penalty by down four tricks doubled when he next opens one.

It is 700, consisting of 100 for the first trick and 300 for each subsequent trick.

(Do you have a question for the experts? Write "Ask the Jacobys" care of this newspaper. The Jacobys will answer individual questions if attempt, self-addressed envelope are enclosed. The most interesting, questions will be used in this column and will receive copies of JACOBY MODERN.)

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Ontario Motor League
Eastern Ontario Club

QUESTION: We are planning our first trip to Florida's east coast and would like a brief description of the main resort areas and average cost of a return trip by car.

Mr. Ken L.
Kingston, Ontario.

ANSWER: Florida's east coast is the higher price of gas the return trip for an average family will run about $250.00 for fuel alone. All U.S. highways are toll free, freeway expressways have a 55 mile-per-hour speed limit and probably take you three or four days to reach Daytona Beach and four days to reach Fort Lauderdale or Miami. That is driving 500 miles a day which is the maximum most people can drive using your motel. It doesn't cost much more and it will save you from getting up early every morning just to eat breakfast as well as for dinner. Motels are quite simple to prepare in Florida because of their fresh fruit and vegetables. In most food plazas they have complete meals for two which enter to be fantastic value for senior citizens that flock there every winter.

Ormond and Daytona Beach are the first large resorts you'll arrive at on the east coast of Florida. The beach is 23 miles long, 500 feet wide and made up of gleaming white sand and every inch of it is free to the public. There are over 500 motels on the beach, many with efficiency units, where you can cook your own meals. Also there are lovely shopping plazas nearby. Marineland is just 23 miles north of Daytona Beach which has six daily performances of porpoises and whales. This is located on the ocean highway A1A and it is very expensive. Open daily 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Stock car races, dog races, jai alai, aquatic dancing, shuffleboard, water skiing, swimming, and fishing provide lots of entertainment in Ormond and Daytona Beach. There is a great pleasure and exercise just walking from motel to motel in this beautiful ocean beach.

Fort Lauderdale is 175 miles south of Daytona and the lengthy drive will seem much warmer. This also has a beautiful six mile stretch of public beach and more miles of canals than Venice. There are many expensive and also very reasonable motels and hotels at this popular resort. Boating is a way of life here. Some 15,000 power boats own and 10,000 more boats visit each year, using the Intracoastal Waterway from the north. Fort Lauderdale has the second most active night life, next to Miami Beach, among the east coast resorts and it is only 25 miles north of Miami. Plenty of sporting attractions there readily available.

Miami Beach is a narrow strip of sand jutting out into the ocean with Biscayne Bay on one side and the Atlantic ocean on the other. There is an awesome array of glittering high-rise hotels and condominiums towering over the beaches. This is a luxury resort where many wealthy holidayers vacation, and fun is available in the winter for anyone on a budget. It attracts over 2 million tourists annually and is definitely no place to escape humanity. It offers excellent shopping, horse racing by day and dog racing at night and a large array of other attractions. Nearby is the Seaquarium, Monkey Jungle, Parrot Gardens and Alligator Park which is one of the world's most beautiful horseracing tracks. It has over 2,000 coconut palms and formal gardens. Many tropical birds, including 400 flamingoes, may be seen on the park lake. Thoroughbred racing is held from January through March. The Park is open daily 9:30 to 5 p.m. Crandon Park Tennis Center will be the site of tropical sprocket. It's 24 acres public beach is ideal for ocean swimming. It also has picnic facilities and a 28 acre zoo. Hotels on the ocean range from $25.00 to $40.00 per day.

Macdonell Argues Spending In Shambles

OTTAWA (CP) — Auditor-General J. J. Macdonell said Friday the federal treasury board is doing an inadequate job in monitoring government spending with the result that financial management procedures throughout the government are a shambles.

A 315-page statement to the auditor-general's annual report tabled Thursday contains a broad indictment of federal financial procedures.

"The study leads to one clear conclusion," says the auditor report. "The present state of the financial management and control systems of departments and agencies of the government of Canada is significantly below acceptable standards of quality and effectiveness."

As with previous auditor-general reports, his one is swelpinkled with examples of waste and mismanagement. But the emphasis is on ways to improve management.

The key recommendation is for a greater central agency to provide more effective direction. Currently, responsibility for financial management is spread among the treasury board, finance and the supply and service departments.

The central agency should be the treasury board. But if necessary, a special central monitoring agency could be established.

What we're basically saying is treasury board is 'Look, this is your job. Why don't you do your job,' Mr. Macdonell explained later.

The 177-page main report — the third brought down by Mr. Macdonell—covers the fiscal year ended March 31, During that time, government spending was $26.05 billion.

Findings of the supplementary study, initiated in 1974, were presented to the departments in late summer. In some cases, improvements already have started and will be closely watched, Mr. Macdonell promised.

Minister Complains About Imperial Bank Dividends

TORONTO (CP) — A minister from Kitchener complained this week about the "niggardly dividend" paid by the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce.

Rev. Paul Eydt, pastor of the bank's shareholder meeting that the bank, instead of dumping $50 million from undivided profits into the rest account, should have given a bonus dividend of 10 cents and increased quarterly dividends by two cents.

He said increased dividends would help boost the stock market price of Bank of Commerce shares, which he said is below that of shares of other major banks.

Bank of Commerce dividends were increased in fiscal 1975 to $1.18 from $1.11 last year while earnings rose to $134 million from $101 million.

Bank Chairman Page Wadsworth told Mr. Eydt his suggestion would be discussed by the bank's board of directors.

However, he said the bank had to retain earnings to improve the capital base essential to the bank's continued growth. The rent account now totals $200 million.

In answer to Mr. Eydt's question on how much the bank gave to charity last year, Mr. Wadsworth said total donations to charities, universities and other groups totalled in excess of $1.5 million. He added the board of directors had recently set up a committee to study the issue of donations.

Avison Will Head Unity Bank of Canada

TORONTO (CP) — T. (Ted) Avison, 62, came out of retirement to take over as president of the financially-troubled Unity Bank of Canada because he could not turn down a challenge.

"I did not want to back away from challenge," Mr. Avison said in an interview, adding he probably would not have stayed retired anyway because "I'm not that type of guy."

He had been in retirement six months, after almost 40 years as an investment specialist, when he accepted the challenge of Unity, the only chartered bank in Canada that is losing money.

Unity recently reported a loss of $607,000 for the fiscal year ended Oct. 31, 1975, compared with a deficit of $672,000 for the previous year. In the wake of the red ink, R. B. Higgins, president since Unity's inception in 1972, resigned.

When he retired, Mr. Avison was vice-president investment for the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce.

Quebec Steel Company Outlines Austerity Plan

MONTREAL (CP) — In the face of a record deficit, Sidbec-Dosco Ltd.—Quebec's government-owned steel company—has announced an austerity program.

A company spokesman said the 1975 deficit—Sidbec's fifth since its creation seven years ago—would fall between $18 million and $20 million.

Sidbec president Jean-Paul Gignac said the board of directors has decided on budget cuts that will affect plant maintenance services, administrative costs and capital expenditures.

Company officials say a slack market for steel caused by the recession created the deficit.

Guideline Exceptions Unfair Says Manager

TORONTO (CP) — Page Wadsworth, chairman of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, said Tuesday the government's anti-inflation program is unfair, but granting exceptions and special provisions will only make it less fair.

He told the bank's annual meeting that price and wage controls are necessary to jolt the country into accepting inflation as a grave threat and it now is the responsibility of everyone to support the program.

"If we have any doubts as to what our attitude should be, let us take one moment and ask ourselves: "Are we prepared to accept the consequences of the economic course Canada has been following for the last several years?"

The bank announced earlier that its balance of revenue or earnings for fiscal 1975 increased about 25 per cent to $134 million from $101 million last year. International earnings increased to $21 million from $8 million last year, a gain of 167 per cent.

Plan Increases

TORONTO (CP) — When the United Church of Canada general council discussed planning for 1977 pay increases for members of the staff and personnel committee, it came out in the minutes that the planning should not be related to total salary "but to the cost of living increases."

B.C. Liberals Campaign to Hold 'Balance of Power' Against NDP

VICTORIA (CP) — When the Dec. 11 British Columbia election was called, Gordon Gibson faced the task of fighting the campaign with only a little over a month of experience as the province's Liberal leader.

The 36-year-old fledgling leader was given 32 days to pump some life into the riddled and fragmented group he inherited and at the same time assure himself of election in his North Vancouver-Capilano riding.

Mr. Gibson will be up against Social Credit candidate Ron Andrews, North Vancouver district mayor, whom the Liberal beat by only 57 votes in a February, 1974, by-election.

Since that election, the boy-like-Liberal leader has earned a great deal of respect as a speaker, debater and political personality.

But the question is, can the youthful Mr. Gibson, a dabbler in federal politics, put his talents together in order to improve his party's image as a credibable alternative to the New Democratic or Social Credit parties.

This is a chore in itself in light of the brutal the party took earlier this year—losing three of its seven MLAs and switching party leaders so close to an election.

A rift in the party over support of a unity movement in the interests of defeating the NDP government broke wide open in May when the three MLAs, Dr. Pat McGeer and Garde Gardom, both representing Vancouver-Point Grey, and Allen Williams, West Vancouver-Howe Sound, left t5 sit as Independents.

They said they had a basic difference of opinion with David Anderson, the Liberal leader then, over the matter which eventually led to Mr. Anderson resigning. He and Mr. Gibson remained the only Liberals in the last legislature.

Mr. Gibson was chosen leader Sept. 28 and the next day the three independents, each well respected, announced they were joining the Social Credit party.

Mr. Gibson is faced with the task of convincing others not to follow their lead and vote Social Credit.

The Liberal leader said in an interview the party wounds have healed and now there is solidarity.

He said the main theme he is pushing in the election campaign—that it is time for a minority government in B.C. with the Liberals forming the balance of power—is also encouraging for candidates and party members.

"It makes the point that voting Liberal can effect some consequential results this time around, even though we won't form the government, or even the opposition," he said, "but maybe the balance of power.

"A Liberal vote can have some impact."

Mr. Gibson has his roots in provincial politics as his father is Gordon Gibson, the millionaire lumberman and former Liberal MLA who was a bitter opponent of W. A. C. Bennett, former Social Credit premier.

But he also had a taste of federal politics as a member of Prime Minister Trudeau's staff and a former executive in federal departments.

He was born in Vancouver in 1927 and graduated from University of British Columbia in 1950 with an honors degree in mathematics and physics and then received his master of business administration from Harvard University in 1961.

Mr. Gibson said he is pleased with the way the campaign is going and concluded: "No party can substantially increase its support above the 1972 election level when its share of the popular vote dropped to an all-time low of 18.4 per cent.

"I see us coming out of this election with a much stronger party, beholden to no one.

"After the election the NDP will owe a debt to labor, and Social Credit will owe something to big business but the Liberals will only owe the back," he said, referring to the party's stingy financial status.

Also, he said, the party has been a little too establishment-based, but as a result of the Liberals' approach during the campaign will appeal to a broader group of people.

Mr. Gibson said the only issues in the election have been broad political ones, such as whether the NDP should be returned, the relative merits of the leaders of the two parties and the value of a minority government.

When the election is over, it will be the leadership issue which will be seen to be the most important in the campaign, he added.

Britain Faces Tough New Year's Resolution

LONDON (CP) — The British government faces the economy of 1976 with a single-minded New Year's resolution: Stop the juggernaut of inflation with an armory of wage and price controls.

Britain, whatever its reputation for strident unions and labor strife, now enjoys a strength that has so far eluded the Canadian government in the fight against inflation.

Here, unlike Canada, the big union battalions are staunchly siding with the government in support of strict limits on pay increases.

It took months of backroom bargaining for Prime Minister Harold Wilson to get union backing for the pay-restraint strategy launched last July. That support, confirmed in union and Labor party conventions, gives Britain its best chance in years to beat inflation.

All agree it will be a tough battle, with inflation in this country now running at twice the Canadian rate. The attack is already costing Britain heavily—more than a million people out of work, with health, schools and the other government services suffering under spending cuts.

And it leaves unresolved Britain's most serious long-range economic problem: an industrial plant left obsolete and inefficient by years of inadequate investment.

Still, Wilson's austerity program has won union support that Prime Minister Trudeau might envy.

The unions have agreed voluntarily to limit increases in weekly pay to £6 ($12.60). These earning the equivalent of $17,850 or more a year are not to get any increase until at least next August.

By then, the government says, yearly inflation should be cut from a current rate of more than 25 per cent to about 10 per cent.

Penalties for violation of the limits will be levied against employers, not workers.

Under a price-control program inherited by the Labor government from its conservative predecessor, prices will be permitted to rise just enough to give firms the cash needed to invest in new equipment, to make British industry competitive in world markets.

So far, the government says, the plan is working. More than two million workers have settled pay claims at £6 or less since August. No claim has been reported to have exceeded the limit.

Wilson will need all his persuasive powers to keep the strategy going through next year. With prices rising faster than wages, he will come under increasing pressure to relent as living standards for most people start to fall early in 1976.

But his pact with the unions has kindled a flicker of optimism in an economy long beset by gloom.

Helping to fuel those hopes, the first barrels of North Sea oil started to flow in 1975 by ship and pipeline into British refineries.

Britain has been among the countries worst affected by the five-fold increase in world oil prices in the last two years. That rise, however, has made the costly North Sea crude worth exploiting.

The government hopes Britain can be self-sufficient in oil by 1980. That will reduce its balance-of-payments deficit by easing the need for imported oil. It will also help pay off the loans Britain has taken out in the last several years to keep its balance of payments solvent.

Doubts about Britain's international credit rating have been laid to rest by the fall in value of the pound sterling.

In terms of Canadian funds, the pound has fallen this year to about $2.10 from about $2.40. That makes imports from abroad more expensive. But it also makes British exports cheaper in other countries.

And selling more abroad is what the government hopes will lead Britain out of its current recession.

For that reason, Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey has been urging the United States, Japan and Britain's partners in the European Economic Community to keep up their inflationary policies—increasing demand in their markets for British exports.

Britain desperately needs the money. Hospitals, housing, public transport and the big nationalized industries all must spend millions in the next few years to produce tolerable living standards and healthy business.

But Britain's big economic question for 1976 remains: Can a resurgence in world trade and the government's wage policy develop enough momentum to prevent a new inflation spiral when the inevitable wage claims begin again?

Review Board Rejects Postal Contract, Cabinet Now to Decide

OTTAWA (CP) — With postal unrest simmering once more, cabinet is likely to look closely today at a federal anti-inflation board decision to turn down a pay award that ended a six-week postal strike last week.

Board Chairman Jean-Luc Pepin said Wednesday night the pay settlement—giving inside postal workers a 39-per-cent pay boost over 30 months—could not be allowed.

"We have decided that this agreement is too high for the standards before us," he told reporters shortly before addressing a dinner meeting at the National Press Club.

The decision sent shock-waves through official Ottawa and brought reactions of anger and disbelief from postal union officials across the country.

Mr. Pepin said the government has retained authority to "accord-guess us in many ways." There may be "other considerations" for cabinet to look at than simply keeping within the prescribed wage and price controls imposed Oct. 14.

The development came just as cabinet is considering detailed spending curbs for the fiscal year beginning in April. Changes were announced in programs for relocating workers by the manpower department Wednesday, but they will produce relatively minor savings.

Proposals circulated within government and still to be approved by cabinet include abolishing such programs as Opportunities for Youth and the Local Initiatives Program. Many departments and agencies will be required to trim man-year requirements as part of a general belt-tightening.

The spending restraints may fall heavily on particular areas, but over-all outlays by the government will not be reduced. Only the rate of spending increase will be restrained.

The anti-inflation board wants the government and the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) to resume bargaining. If that fails as expected, then the issue goes to cabinet. Mr. Pepin refused to say by how much the settlement exceeds what the board considers acceptable.

He said "the gap is too wide" between the basic, first-year raise of 19 per cent permitted by the federal program and the award of about 26 per cent—more than 20 per cent in the first year—to the 22,000 CUPW members.

Union leaders disagreed. Marcel Perreault, Montreal local president, said it was "completely ridiculous, absolutely inconceivable" that the workers would agree to bargain for a lower salary.

The Montreal local voted heavily against the offer that was agreed on nationally by a narrow margin last week.

CUPW headquarters in Ottawa refused any comment. Union President Joe Davidson and chief negotiator Jean-Claude Parrot were advised of the board's decision at a meeting Wednesday morning.

There was strong support for allowing the settlement from Prime Minister Trudeau, Treasury Board President Jean Chrétien and Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey.

Price Index Jumps .9 Per Cent in Nov.

OTTAWA (CP) — The cost of living continued to rise steeply in November, mainly because of higher prices for shelter, transportation and food, Statistics Canada reported today.

The consumer price index rose nine-tenths of one per cent in November, the same as the jump recorded in October. There had been a one-month respite in September, when the index rose only two-tenths of one per cent, following a chain of successive sharp monthly rises during the summer.

The November figures come as the anti-inflation board is ranking to develop its price monitoring system and is under continuing criticism from union leaders and others that it doesn't be effective in controlling prices. The board has already turned down several proposed wage increases, including the postal workers' contract, because they exceeded rises allowed by the anti-inflation program.

Higher shelter costs, including increased prices for both owned and rented housing, accounted for about one-third of the monthly rise, a similar impact was attributed to higher transportation costs, including 1976 model car prices which were up 2.6 per cent from year-end 1975 model prices.

Higher gasoline and heating fuel prices in Ontario, which rose about five cents a gallon when a freeze on the items expired Nov. 15, also were cited in the shelter and transportation increases. A similar freeze existed at the same time in Manitoba, but the agency did not mention it as a factor in the over-all rises.

Food prices were up again in November, producing a level 11.2 per cent above November, 1974. The over-all food cost rise was attributed to higher prices for fresh vegetables, canned salmon, coffee, restaurant meals, beef and poultry, although pork and sugar prices were down.

The food index was at 144.1 in November, up from 142.8 in October. The index base was 100 in 1971.

In the 12 months to November, the index has risen 10.4 per cent.

Trenton Firefighters May Lower Demands

BY JERRY BROWN
Staff Reporter

TRENTON—Town firefighters say they will revise their 1976 salary demands more in line with the federal government's guidelines, says Capt. Dennis Smith, spokesman for the group, Wednesday night.

The review of salary demands will begin when the arbitration settlement is reached during next weeks negotiation session involving the 1975 contract said the firefighter.

Negotiators for the municipality and the firefighters have been embroiled in a dispute set which was prompted by a report given to council recommending the town implement a volunteer fire brigade if the association's salary demands were not modified.

"The figures presented to council in that report were misleadin," said Capt. Smith.

"They indicated we were asking for more than $18,000 when that figure only applied to captains' salaries" said the firefighter.

Captain Smith said the figures were also based upon a projected settlement of the 1976 contract, which is still pending.

"All the firefighters want is a salary comparable to wages paid to firemen in similar sized municipalities," said Capt. Smith. "The average settlement for a first class fireman in Ontario, among the 88 associations who have settled contracts, was $14,273," he said.

Aubrey Sharp, Trenton town clerk, the official who presented the report to council said he was working with the only figures available.

"We based our salary analysis on fact, currently presented by the firefighters to the town," said Mr. Sharp. "These were presented by the association as their 1975 and 1976 demands and we based our final figures on them," said the town clerk.

"We prepared the report to present the facts about the cost of fire protection, effects of the salary demands on the taxpayers and not to enter into negotiations," said Mr. Sharp. "The report was to outline alternative in council of costs rose to the extent that the municipality and taxpayers were not prepared to accept them," said the administrator.

"After the arbitration award is set down for the 1975 contract, it would be best if we talked and settled all our differences," said Mr. Sharp and Capt. Smith.

Seven-up Removed Here Over Lead Levels

By CLIFF KENYON
Staff Reporter

Soft drink cans of Seven-Up, Diet Seven-Up and Schweppes are being removed from store shelves in Belleville as a precautionary measure after tests revealed the drinks may have an unacceptable lead level.

"There's no danger whatsoever," sales manager for Misener Beverages Ltd., local distributor of Seven-Up and Diet Seven-Up, said today.

Several brands of canned soft drinks marketed in Ontario and Quebec by Seven-Up Ltd., were recalled earlier this week after tests revealed possible higher than permissible lead levels apparently resulting from the solder used in manufacture of the cans.

"It's not the product's failure but the can," said the Misener spokesman.

Keith Perry, Belleville sales manager for Coca Cola Ltd., local distributor of Schweppes, said the product is being removed from stores.

Indians May Vote Prohibition Off Land

KENORA, Ont. (CP) — Residents of the Grassy Narrows Indian Reserve will vote this northwest Ontario community are in vote within weeks on whether to do away with the long - standing prohibition against alcoholic beverages on their land.

Band Chief Bill Fobister said Wednesday he personally favors making possession of liquor legal on the reserve. He speculated about the possibility of a local tavern or retail liquor outlet sometime in the future.

Legal consumption of alcoholic beverages, he said, would eliminate bootlegging and also do away with the expensive taxicab rides some persons make to Kenora to obtain liquor.

About 120 band members will be eligible to vote in the referendum. Band regulations limit voting to those over the age of 21.

Unclean Restaurants Should Be Publicized Says Health Official

BY ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

Eating establishments found in violation of accepted levels of cleanliness should be publicized as a caution to customers, says Trenton representative Peter Atic of the Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Board of Health.

Mr. Atic queried Lloyd A. Ellenton, chief public health inspector for the counties health unit, at Wednesday's board meeting here on the possibility of telling the public an eating establishment has been inspected and found below standard.

He also suggested the public should be notified once an offending establishment has upgraded itself.

Mr. Ellenton rejected the argument, saying there is no eating establishment in Ontario which does not violate at least one health standard set forth by either the federal or provincial governments.

He said the extent of substandard conditions in any establishment is "all a matter of degree" and assured the board if he found any establishment was substandard as Mr. Atic suggests, he would close it and placard the premises.

Mr. Ellenton asked Mr. Atic if schools, commercial establishments and private dwellings also be publicized.

The board took no action on Mr. Atic's suggestion which was the second attempt by a board member to broach the subject.

In his October meeting, the board voted down a proposal by Barbara Allen, reeve of Tweed village, which would have initiated an investigation into a policy of criteria for grading restaurants on cleanliness.

Reeve Allen said it would make it competitive for restaurants to quickly upgrade food preparation.

She had taken exception to an admission by Mr. Ellenton that there is sometimes a three-week period between warning letters sent to offending restaurants and follow-up inspections by health unit staff.

Mr. Ellenton has assured the board the presence of bacteria is not a factor in the two counties restaurants. He said many problems which have arisen in the past have involved build-ups of grease.

Salary Negotiations Complicate Guidelines

Implementation by the Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Health Unit of future specific constraints in provincial ministry of health spending in 1976 will be complicated by negotiations between the counties board of health and its 38 members of local 21 of the Ontario Nurses' Association (ONA).

The two sides signed a one-year contract in June this year which expires on March 1, 1976.

At the time of the contract announcement, ONA local vice-president Marsha Olinski told The Intelligencer although the new pact brought health unit nurses almost in line with salaries of nurses at Belleville General Hospital, her membership would still fall behind after last July when hospital nurses' salaries were received a new contract.

In a letter to the counties board of health released at the board meeting Wednesday here, deputy health minister S.W. Martin said it is ministry policy to accept the costs of collective agreements and other written contracts in effect at midnight Oct. 12.

"No allowance will be made for actions take subsequent to the Oct. 13 deadline but which may have been dated to be effective prior to this date," he advised.

Mr. Martin explained once specific spending guidelines to be released in early 1976, have been established and an appropriate technical paper issued, "suitable retroactive adjustments may be made."

However, he noted, "unnecessary negotiations relative to collective bargaining agreements should proceed, bearing in mind that funding will only be available within federal guidelines."

In addition, senior staff and department heads' salaries will only be recognized in the level approved by the health ministry as at Oct. 12, the effective date of the federal salary and wage guidelines, Mr. Martin said.

These restrictions affected are: medical officer of health, associate and assistant medical officers of health, dental director, administrative ministrator and heads of both nursing and inspection services.

Mr. Martin added, "where the salaries of those senior staff at the low end of the scale fall behind the salaries of those subordinates who have similar qualifications, the ministry will be prepared to entertain appeals from these funding provisions."

Queen's Park Should Pay Cost of Care

The provincial government should pay the full cost of maintaining unmanageable children under Children's Aid Society (CAS) supervision, according to Hastings County council Tuesday.

The problem, aired twice in county council earlier this year, was re-iterated in a resolution from Durham Region and supported by Hastings councillors.

Under previous legislation such children were sent to training schools with the province paying the total cost.

Now, the repeal of such legislation will place them under CAS care — with the government paying 80 per cent of the cost. Thus the province will make a "substantial" saving — at the expense of municipal taxes, Durham complained.

It called for support to petition the province to pay the full cost involved.

Hotel Profits Down

Four Seasons Hotels Ltd. reports despite $18.9 million in revenue in 1975 compared with $17.4 million in 1974 the corresponding period last year, earnings fell to $1.4 million from last year's $1.3 million.

Isadore Sharp, president, says share earnings fell from 33.8 cents a share last year to a current 28 cents.

Four Seasons also reported construction on two downtown Toronto projects will begin in mid 1976. The two projects are a luxury hotel on Avenue Rd. and a commercial-residential centre on the old Granite Club site on St. Clair Ave. West.

Even Counter Rare

When Ruth Deaton opened her craft shop, The Old Stone House, in her home at Waring' Corners she opted to preserve the atmosphere of the 14-room farm house. Her sales counter, where she wrapped parcels for customers at today's shop opening was Likes from an old general store in Milford and refinished as a unique sales desk.

Snowmobilers Hamper Snow Removal Says Commissioner

TRENTON — Municipal work crews worked through the night, Tuesday to clear away a 33 — centimeter snowfall but snowmobilers made it a dangerous job, said Arie Hoorweg, commissioner of public works.

The snowmobilers were racing up and down the streets during the first major snowfall of the season and plow drivers, even though they are perched high above the ground in the machines cab, had great difficulty seeing the smaller vehicles, said Mr. Hoorweg.

"The drivers said they were constantly afraid of racing over one of the snowmobiles because the plows are very hard to manoeuvre quickly," said the commissioner. "If one of the plows were to run over a snowmobile it would turn the driver and the machine to minecemeal," he said.

The snowmobile zone, who were reported operating throughout the night, were breaking the law, said a spokesman for the police department.

Century Stone House Offers Look into Past

PICTON — From washstands to winnowers The Old Stone House at Warings Corners today offered customers a unique gift line during its Christmas opening.

The craft shop opened in the home of Ruth Denton just west of Picton features antiques, wrought iron work, ceramics and brie-a-brac.

As a bonus for customers who arrive by horse, in the boutique there is free "atmosphere" complimentary of the Old Stone House.

In the shop, original beams of the house built about 135 years ago recall Prince Edward's past.

The highly polished wooden sales counter has a history of its own as it was discovered by Mrs. Denton in an old general store in Milford.

A door leading from the shop to another part of the house was salvaged from an Athol Township school house.

A set of wooden steps originally outdoors at the Waring house have been refinished and brought indoors for use in the craft shop.

Mrs. Denton, who hopes to carry "one of a kind" gift items at The Old Stone House, says that her stock will include many items on consignment from local crafts persons.

Already the shop offers a colorful line of ceramics by Bonnie Brown of Thurlsville and several attractive washstands refinished to lend a special look to any decor.

A focal point in the boutique is a winnower refinished to provide a coffee table ideal for recreation room use.

Mrs. Denton also carries a jewellery line in her shop and a ring display suggests the perfect accent for holiday dresses.

The Old Stone House will be open daily from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. except on Tuesdays and Wednesdays when Mrs. Denton plans touring trips.

She observed Wednesday that response to her shop from local crafts persons has been excellent. Many are eager to offer their work on consignment.

The Old Stone House will remain open all year around as a display case for Prince Edward County crafts and unusual items discovered by Mrs. Denton.

Ministry Revises Cost of Supplying Water

By AL ZABAS
Staff Reporter

FRANKFORD—The Ontario environment ministry has revised upwards to $60,000 the cost of laying a water main from Frankford to Pitcher's Sidetrod, where nine homeowners have lived with polluted wells for the last three months.

Last week, Gordon Thom, ministry industrial abatement section officer estimated construction costs at $40,000, excluding safety valves, hydrants, and engineering fees.

Wednesday he estimated costs at $60,000 — or about $25 a linear foot over a quarter of a mile along the Sidetrodale Road west from Frankford.

And that figure, he said, could rise by 50 per cent depending on the ease with which a six or eight inch main could be laid.

Mr. Thom said the construction costs would have to be met by homeowners along the road. For an individual homeowner, the cost will also depend on the number of users increases.

Potentially, the cost of laying the main could be shared by about 40 property owners along Hastings County Rd. 8, the number who signed a petition requesting Sidney Township to investigate provision of water.

The petition was sparked by nine homeowners clustered around Pitcher's Sideroad who have no' had drinkable water since late summer. As a solution to the problem, homeowner spokesman Rose Obasasky suggested a main be extended from Frankford to the homes.

On top of the shared $60,000 cost, said Mr. Thom, fellow owners would pay a minimum of $200 for servicing and connection of feeder lines from the main to their homes.

"I hope it's a fairly accurate figure," he said, referring to the latest cost estimate. "I don't think it's going to get any cheaper."

It will be up to county road residents to decide whether to opt for main installation, taking into account the possibility they will not get a dependable supply of water from Frankford.

Both village officials and ministry spokesmen have said Frankford must cope with inadequate water supplies during summer peak demand periods.

Mr. Thom said that even if the homeowners Frankford decide for installation, the village and the ministry must still decide if the water can be spaced.

Ellenton On Committee

Lloyd A. Ellenton, chief public health inspector for the Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Health Unit, has been invited by the Kingston office of the provincial ministry of the environment to sit on a committee studying a recycling program in connection with waste management.

Mr. Ellenton received approval from the county board of health Wednesday to attend committee meetings in Kingston.

OPP Warn Of Winter Hazards

Constable Don Kuzyk, community services officer for Ontario Provincial Police (OPP) at Belleville, advises motorists of motor vehicles that driving habits must be varied to cope with ice and snow conditions during winter months.

Constable Kuzyk calls for defensive driving — in other words, drive with caution and measure speed to conditions.

"Don't press one," he says. "If it gets to be tough going, turn back or seek refuge."

Drivers should attempt to keep their speed as when possible and always carry extra gasoline, he says. In addition, the car radio should be tuned to a local station for weather reports.

Constable Kuzyk notes each car should contain a winter survival kit in its trunk and some of the following items should even be carried for city driving:

— shovel, axe or hatchet, sand, ice scraper and brush, tow chain, booster cables, flashlight, road maps, compass, extra gasoline, warning light or road flares, matches, extra clothing and footwear, fire extinguisher and first aid kit.

And should a driver find his car so stuck in snow or immobile on ice that he cannot free it himself, Constable Kuzyk offers the following suggestions:

— Don't panic. Avoid overexertion and exposure. Shoveling and bitter cold can kill."

— "Stay in your car. You won't get lost and you'll have shelter. Keep fresh air in your car. Open a side window."

— "Run your motor sparingly. Beware of exhaust fumes."

— "Put out warning light or flares. Put on the dome light. Over-use of headlights may run your battery down."

— "Exercise your hands and legs vigorously. Keep moving and don't fall asleep. Keep watch for traffic or searchers."

Jury Likes Courthouse

PICTON — A grand jury report submitted Tuesday to Judge Wilfrid S. Lane has recommended retension of the old jail as the rear of the courthouse as "a historical landmark for future generations to tour or observe."

The jury's report noted that the new registry office opened behind the jail is modern and equipped to serve county needs.

Changes in the court house including renovations in the municipal jury room are recommended.

The grand report suggested the courthouse should be enlarged and panelled. Carpeting should be added to new desks and tables purchased. An old table in the jury room was classified as an antique to be kept in the building.

It was observed that waste baskets are missing in the court room and blinds should be replaced. Also, the main floor should be carpeted and two existing lecterns recapsupported.

It was suggested that the judges' room adjacent to the court room should be painted and a framed picture should be added to the decor.

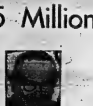
So Much for Economies

$5 Million for Anti-Inflation Board and More for Other Projects on Way



By RICHARD JACKSON
Ottawa Correspondent

OTTAWA — Remember — it was only some six weeks ago — how Prime Minister Trudeau and Finance Minister Macdonald told us what a neat and tidy, inexpensive and unbureaucratic little operation the new Anti-Inflation Board was going to be?

It wouldn't need a staff of more than 200 to monitor wages and prices, they said, and so the cost to the taxpayers would be, well, if not exactly peanuts, then minimal.

And wasn't the government itself going to show the way to start some self-control?

You bet!

No sir, it wasn't going to ask the taxpayers to do anything it wasn't prepared to do itself.

So what has happened since the proclamation of the bright new federal czar sidswing?

Well, the feds have slipped their big fat, greedy hand into your shrinking pocket again to pick out another $1,800 million.

That is how they cut back — by spending $1,800 million more, and this aquadermanda, already reading something like $30 billion, isn't finished yet for this year because Treasury Board President Cheviss has warned that there is still another multi-billion-dollar spending demand to come.

Mr. Cheviss has tried rationalizing that there is little can be done — except forget the promises of six weeks ago — about government spending this year.

But just wait until the government's new financial year begins next March! Then, if promises, you will see some economies.

Except that Prime Minister Trudeau, with a sort of holyoni shrug has been asking for somebody to tell him where spending can be trimmed.

But figures running into the billions are of such enormity as to be almost beyond comprehension.

So let's get down to the small change.

Like the $5 million the government is going to be spending from now to March — about $1 million a month — to run that nice, fifty little, supposedly inexpensive Anti-Inflation Board operation.

How come $5 million? And that's just start-up money, with more to come in the government's final spending spree for the year.

Well, because the Board seems to be going the way of all bureaucracies.

It has already begun empire-building.

From an initial two appointees — the effervescent former Trudeau cabinet minister Jean-Pierre Goyer and the plodding former Food Prices Review Board boss Beryl Plumptre — the Board already is over 200 strong and going for 300-plus.

For once the wage and price control legislation is through Parliament and the Board is in business, the staff and cost will soar so fast that no one in charge, at this stage, is willing even to guess how the bottom line will read.

But the $5 million is only start-up money.

The Board's self-projected growth is all down there on a complex organization chart that looks like a mobile gone mad.

From the top pin drop 44 attachments.

Each represents a division. So each will require a director and staff.

There are, for example, divisions for "word processing," for "public participation," for "early warning," and the one you'll likely be hearing about most, for "compensation."

This division, says its director, will "provide the interface between the Board and all sectors of the economy relating to compensation."

Translation from the bureaucratese: It will monitor all wage and price increases and report to the Board on violations of control guidelines.

The Board then will order rollbacks on threat of fines and/or imprisonment.

Like all self-respecting empires in the process of building, the Board, of course, has its Information Division.

Its assignment is to inculate the previously easy accessible Jean-Luc and Beryl from the importunities of the vulgar media.

"All inquiries," the ukase has been laid down, "must go through the Information Division."

And in any atypical bureaucracy, the Board already has a spook: . . . a liaison link with Big-Time Operator, all office known as the Anti-Inflation Secretariat.

Assignment: to "co-ordinate" the Cabinet and the Board in the "Attack on Inflation."

Planning for 1995!

The Anti-Inflation Board's efforts of the moment, plus those of an equally balky government long on talk and short on action, will be as extinct as any dinosaur — by 1995 anyway and, inevitably, a good deal sooner.

Why 1995? Because Bruce Willson, a former gas comapny president and now prime Trudeau construction contractor for the Syncrude plant in Alberta, says if the oil industry gets what it wants, the annual cost of heating an average-sized home in Ontario with natural gas will increase to $2,000 twenty years from now compared with $200 in 1972.

Mr. Willson, alluding to a $70 billion windfall for the oil and natural gas industry, from the rising well-head prices, says the money should be used to secure Canada's future in oil and gas, rather than enriching the federal and Alberta governments and the oil companies.

This makes sense in light of the pressing need for uncovering new reserves, and especially as there is word that exploration has slowed in the past three years. Equally there is a need for universal public acceptance of fuel saving concepts.

At the level of the average householder though, and with an eye to the economic controls supposedly now coming into effect, it is that figure of $2,000 a year to heat a home 20 years from now which wrankles. Using this as a general economic indicator, how should the average person due to retire at that point plan for such an inflated future?

"I'm against injustice — and hang anybody who says otherwise."

The Office Party

The office party is a phenomenon of these pre-Christmas days. It's a ritual many would not miss. For others though it can be anathema, given the press of people, the babel of loosened tongues and the retribution of the morning after, if not tragedy, of one kind or another on the night itself.

Christmas of course has its undercurrent of social upset, even in the midst of the joy and happiness which at best it brings to many people. There is loneliness for the single person; the single parent, the widow, the widower, the elderly, the person separated from family and friends. There are as many variations of it as there are manifestations of unloward behavior.

Would you believe too, tears shed over sad broken marriages? That, from a conversation in which a woman who obviously takes the subject seriously was lamenting office parties where the husband or wife is excluded.

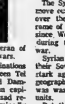
Factor number one then: the office party confined only to those who work in the establishment.

But isn't there another side to it, especially in these days of supposed openness in marriage and social relationships generally. Such occasions offer one evening in the year, at the very least, when husbands and wives can get out on their own without necessarily impairing the relationship and perhaps even improving it. Certainly the marriage that can stand this kind of brief separation is stronger than many.

Why Christmas, as a religious holiday, is made the occasion by many for aberrant behavior of course is something else. Office parties are not necessarily in this category, but it appears this is a time for heightened tensions on occasions supposedly aimed at reducing them.

Arab Lands' Differing Approach on Israel

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service



While we in the West continue to take a monolithic view that all Arab nations are more or less the same, Islamic societies stand out strongly as quite different from each other.

Nothing does this as firmly in the modern Middle East as to see where each Arab nation stands on the ongoing crisis with Israel. The common denominator is that all Arab nations are officially opposed to the Israeli state in one form or another.

But not all of them believe, as do the Palestinian Liberation Organization that Israel must either away, such a move perhaps by the way for a totally new Jewish and Arab structure of nations in Palestine.

Syria does not feel this way as far as we can tell, nor does the conciliatory Arab line to the east on North Africa's Mediterranean rim.

Where socialist Algeria and authoritarian Libya are fiercely anti-Israeli, one suspects the Moroccan kingdom of Hassan II, when concerned with carving out its North African role, lays lip service to the Arab hatred of Israelis.

Closer to Israel, indeed her enemy on the Golan Heights is socialist Iraq, Soviet-oriented Syria, implacable enemy of the Jewish state, a nation which Mr. Kissinger calls the Arab key stud of agreement with the Israelis.

This fall Syrian President Hafez al-Assad celebrates five years in power, a former air force officer who has flown Soviet MiG jets and is a veteran of the earlier Arab-Israeli wars.

In the earlier peregrinations of Henry Kissinger between Tel Aviv, Cairo, Geneva and Damascus, (the ancient Syrian capital city), President al-Assad remained opposed determinedly to any kind of deal over the Golan Heights, again under Israeli control, like the are worked out with Egypt's President Sadat over the Sinai Peninsula and the Suez Canal.

Indeed the controlled Syrian papers taking orders from President al-Assad, have been harsh critics of fellow Arab leader Sadat for concluding the Sinai deal with Kissinger and the Israelis.

The Syrians do not make this move out of any kind of victory over the Golan Heights where none of the fiercest tank battles since World War II took place during the 1973 Yom Kippur war.

Syrian losses were high and their Soviet armor, rusting and stark against the already harsh mountainscape of the Golan region, was wasted by the Israeli tank guns.

But the Syrians were not defeated. Unlike the Egyptians in all but the last Arab-Israeli war, the Syrians always have been stubborn and determined warriors.

Even in the 1967 Six-Day War when the Golan Heights were under Syrian rule, they regularly and ruthlessly shelled the Israeli settlements in the valleys and villages with artillery placed on the heights.

Domestically the Assad dictatorship has made strides in modernizing one of the world's oldest continuing societies, sweeping away ancient living quarters of the beg-gone era of Turkish rule, permitting limited variety of foreign films but no rigid socialist style.

Not an oil-producing state, Syria has been helped by her pro-Communist Arab neighbors who are supplying her with about $700 million per annum in petroleum products reputedly at less than cost.

This multifacte future period we can expect as give-and-take whatsoever between Israelis and Syrians.

Christmas: Other Side Of Coin

Editor,
The Intelligencer;

Christmas comes but once a year — so thank heavens. Once each year we become concerned that the non-well-to-do people in our — that their children have toys like other kids and we brighten every with brotherly love. The other 364 days we enjoy the dog-eat-dog routine.

As the hypocricy of the season gets near its climax we spend money like water — money we never seem to have the rest of the year. We decorate our houses with lights and moan about the high cost of energy. We cry out against the moneylenders and draw heavily upon their services. We talk about how and order and control time getting drunk. We talk about morals and lost standards and throw them out the window with that great Xmas tradition — the office party where inhibitions are broken up at this time than the rest of the year (and sometimes).

Policemen scrape up the remains of the revellers, from the roads, hospitals make room for the soused, politicians send us wishes with hand over heart and, on the surface, the world seems a nice place to live in.

Ask 10 out of 10 what they are celebrating, and they will hesitate. Some will tell you it has something to do with the church; others more knowledgeable, will tell you it's to do with Jesus Christ. Stop-pressed! Not true. It's to do with profits as they stand glowing next to the sliding dial. Those who have to work will remember it as a day off — a nuisance but it's "double time".

When the Year Dawns Anew we send and receive Christmas cards from people we rarely remember and would sooner forget. We run around in a world in which we greet one other with "Merry Christmas" or "Happy New Year". It means about as much as "Good morning" or "How's really care.)

And the only people who know what it is all about are the kids — and they've only heard of Jesus Christ, but they have heard of Santa Claus.

"Merry Christmas".

Speed Curb 'Con Job?'

Editor,
The Intelligencer;

It would appear that the Ontario Government is once again doing a con job on the people, passing legislation to reduce the speed limits on our highways. They are telling us that in the U.S., 16 per cent less accidents occurred on their highways from 1973 - 1974, because of the reduction of the national speed limit to 55 M.P.H.

What they are not telling us is that, by New York governments official statistics, deaths driven in this period dropped 2 per cent. This 16 per cent was because of the oil embargo placed on that country by the Arab nations. Oil company estimates (of miles driven) were that people drove 7 per cent less, because of the gas shortage. Even if this estimate is high, why did the number of accidents drop only 2 per cent.

I think if the people making such idiotic laws would stop sitting on their brains they would see through these transparent statistics. . . . many people do.

Economist Envisages a $7.7 Billion National Deficit

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

When you combine the latest quarter-general's report on foolish spending of public money, and the Fairey inquiry report on Air Canada's mismanagement you have a picture of a public sector that's nearly out of control.

Examples of bad management can be found in virtually every aspect of public service— in broadcasting, in railways, in the post office, everywhere.

Lavish spending of public money, rather than promoting efficiency, seems to lead only to inefficiency on a grander scale.

The federal government is currently running a budget deficit of about $1-billion a month, twice the rate of a year ago.

One private economist, G. Leigh Bush of Bush Mills Spence Ltd., has calculated a federal budget deficit of $7.7-billion in the fiscal year ending March 31, by straight-line extrapolation of the results of the seven months ending last April.

Extending the extrapolation to the next fiscal year gives a budget deficit of $11-billion.

Mr. Skrzes notes that federal government expenditures have roughly doubled, after adjusting for the inclusion of Expo 67, every three years, and recently in the 1972 fiscal year.

"The growth is much deeper than one of expenditures," says John B. Aird, who resigned his Senate seat a year ago to become chairman of the Institute for Research on Public Policy.

"I think it has to do with the structure of the entire system, with the growth of departments, boards, councils and committees, the creation of studies, the use of consultants, the whole complicated frustrating scene."

Expansion of the bureaucracy is by no means confined to the federal level.

The latest, Statistics Canada, report shows that in only three months this year (April, May, June) total provincial government employees increased their employee totals by an amazing 6.8 per cent, to 346,000. (British Columbia, keeps such data secret).

The Ontario government announced in October, 1974, that it planned to freeze its civil service at between 68,000 and 68,000. Within six months, the figure had grown to 71,000.

"Government is a process there's a kind of competition among politicians and political parties to invent new schemes and problems and then to offer the remedies—and these remedies frequently, even most of the time, require people to spend them," says Mr. Aird.

His suggestion is that deficit minister's be given the power to veto.

"If unnecessary jobs were eliminated and the essential work carried on by remaining public servants "would find themselves with more time for more important tasks; giving better value for their money, and regaining their lost pride," he adds.

The Institute is a Public Research, founded in 1972 as a so-called think tank, supported jointly by governments and the private sector, but with top priority to a study of the unprecedented growth of the civil service.

(Other areas of research are to include population trends, civil disobedience, and changing relationships among the three levels of government).

Despite the Institute's anti-bureaucratic stance, Mr. Aird in optimistic enough to expect the co-operation of governments. They want to be shown how to cope with a problem that has unanimously angered their control, he suggests.

Current headlines show what happens when politicians whether in the city of New York, the state of Connecticut, or the Government of the United Kingdom—authorize vast expenditures without adequate programs without adequate planning to raise the money to pay the bills.

CP News Roundup

Chargex Holders Be Alert

TORONTO (CP) — Holders of Chargex and Mastercharge cards should discuss interest charges appearing on their bills with the issuing bank, Sidney Handleman, minister of consumer and commercial relations, said in a statement Wednesday.

The minister said many people found they were being charged interest through the postal strike although they did not receive statements.

Mr. Handleman said the banks concerned had told him of the re-programming of their computers to adjust interest charges would be recommended.

However, he said, they are willing to discuss the charges with customers and, where appropriate, adjust them.

Garbage Collects

NEW YORK (Reuter) — An estimated 50,000 tons of garbage was clogging the pavement and creating fire and health hazards Wednesday in the 10th day of a garbage workers' strike. A sanitation department spokesman said that of 1,500 urgent calls from merchants for garbage collection, about 850 were considered emergencies and the city crews hauled the garbage away. One restaurant was burning incense to overcome odors.

United Cancels

WASHINGTON (AP) — United Airlines, the largest U.S. air carrier, cancelled all scheduled flights through Dec. 24 following the indefinite suspension of talks with striking Machinists Union representatives Wednesday, a United spokesman said. The shutdown raises the possibility that many holiday travellers in the U.S. will find airline seating difficult to obtain during the peak holiday season.

Son Enters Politics

NEW DELHI (AP) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's youngest son, Sanjay, joined the top hierarchy of India's governing Congress party Wednesday, marking his formal entry into politics. The 29-year-old former automobile designer, named to the executive committee of the party's youth wing, has emerged as a close adviser to his mother since she imposed a national emergency June 26, arrested most of her leading opponents and imposed press censorship.

Present Brief

TORONTO (CP) — Representatives of the Ontario Institute of Agrologists asked the provincial government Wednesday to preserve valuable farmland for food production. The institute met with the government's resources development policy group and presented a brief. When it is essential to use farmland for other purposes, the government should require users to prove their needs cannot be met elsewhere, the brief stated. It said Ontario will need 12 million acres of farmland by the year 2000 to feed an estimated 12 million people. As of 1971, there were 10.3 million acres of farmland in the province.

Causes Deaths'

MONTREAL (CP) — Asbestosis, asbestos-related cancer or other asbestos-related diseases caused the deaths of 15 of 18 asbestos workers who died between 1967 and 1974, a former factory doctor said Wednesday.

In testimony before a public hearing into health hazards in the asbestos industry, Dr. Philippe Landry, a pulmonary specialist now in private practice, said that during the same years he had examined 434 company employees.

May Be Elected

NAIROBI (AP) — Most Rev. Archbishop Edward W. Scott, Primate of the Anglican Church of Canada, is expected to be elected moderator of the World Council of Churches' policy-making central committee, it was learned Wednesday.

In the past, he would occupy what is considered the most influential presiding role in the international body of 286 Protestant, Anglican, Orthodox and Old Catholic denominations.

Scott, a declared and even-handed churchman, has been pressed by church representatives from various parts of the world to take the job. He at first was disinclined to do so because of obligations in his home church.

Insurance Crime

TORONTO (CP) — The president of Insurance Crime Prevention Bureau said Wednesday that insurance-related crime costs about $100 million a year, of which auto and commercial vehicle theft are a significant factor.

J. M. McFadyen said in an interview that insurance-related crime is at a frightening pace," and most total losses are in fire, theft and property insurance coverages.

Some insurance companies feel they have more to fear from arson in the years ahead than changing technology," he said.

Seek Reduction

TORONTO (CP) — The provincial government is prepared to seek a reduction in the price of cars in Canada as part of a review of the Canada-United States auto pact, Claude Bennett, minister of industry and tourism, told the legislature Wednesday.

Opposition Leader Stephen Lewis asked Mr. Bennett if he was prepared to argue that the price of automobiles in Canada be lowered to U.S. levels.

The minister replied that that has been the aim of the pact, signed in 1965.

Mr. Bennett said the federal government has set up a study group to carry out a review of the car industry and his ministry will play a major part in it as the industry is chiefly in this province.

Léger Cancels Party

OTTAWA (CP) — Gov.-Gen. Jules Léger has cancelled the traditional New Year's Day levee at Government House in favor of a less formal event Jan. 4 to which will not be invited for the first time.

A Government House spokesman said Wednesday the gathering also will be attended by Mme. Léger.

"We are trying to see if this new approach is popular with people," said the spokesman.

"We felt that Jan. 13 was more practical for most people because many have commitments on Jan. 1.

The same levee comes from the French word lever, meaning to rise and is an offshoot of a French tradition by which adult males petitioned the French king first thing in the morning while he was rising.

Beirut Ceasefire Met With Fierce Fighting

BEIRUT (CP) — Gunmen in the streets here greeted news of the latest ceasefire today with one of the fiercest onslaughts in Lebanon's eight-month-old civil war.

Moslems and Christians fought in the city's skyscrapers following the collapse of the Lebanese Army's first major intervention in the conflict.

Explosions joined the city throughout the night and into the morning.

Minutes after Premier Rashid Karami announced the truce Wednesday night—adding that he wished people a "quiet night"—the city was rocked by rocket and machine-gun fire.

The hardest fighting was reported around the Starco office building, where gunmen of the right-wing Christian Phalange party repelled Moslems trying to cut their supply line to Phalangists in the 300-room Holiday Inn.

The leftist Moslems also laid siege to the 25-storey Holiday Inn, where Christian gunmen were firing down on them.

"The Holiday Inn is practically ours," said Moslem leader Abu Abed. "If the state does not intervene today, it will inevitably fall completely into our hands."

An 850-man army commando force sent into the hotel district Monday was holed up in the Phoenicia Intercontinental Hotel and other buildings near the Starco office. They gave up in an attempt to rout Moslem gunmen out of the ruins of the seaside St. Georges Hotel.

Newspapers and the government radio said the fighting was the worst since hostilities erupted last April. Moslem leaders said 32 persons were killed and more than 70 wounded during the night, raising the toll since Saturday night to at least 300 dead. But police were unable to enter most combat zones because of the fighting, and there was no official casualty count.

Interior Minister Chamoun said Wednesday night that a synagogue in the Wadi Abu Jamil district was looted earlier in the day. Most of the several hundred Jewish residents in the district left their homes after fighting began earlier this year.

Ministers Will Approve U.S. Troop Withdrawal

BRUSSELS (AP) — Foreign ministers of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) are expected to approve State Secretary Henry Kissinger's proposal to withdraw 1,000 U.S. nuclear warheads from West Germany in return for Soviet withdrawal of 1,700 tanks and 29,000 troops from central Europe.

Kissinger, who arrived early today for the annual winter meeting of NATO countries, suggested the move last June as a way of getting progress in the reduction-of-forces negotiations with the Soviets in Vienna, now in their second year without any concrete results.

At that time, West Germany opposed the proposal, although thousands of nuclear warheads would remain in the U.S. arsenals in Germany.

There was no indication when the proposal will be put to the Russians at the Vienna talks.

During the NATO meeting, Kissinger was to confer separately with the Greek and Turkish foreign ministers about the explosive Cyprus situation which has weakened the alliance's eastern flank and increased pressures on the U.S. to reduce its military presence in Greece and Turkey.

Lang Will Deal with Airspace Controversy

OTTAWA (CP) — Transport Minister Otto Lang said Wednesday he hopes to deal with the controversy over use of French in Quebec airspace in several steps.

He said in the Commons the government does not plan to treat still solutions to all aspects of the language problem are worked out before acting.

He was replying to Serge Joyal (L—Montreal Maisonneuve-Rosemont), one of several Quebec MPs who protested earlier this week the suspension of two Montreal air traffic controllers for speaking French in the Dorval airport control room.

Mr. Lang did not elaborate on how he plans to act in the bilingualism dispute.

Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa said Tuesday he would make representations to the federal transport department about suspension of the two controllers. But Mr. Lang said outside the Commons on Wednesday that the premier has not yet approached him.

Stelco's Coke Ovens Under Study

TORONTO (CP) — Labor Minister Bette Stephenson said Wednesday she will investigate monitoring and safety procedures in regard to coke ovens at Steel Co. of Canada Ltd. (Stelco) in Hamilton.

Opposition Leader Stephen Lewis told the legislature that a government study group found there were significant differences in procedures between Stelco and Dominion Foundries and Steel Ltd., also of Hamilton.

The NDP leader said a good record at coal-tar exposure levels was kept at coke ovens at Dominion Foundries but not at Stelco.

Dr. Stephenson said she will report back to the legislature after her investigation.

Rooming Houses Now In Rent Legislation

TORONTO (CP) — Rooming houses will be included in Ontario's rent review legislation under an amendment supported Wednesday by the NDP and the Liberals.

The two parties combined to defeat the government side 87 to 31 on the amendment. The move means that between 200,000 and 300,000 rooming house units will be included under the legislation, housing ministry officials said.

Housing Minister John Rhodes said outside the legislature that he does not believe rooming houses should be covered, adding that it may be difficult to include them in the review process.

He also said the government will have to hire between 425 and 450 rent-review officers to administer the legislation, at an estimated cost of $10 million.

An amendment by the NDP allowing local municipalities to administer their own rent review process with the housing ministry's permission was also approved over government opposition.

But an NDP amendment lowering the maximum rent increase from last July 29 to Jan. 1, 1976, to six per cent from eight per cent was defeated by the Liberals and Progressive Conservatives.

Ed Good (L—Waterloo North), who proposed the inclusion of rooming houses, said rooms may be included unless protected under the legislation.

Housing Minister Rhodes said including rooming houses would create chaos in administering the legislation. Since rooming houses are usually rented by the week without leases, a rent review officer may end up dealing with the same room several times during a short period of time.

He said the amendment allowing municipalities to establish their own review administration with the ministry's permission permits him some discretion.

Method Used

BROWNSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — The warm dry climate here is being used to create a wastewater treatment plant that employs solar evaporation to achieve absolute zero discharge. This completely eliminates pollution from process waters used in making chemicals. Process water is collected and pumped into an evaporation pond, where the liquid waste materials are oxidized to carbon dioxide. The hot climate evaporates the water from the pond and leaves only minute quantities of solids behind.

B.C. Voters Go to Polls Today

VICTORIA (CP) — British Columbia voters were to choose a government today following a whirlwind 35-day campaign which many expected would polarize the turbulent political scene.

Awaiting the verdict were Premier Dave Barrett, head of the province's first New Democratic Party government for the last three years, his major opponent, Social Credit Leader Bill Bennett, Liberal Leader Gordon Gibson and Progressive Conservative Leader Scott Wallace.

The Social Credit party, whose 39-year-reign under W. A. C. Bennett, Bill's father, was ended by Mr. Barrett in 1972, mounted an about campaign as the only party to defeat the NDP.

After Bill Bennett, a 43-year-old millionaire businessman from the Okanagan city of Kelowna, succeeded his father in 1973 as party leader and member of the legislature for Okanagan South, the party attracted one Conservative member of the legislature to its fold and, just this fall, three Vancouver-area Liberal MLAs.

The Social Credit candidates made pre-fee policy promises and dwelled almost entirely on alleged mismanagement of the provincial economy by the NDP. They said the Social Credit party would get the province rolling again, to that is, create party government revenues could pay for programs initiated by the NDP.

Mr. Barrett, 45, a Vancouver-born and United States-educated social worker once fired by the Social Credit government for his outspoken criticisms, has held the spotlight for his party almost by himself.

He has traveled the province seeking a second term to field inflation and to ensure that federal policies — and wage freezes result in fair application within B.C.

Mr. Barrett's NDP had 37 seats at dissolution, Social Credit 14, Liberals 2, Progressive Conservatives 1 and one seat was vacant.

After the 1972 election, which Social Credit went into holding 28 of the 55 seats, the NDP won 38, Social Credit slipped to 18, Liberals held 3 and Progressive Conservatives 2.

B.C. traditionally has seen about a 75-per-cent turnout for elections, which amounts to more than a million votes cast of the 1,969,548 eligible voters.

There were 221 candidates, 25 more than 1972, in the province's first, late-fall election since 1920.

Most of the province was expected to be cloudy all day, with some spotted sunny periods and occasional snow flurries.

Temperatures dropped to -20 overnight in some interior ridges but were above freezing in the heavily populated Vancouver area.

Election officials cautioned that the advance poll, down eight per cent this year, could not be used as an indicator.

Fruitbelt Plans Major Campaign

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — The Ontario Tender Fruit Industry is to begin a major promotional program for canned peaches, pears, plums and cherries produced in Ontario, a spokesman said Wednesday.

Doug Williams, chairman of the Institute, told the annual meeting of the Niagara Peninsula Fruit and Vegetable Growers' Association that a promotion program is necessary to clear inventories in preparation for the 1976 processing season.

He said growers they must maintain projected plantings of 1976 and 1977. This will raise harvest of clingstone peaches to 15,000 tons a year, he said.

Mr. Williams also said grape growers should profit from a provincial - federal program announced recently by Premier William Davis. It will provide provincial loans to encourage farmers to replace labrusca grape vineyards with French hybrid vines to meet market demands for drier types of table wines.

Drinking in School Is Problem: Principal

TORONTO (CP) — Student drinking is not a problem unless it is done inside a school, a secondary school principal said Wednesday at an inquest into the death of a 15-year-old boy who attended his school.

"If a student goes out for lunch, has a drink and doesn't disrupt classes or his own work when he comes back, then it isn't a problem," testified Kenneth Hill, principal of Bathurst eights secondary school.

He told the inquest investigating the Oct. 10 death of Walter John Nebrenchein of Toronto, who died after a drinking session with friends, that principals are aware there is an increase in drinking among the young.

But Mr. Hills said drinking does not become a problem in school until it "disrupts the school program."

Alberta Introduces Rent Control Laws

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta government introduced rent control legislation Wednesday, limiting landlords to rent increases totalling 19 per cent between next Jan. 1 and June 30, 1977.

Landlords will be allowed to increase rents by 10 per cent after Jan. 1 and by a further nine per cent after Dec. 31 1976.

Increases above those levels will have to be justified before a rent regulation officer whose decision can be appealed to a rent regulation board.

New construction is exempt from the legislation, said Graham Harle, consumer and corporate affairs minister. In order to encourage construction of more rental accomodation. A moratorium on conversion of rental accommodation to condominiums was declared.

Mr. Harle told reporters Alberta law requires 90 days notice of rent increases so increases announced to tenants from about last Oct. 1 will be controlled by the bill.

The controls apply to the accommodation being rented, not to the tenant, and landlords will be asked to provide a base rent as of next Dec. 31 on which the 19-per-cent immediate increase will apply.

Woman Charged With Immorality

TORONTO (CP) — William George Sylvester, 38, of Woodbridge, Ont., whose wife has pleaded guilty to 11 charges of procuring children and taking part in acts of sexual immorality, was convicted in county court that his wife's life is in danger because of published reports about his case.

Sylvester has pleaded not guilty to 10 morals charges, some of them involving children.

His wife, Barbara Ann Sylvester, 26, will be sentenced after her husband's trial ends.

She was charged with, among other things, participating in acts of sexual immorality endangering the morals of children, procuring a child to have illicit sexual relations with her husband and four other persons, keeping a common bawdy house, conspiring to commit acts of indecent assault and gross indecency.

Sylvester told Judge Harry Waisberg following a court recess that satisfactory arrangements to protect his wife have been made. Earlier, he had said he would plead guilty to the charges against him in order to protect his wife. But he did not change his plea.

Sgt. Evan Kelly of York regional police testified that when the Sylvesters were arrested June 3 on a charge of gross indecency, Sylvester said he thought the government had made it legal to perform the act.

Sylvester also said he took some of the pictures in a photograph album seized by police, Sgt. Kelly said.

But Sgt. Robert McCausland testified that Sylvester said an upstairs room in a farmhouse was used for spanking and whipping. He said Sylvester showed no emotion over allegations made by the children.

Exhibits ranging from black knee-length boots to an electric shock machine were entered as evidence.

Imperial Doesn't Follow Estimates

TORONTO (CP) — Imperial Oil Ltd. said Wednesday that Ontario government studies may have "substantially" overestimated the economic effects of higher petroleum prices.

Imperial, in a brief to the provincial inquiry on petroleum pricing, said a study done for Imperial concluded that rates of real growth, job creation and inflation are not significantly affected by shifts in the relative price of crude oil and petroleum products.

"On this basis, Imperial suggests that the Ontario government studies may substantially over-estimate the economic effects of higher petroleum prices."

The brief said Ontario studies had concluded that an increase of $1.50 in the wellhead price of a barrel of crude—to $6 from $8.50—would lead to the loss of 11,000 jobs a year later.

"However, a comparable study commissioned by Imperial Oil put the job loss figure for all Canada at 4,500.

Ontario has also estimated, the brief said, that the implementation of all the energy measures in the June 1975 federal budget would result in the loss of 19,700 jobs to the province.

But a study by the Conference Board in Canada, which covered the deflationary impact of the budget measures, energy and non-energy, "estimated the loss for all Canada at 14,000."

Imperial's study also concluded "that the main deflationary impact of higher oil prices results from an increase in the government cash position which is not offset by any policy response."

Ann Landers

Beware of Fads When Naming Your Baby

Dear Ann Landers: Many parents lack consideration when they name their newborn infants. Will you allow me to give your readers some guidelines? Their children will be grateful all the days of their lives.

1. Don't choose a name just because it is popular at the moment. In the years from now "Tawny" or "Candy" will be one of seven or eight in her class with the same name.

2. Choose a first name that goes well with the last name. If your family name starts with "S," don't give your little girl a first name ending "N" because a name like "Marilyn Nash" will come out sounding like "Marilyn Ash."

3. Don't name your child for a TV celebrity, movie star or sports figure. In five years the star may be forgotten and you'll be sorry.

4. Don't combine your husband's first name wit his family name ending and invent some cute thing for her like "Markella" or "Johnette." In later years the poor kid will be asked, "Is that one name or two?" "What was your name before you got married?" "Would you please spell that name again?"

5. Don't let your husband talk you into naming the baby "Herman" or some such pet because the name has been in the family for a long time. It's not worth it.—Made My Mistakes And I'm Sorry

Dear Sorry: Thanks for an interesting bit of advice. Too bad you didn't sign your name—or let us know what you did to your children that prompted you to write.

Dear Ann Landers: The letter from the teenager whose father called him belittling names brought back some heartbreaking memories of my youth. Now that I'm an adult myself, I can say a word to help other young people through some trying times.

I was a tall girl for my age. My dad took delight in calling me "The Big Oz" or "The Long O fer st Water." I also had a crooked tooth in front. He never lost a chance to call it to the attention of a new friend by asking, "How do you like our mangle-tooth witch?"

Because of my father's cruel jibes, belittling Mom called it "Stealing a little.) I grew up self-conscious and shy. It wasn't until I left home for college that I realized I was fat—not only and not much taller than most girls my age. Although I still have moments of insecurity (I'm now in my 60s) I've come to realize that my father did this to compensate for his own feelings of inadequacy.

Name-callers have their own private hang-ups. When young people understand this it can help them feel less bitter.—Receiving End

Dear Receiving: Your letter contained almost all the advice I was prepared to give. I'd like to add one more thought, however. Most parents who are unable to show affection to their children were denied affection by their own parents. Sometimes it takes therapy to break the chain. In the absence of professional help, just understanding can perform miracles.

Dear Ann Landers: For several years we have enjoyed events before they married. In this way we were able to meet the new in-laws and families. Recently we were told "Forget the fancy dinner party, just add the cost to the price of the gift."

We were shocked and hurt. What should we do?

—FWL

Dear FWL: Forget the fancy dinner party and give exactly what you would have given prior to that tasteless suggestion.

Doris Clark Begins New Career

HAMILTON (CP) — Sisters, Doris and Pearl Clark, have a recent joint venture in Preparation For Retirement, a course that began by Pearl five years ago at the Mohawk College of Applied Arts and Technology, while Doris as volunteer assistant.

The Clark sisters may talk retirement, but don't believe in it. Pearl, 74, says candidly: "There really no such thing . . . If you continue saying yes to life."

Doris, 63, says she is "taking a flyer" in giving up writing a daily newspaper column to take over the retirement course. "I've reduced my income terrifically because I see something that I like doing," she says.

She says the message of the course at Mohawk is the philosophy of aging. "Growing old is no job for a sissy," she said. "You have to face a body that is not as strong as it was. You can't call on strength as much; you have plenty but you have to take care to husband it out."

Doris said at the last session she asked students what they'd like to do that they had never had a chance to do during their working lives.

One man wanted to build a house, another wanted to learn to play the piano and a woman said she'd like to be a barmaid.

College authorities let each of them know there were courses at Mohawk they could take to fulfil their wishes. A construction course for the man who wanted to build a house; piano lessons for the would-be pianist; training in waiting on table and a gourmet cooking course for the would-be barmaid.

"I feel I should be telling the whole country that old people are an asset and a resource," Doris said. "A person's learning ability decreases very little after 30."

Pearl retired officially 13 years ago when she gave up her job as an account executive in a Toronto advertising agency. Since then she has had as many as four jobs going at the same time: A column she used to write as health and beauty editor for the Farmer's Advocate; a ceased publication in 1965); management counselling; small business; a syndicated column on aging called, Coming of Age, which she wrote for 30 weekly newspapers.

"Doris has found knowledge acquired in one job frequently leads to a new line of work.

A Master of Social Work degree, plus experience in different social work agencies, led her 14 years ago to write Second Childhood, a daily newspaper column which at its peak appeared in 25 newspapers across Canada. Dear Doris, another advice column she conducted for two weeks appeared in 100 of the United States and Canada.

Doris travelled across the country selling the columns to the newspapers herself. Her experience in the selling game was gathered in the years before the Second World War when Pearl started manufacturing Mary Miles tinned food specialties.

Doris would go out with the tins of tinned soups, cocktails, spreads, and chili con carne in the back of the car. She travelled throughout Ontario, leaving samples with specialty grocery stores.

The business grew but had to be sold during the war when it became impossible to get enough tin for the containers.

Now, Pearl and Doris are looking ahead to future activities.

Doris keeps three different people busy doing such things as answering letters about her column, she has been receiving about 10,000 letters a year, and Pearl employs two people to take care of her mail and do other secretarial work.

People are realizing how important it is that everyone be encouraged to use his later years to best advantage, said Doris who is planning to write articles on gerontology.

Both women want to take courses in gerontology and perhaps one day train teachers who will go out and give courses in the subject.

Thurs., Dec. 11 — 8:00 p.m.

The difference between 'old' and 'elderly' is often merely a matter of income.

How much income do you expect to receive at retirement, over and above your Canada or Quebec Pension Plan benefits and perhaps your employer's pension benefits? Is it enough? If it isn't, the rest is up to you.

Let me show you how tax deferral can help build your retirement savings. Together we'll design a plan just for you.

ALL IN THE FAMILY by Ibabel Huggan

End-of-the-Year Clutter-clearing

One of my really worthwhile end-of-year rituals is throwing things out . . . cleaning up the house, clearing out my head, getting rid of useless clutter.

Into my mental wastebasket go all the things that have bugged me during the past 12 months, so that I can start the new year afresh.

Reviewing some of my beefs and gripes before I toss them out, I find that many are complaints about other people's thoughtlessness.

For example, there's the habit of 'arriving' at a theatre after a performance has started. It's annoying enough at the movies, but it's really inexcusable at a "live" play.

Recently at the Pinnacle Playhouse, I watched 18 people enter during the first 15 minutes of the play.

In that small theatre, even a minor disruption affects the entire audience. I hate to think of the distraction it is to the actors, who must continue through the opening and closing of doors, shuffling of feet, creaking of seats and rustle of coats being shed.

What is really shocking is that this kind of late-coming is not unusual. According to Dolores Kitchen of the Belleville Theatre Guild, it's a problem that seems to be getting worse with each play.

Speaking of theatre, another thing else that really bugs me is the crackling and rattling of cellophane bags of candies at the movies. I never know who to be maddest at — the noisy gobblers, or the theatre owners for selling "noisy" sweets.

On the subject of food, let me tell you about the people I've really got it in for, the ones who crowd into express lanes at the supermarket with more than eight items in their basket. Maybe they have only a few more than they should, but it's enough to slow down the line and make my blood boil.

Still on shopping, there's one sort of consumer I could cheerfully throttle: the dawdler.

Surely you've met this type. At the supermarket you can give a good sharp thrust with your shopping cart to one of these dreamers along. But in a department store, when you're trying to hurry, you're helpless among the crowds of rambling, slow-footed browsers who block your way no matter where you turn.

Of course, if you're in a hurry, you can guarantee that the clerk who should be serving you will smile right through you and turn to someone else on either side. Any protests on your part "But I was here first" will be met by frigid stares all round until you slink away or demurely accept being last.

Really, I'm going to try to forget about those drivers who . . . and the drivers who don't switch on their direction signals until three feet from the intersection . . . and the ones who smoke in elevators and small offices . . . and the ones who . . .

Yes, I'm going to start January afresh, with none of these grievances tagging along. Between now and New Year's, however, I think I'll amuse myself by devising suitable, imaginary punishments for thoughtless people.

Latecomers to the theatre? I've got it!

How about having them tell jokes, on stage, while the theatre fills slowly with crowds of people muttering "Excuse me! Excuse me!"

Even better, they could be seated at the back end of a row of 50 seats, that would fill up after the movie had begun by one person after another at intervals of a minute, all insisting that the sitter stand up to let them pass.

What would be suitable for loud candy bag snifflers? Any ideas? . . .

Amuse yourself by playing judge and dreaming up some punishments that fit the crimes . . . I will be happy with any good ones, send them in to All in the Family, before the end of the year!

Mary Minielly, fastening bow on dough wreath.

Make Your Own Christmas Wreath

One of the great decorating discoveries of the season, according to Mary Minielly, is creating wreaths and ornaments of dough.

Mrs. Minielly got the dough recipe from Claire Gorrey, who had clipped it from the Toronto Star. What surprised Mrs. Minielly and her husband Hugh who assisted her, was how easy the whole process is.

"We're really delighted with our wreaths," she says. "They're pretty enough to give as Christmas presents too."

The directions for the inedible dough, and for making a wreath to hang on a door, window or mantel, are as follows:

two cups flour
½ cup salt
one cup hot water
one tsp. instant tea or dry mustard

Mix dry ingredients together in a bowl, and add hot water all at once. Mix with a spoon and then with your hands.

Turn dough out on a floured pastry board, and kneed thoroughly for about 10 minutes. When the dough is smooth and the right consistency to make shapes with, you can begin creating the wreath. Remember that the dough doesn't expand.

To make a wreath you'll need three batches of dough. Roll out one batch into a coil, and shape into a ring with a six-inch diameter centre. Moisten the ends of the coil with a little water so that it forms a firm bond where they join.

Place on a large cookie sheet. Cut a 13-inch length of strong wire and fold it three times, twist it together and bend it, then insert into the top of the wreath as a hanger. Use a drinking straw to punch two holes through the wreath at the bottom, so that ribbon can fasten there once it is baked.

Use the remaining dough to shape fruits — apples, pears, berries — and nuts, holly leaves and flowers. Use a sharp knife to cut out leaf shapes, use your hands to form all other items. Insert whole cloves in the ends of fruit where a stem would be. Moisten items to attach.

To keep bubbles from forming, prick a number of small holes in the large pieces with a darning needle.

Bake in a 300-degree oven for four hours or until dry and hard. When it has cooled completely, glaze with two coats of urethane varnish, or if you prefer, paint with acrylic paints.

PRESBYTERIAN WOMEN

The regular November meeting of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Women's Group (Tweed) was held at the home of the president, Vivian Butterill.

A reading was given by the president to open the meeting.

Margaret Morton read the Scripture from Philippians and gave a reading "My Friend" and offered a prayer.

"Free Will" offerings were given in place of having a bazaar this year, and will be received by the treasurer Margaret Morton.

A bale of good used clothing was packed and sent to the Kenora Fellowship Centre.

Mrs. Butterill thanked those who helped decorate the church table for Thanksgiving and also helped pack the bale. She also thanked Edith Griffin for her "special" evening at the Salvation Army's "Home League" meeting.

A motion was approved to give a donation to the "Echo". Candy bags will be packed and given to the children at the Christmas Concert and regular pot luck supper, which will be held in the Church Hall on December 12 at 6 p.m.

A hymn was sung, and a vote of thanks was given to the hostess and also to Mrs. Griffin for the beautiful and delicious lunch served.

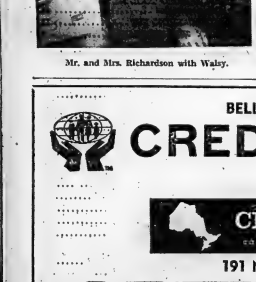
RIVER VALLEY

The Christmas meeting of the River Valley Women's Institute was held at the center with Marie Donohoe as hostess. The program was arranged by Gladys Conley and Gayle Grills. Edith McCaw displayed her collection of international dolls, and Lois Hoard gave a vocal selection.

REDNERSVILLE WI

Flossie Pulver convened a meeting on citizenship for the Rednersville Women's Institute recently. Guest speaker was Max Wright, who represents an insurance company.

Couple Visits Bolivian Foster Child



Mr. and Mrs. Richardson with Waisy.

Mr and Mrs. Raymond Richardson, Warkworth, last summer visited "their" foster child, a 9-year-old girl receiving aid through the Foster Parents' Plan in La Paz, Bolivia.

Waisy Cerda, who is four-and-one-half, is the foster son of a Brighton woman, Diana Warren. Waisy lives with his mother, and 18-month-old brother in a one-room mud brick house in the slum area in the extreme heights of the city. Like others, the house is precariously perched in an area where mud slides could sweep the homes away.

A recipient family for only a few months, the Cerdas, who were deserted by the husband and father according to the Foster Parents Plan, have been able to purchase shoes, food and milk. Mrs. Cerda earns a living selling food on commission.

The Richardsons brought back slides of La Paz and the Cerda family to show to Mrs. Everrett, along with two gifts from Mrs. Cerda.

Mrs. Richardson, who teaches at Quinte Secondary School, said that she was impressed with the ability of Mrs. Cerda to cope with limited facilities in the slum she by 15 feet home. She explained that in spite of the cold — it snowed the day they visited — there was no form of heating except a wood cook stove.

Besides medical care, the Foster Parents Plan provides community co-operatives for member families as well as a monthly cash grant of $8 to allow the family to buy food and other things they previously could not afford.

Exchange Teacher

Having taught for six years, Miss Stewart here until August said she likes the youthfulness of Canada, and would stay on "the drop of a hat." If the immigration department would allow.

Bulloch Rallies Support Against Taxation Laws

TORONTO (CP) — When John Bulloch was teaching personal finance at college here, he used to mark his students' papers and otherwise catch up with his reading in the bathtub.

One day when he was immersed in suds and a 1968 federal government white paper on taxation, indignation overcame him when he saw what the government planned to do about the report of Kenneth Carter, a chartered accountant who had recommended radical changes in the tax structure after a five-year royal commission investigation.

"They had butchered Carter," Mr. Bulloch said.

His feelings were so strong that he promptly quit his job at Ryerson Polytechnical Institute to fight the threat to himself and the upshot today is the Canadian Federation of Independent Business, a 31,000-member cross-Canada body with a staff of 70 dedicated to leading the governments on behalf of the small businessman.

Mr. Bulloch's first move was to organize what he called the Canadian Council for Fair Taxation and stage a whirlwind series of public rallies around the country, during which he raised $120,000 to fight the Ottawa government's tax reform bill.

Out of that grew the present federation, of which he is president.

"What the government did in 1969," he said in an interview, "was to conclude that Carter's tax proposals for the mining, oil and insurance businesses were too high. They found themselves a billion dollars short and took it out of middle-class industry.

"The big companies were to get taxed effectively at about five, 10, 15 per cent and they were going to tax small businesses at 50 per cent.

"We got them to roll back the tax and now the effective rate on small business is about 25 per cent, where it was before."

"But," he added, "we're still involved in trying to clean up the original tax bill, which is so complex that only eight people in Canada understand it."

Mr. Bulloch, a personable and articulate man of 37 with a quick-on-the trigger mind, becomes by his crusading spirit naturally.

His father, John Sr., is a religious fundamentalist from Northern Ireland with strong views on politics. He has also prosperous family tailoring firm and gets his ideas into clothing in advertisements that are reflished by businessmen—"religion, politics and suits," says the son.

The younger Bulloch is an officer in the Sea Cadets and devotes time to his federation, either in its building where a staff of 30 operates, getting around the country to meet members or jetting abroad to see what's going on with small business elsewhere.

"I hardly take any speaking engagements now," Mr. Bulloch said. "I used to yell and scream when we were getting started—and sometimes members tell me I still should—but I'm try ing to make myself scarce so people won't get the idea this is a one-man organization. We're building up a speakers' bureau of about 20 people.

"The point is, we're listened to today. We can pick up a phone, call a cabinet minister and get a meeting any time."

Mr. Bulloch says the federation's strength derives from the fact that all its pressures on governments are based on the majority views of owner-managers of businesses—that's the criterion for membership—2,000 of whom are interviewed personally each week and all of whom are polled regularly on public issues.

The firms run in size from those with fewer than 15 employees to a small percentage employing more than 100. All must be Canadian-owned, and no branch plants are admitted. Fees range up to $500 a year, and Mr. Bulloch says proudly that many members voluntarily pay more than their assessment.

"We'll have 50,000 members by 1977," he said, "and right now we have more resources than the independent are the one group that has never been consulted on public policy—and that's why the economy is in such a screwed-up mess."

"The policy-makers have been talking to an elite, every small group of around 100 companies instead of the ones that provide 67 per cent of employment in this country," Mr. Bulloch said.

What does he think of the federal anti-inflation program?

Mr. Bulloch said 58 per cent of federation members voted for it, 40 against and two undecided.

"The leaning toward support is really because of the knowledge they've often taking from employers as the result of pay settlements in the public service, and there's no doubt in my mind that the reason for the program was to clamp down on the public service," he about," he added, "is that—a three-year program will be very difficult to manage. We have to make sure Canada doesn't move permanently into a controlled society, and we are going to be watching this closely during the control period.

"I think the Liberals are worried about it, too. As a matter of fact, the federal government already has a committee studying how to get out."

"The danger of a three-year program," Mr. Bulloch said, "is that it will push us into other types of controls that haven't even been debated—export and foreign exchange controls—involving a horrendous bureaucracy."

He predicted Canada will have export control, calling for a permit to send goods out of the country, within 1½ years and exchange control before that.

"Another danger of a three-year program," he said, "is that the economy will be so regimented that it will be hard to get out. Usually the rule is, easy to get in, hard to get out.

"It was only hard to get in in this case because we're so skilled here; we didn't put a freeze in first. And the reason they didn't put a freeze in is because they didn't want it to look like they were following Stanfield.

"I kind of feel sorry for them because they had to do something they didn't really want to do. Without a freeze, everyone thinks everyone else is getting a better deal and it's chaos.

Average House Price Rises

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Real Estate Association (CREA) says the average selling price of a house in Canada increased to $45,298 during the first nine months of this year from $40,258 in the corresponding 1974 period.

The total value of all transactions increased to $5.07 billion from $3.45 billion, the CREA said a survey showed.

Property listings, processed through the multiple listing systems of real estate boards, increased 28 per cent during the latest period. Completed sales were 22 per cent higher.

Most properties processed are houses and the majority are re-sale homes, the association said. There are about seven million housing units in Canada.

The CREA said British Columbia has the most expensive housing market with prices increasing 16.6 per cent to $49,868. Vancouver continues to be the most expensive city for housing with an average selling price of $54,974.

Saskatchewan and Manitoba are the cheapest areas for housing. The average price in both provinces during the latest period was $31,319.

Prices in Saskatchewan increased 8.8 per cent and prices in Manitoba increased 21.3 per cent over the 1974 period, the association said.

It said Regina is the cheapest place to buy property. The average price of a property this year was $33,208.

Smaller urban centres in the Atlantic and Prairie provinces show price increases higher than the national average, the CREA said.

T. B. Jackson, CREA executive vice-president, said the real estate market is stable in most regions of Canada.

He said the 16.8-per-cent increase in real estate prices this year is the same as the rise in the cost-of-living index during the same period.

MPP Says Ontario's Strength Based on North's Resources

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's prosperity is based on natural resources in the north, Bob Bain (NDP-Timiskaming) said Tuesday.

Mr. Bain said in the legislature, during estimates debate on the secretariat for resources development, that prosperity comes from the forests, mines and farms of northern Ontario.

But the north does not get a fair share in return from the province, he said. He said Donald Irvine, secretary for resources development, only has 19 staff members, including a chauffeur.

"Your ministry can't have much importance in the light of the government otherwise, it would have much more support staff and be doing a much better job," he said.

The government wanted $50 million to establish a giant recreation centre at Maple Mountain north of North Bay "for the rich and the wealthy" that would be funded by public money.

Mr. Bain said another area of concern in the north is the forest industry where it appears there is a "tremendous urge to convert our northern forests into hard currency" at the expense of future benefits.

Mr. Irvine said the government recognizes there is a great potential for tourist development in the north but there is no way any decision on a project such as Maple Mountain would be made unless such an operation would be viable.

The minister said Ontario has a good forest management program to ensure timber for future years. He said the government is aware of the importance of the forest industry where employment in the northern and eastern parts of the province is concerned.

On another matter, Mr. Irvine said a plan to create new jobs in Armstrong, Ont., to replace jobs lost with the closing of the federal government's radar base in the town, north of Thunder Bay, collapsed because of lack of local interest, and workers may have to be recruited in other communities.

Mr. Irvine told the province persuaded Domtar Ltd. to create 20 jobs as a substitute for jobs lost and provided approval of a major timber cutting program on Crown lands to the 14th expansion of its mill at Red Rock, about 45 miles northeast of Thunder Bay.

The province has started to build access roads into the logging area.

Mr. Irvine said that when Domtar announced it was moving into the area, 124 people said they were interested in working for it. Of the total, 63 kept medical appointments, and 39 were hired, he said.

"Of those 39 workers, seven did not report for work, 29 quit and six were discharged, leaving only 17 on the payroll when operations ceased Sept. 13 because of the pulp and paper industry strike."

Festiv' Art '75 —A Unique Show

COWANSVILLE, Que. (CP) — Festiv'Art '75 was a unique concept in art shows: Every one of the more than 500 works displayed was done by someone serving a prison sentence somewhere.

The recent exhibit at the Cowansville medium-security institution, 50 miles southeast of Montreal, featured representative works from across Canada and around the world. Countries such as Haiti, Brazil, Germany and the United States were among those represented.

Cowansville prisoners organized the exhibition and did the two months of planning needed to bring their exhibition into reality.

The works displayed ranged from sophisticated oils on canvas to ceramics, leather craft and sculpture. Most of the prisoners whose works were displayed are self-taught artists.

There was irony at Festiv'Art; the exhibition was displayed in "the hole"—a large room with tiny cells behind it. Prisoners are sent to these solitary cells for two or three days at a time for such misdemeanors as swearing at a guard, disobeying orders or refusing to work.

One such cell was open for public viewing.

The progressive arts and crafts program at Cowansville is and the only creative outlet open to prisoners. There is also a live theatre group and a film program organized by Ted Preston, social development director.

At an assembly in the institution gymnasium, prizes and scholarships up to $200 in value were awarded to Cowansville prisoners for their artistic and literary achievements.

Senator Harper Prowse of Edmonton, a guest at the exhibition, praised the prisoners for their creativity.

Liberals Agree Party Must Steer a Middle Road Course

OAKVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Four candidates for the leadership of the Ontario Liberal party spoke at an Oakville Liberal rally agreed the party must steer a middle course in the next provincial section.

On the platform were Albert Roy, MPP for Ottawa East; David Peterson, MPP for London Centre; Dr. Stuart Smith, MP Prior Hamilton West; and Mark MacGuigan, MP for Windsor-Walkerville.

Mr. Roy said the party must prove to the electors there is still room at the centre. "We must prove we have a social conscience but are not ready for government control."

The New Democrats said Mr. Peterson, who will officially declare his candidacy Friday, will look after the labor unions and the Progressive Conservatives will look after big business and "it is up to us to look down the middle."

Dr. Smith said it is up to the Liberals to protect the "little man," not only from big business but from big labor unions. The party, he said, must take a fundamental approach and support small business. "Profit is not a dirty word," he added.

Mr. MacGuigan, several hours late arriving when his plane was delayed by a snowstorm in Ottawa, said the Liberals must prove they are the only alternative.

Mr. MacGuigan and Mr. Roy differed on the question of law and order.

Mr. MacGuigan said the most effective deterrent to crime is the fear of being caught. He said Ontario is not doing a good job of law enforcement and 30 per cent of criminals never get caught.

Mr. Roy, a former Crown attorney in Ottawa, disagreed.

"It's one thing to get caught and another to have the courts let you go," he said. He said witnesses and jurors must be paid more than the $6 a day they now get and that busy courts, which necessitate pleabargaining, must be eliminated.

All four speakers referred to the problems they will face in convincing voters the Ontario Liberals are a separate entity from the federal party.

All candidates fielded questions from the gathering of about 100 persons. Dr. Smith said doctors should be paid for diagnosis rather than for office visits.

He said a simple case of chicken pox, for example, would bring a smaller fee than a more serious disease or illness. He charged that determent fees as suggested by the Conservatives would harm those who are elderly or seriously ill.

Mr. Roy said the health system is too important to be left entirely with doctors.

The candidates will speak again tonight in Waterloo in the first of a series of meetings sponsored by the party.

Larry Condon, MP for Middlesex London-Lambton; Ted Culp, a Toronto schoolteacher, and Michael Hudson of Mississauga, an advertising executive, are also candidates.

Farmers Buy Crop Insurance

TRURO, N.S. (CP) — More farmers than ever are buying crop insurance, says Donald MacNeil, manager of the Nova Scotia Crop Insurance Commission.

Mr. MacNeil said close to $700,000 has been paid out in claims during the last three years.

Farmers once were reluctant to purchase crop insurance because they wouldn't be able to collect unless they lost their whole crop, he said.

This year, many corn harvesters who harvested only half of their crop due to dry growing conditions are being paid claims.

Worst hit this year were corn, spring grain, peas, beans and blueberries. Mr. MacNeil expected that more than $200,000 in insurance claims would be paid out on these crops.

Even though many crops suffered during the drought, no claims are expected this year from apple and tobacco growers, who had some of the best crops in years.

Canadian Woman Blasts Sakharov for Hypocrisy

MOSCOW (AP) — On the day Andrei Sakharov was to receive the Nobel Peace Prize in absentia a leading Soviet newspaper mounts a fresh attack on the dissident physicist in the form of a letter from a Canadian woman.

The letter, published in Literaturnaya Gazeta, was from Mary Dawson, "a known progressive writer," says the paper. She is not identified further.

The letter accused Sakharov, fellow Nobel laureate Alexander Solzhenitsyn and Only Western supporters of hypocrisy in claiming that the Soviet Union violates human rights while they ignore violations in the West.

"In receiving the Nobel Peace Prize, you have one more weapon from capitalist countries to circulate a myth of oppression in the Soviet Union, the letter says.

Sakharov is not correct, the letter says, when he claims that neo-Russian minorities in the Soviet Union are discriminated against.

The Canadian writer says she walked several national minorities in Siberia last summer and "I was convinced that they live as well as Russians."

True discrimination is felt by the West's minority, like Canada's Indian population, which "were killed by the millions," she says. "Those who are left vic slowly of poverty and depredation."

Those who fight for human rights for the Canadian Indians would never receive a Nobel Prize "because the West would never recognize any violations of human rights in capitalist countries," she says.

The letter says that Solzhenitsyn, a Nobel winner in literature who was expelled from the Soviet Union last year, would never speak out on discrimination in the West because "he is a millionaire living in luxury who chose his eyes to the terrible situation of our national minorities."

The letter hints that the Canadian government would have treated Solzhenitsyn in a similar fashion as the Soviet government.

If he had spoken out against discrimination when he visited Canada last year, the letter says, he would have been forced to bounce silent or would have faced the possibility of being expelled.

The Soviet press has staged a constant attack against Sakharov since the October announcement that he won the Nobel Prize for his championship of human rights in the Soviet Union.

He was to have received the prize Wednesday in Oslo, but secret work in nuclear physics. He was one of the developers of the Soviet hydrogen bomb.

His wife Yelena, in the West for eye treatment, was to accept the award for him in the Norwegian capital.

Sakharov's Wife Accepts Nobel Prize

OSLO (AP) — Andrei Sakharov's wife accepted the 1975 Nobel Peace Prize for her husband today and read a message from him saying he shared the honor with "all prisoners of conscience in the Soviet Union and in other Eastern European countries as well as with all those who fight for their liberation."

King Olav and other members of the Norwegian royal family watched as Yelena Sakharov received the prize cheque, gold medal and diploma from Aase Lionaes, the chairman of the Norwegian parliamentary committee which nominated the Soviet nuclear physicist for his fight for human rights in the Soviet Union.

Later today, at companion 75th anniversary ceremonies in Stockholm, Sweden, the other five 1975 Nobel Prizes were to be presented to 19 scientists and Italian poet Eugenio Montale, the winner of the Prize for Literature. Special guests there were 79 previous laureates and all of last year's science prize-winners.

Sakharov, the first Russian to win the Peace Prize, was unable to receive it in person because the Soviet government refused to let him leave the country. His wife was able to attend because she was in Italy for medical treatment.

The statement she read was in addition to her 56-year-old husband's Nobel address, which she will read for him at another ceremony Thursday night.

"For all those who went through the experience of the most terrible war in history, Second World War," Sakharov's statement said, "the conception of war as the worst catastrophe and evil for all mankind has become not only an abstract idea but a deep personal feeling, the basis for one's entire outlook on the world."

"To keep one's self respect one must therefore act in accordance with the general human longing for peace, for true detente, for genuine disarmament. This is the reason why I am so deeply moved by your appreciation of my activity as a contribution to peace."

Sakharov said the award of the peace prize to "a person who defends political and civil rights against illegal and arbitrary actions means an affirmation of principles which play such an important role in determining the future of mankind."

He said the Nobel committee has performed "an act of intellectual courage and great equity" by granting the prize to "a man whose ideas do not coincide with official concepts of the leadership of a big and powerful state."

Captain Canuck Creator Plans to Cash in on Image

WINNIPEG (CP) — If the plans of Richard Comely are fulfilled, fans of Captain Canuck will be able to wrap his well-muscled torso around their necks, place his two-fisted fists on their heads and even use his forearm frame to frighten away would-be thieves at lunch.

Comely, the co-creator of the comic book character, hopes to introduce a conglomeration of merchandise in the near future to cash in on the success of his God-fearing superhero. Included is a long list of items that feature the Captain in various muscle-bound stances are towels, toques, cowlchuli, blue-ws costumes and an elec-tronic game pitting Captain Canuck against a villainous robot.

Already in existence are Captain Canuck pens, posters vuers and model kits.

Despite what appears to be a preoccupation with marketing Captain Canuck, paraphernalia the 25-year-old Comely maintains that producing a 100-per-cent Canadian comic book without over-emphasizing violence is his paramount concern.

"I think that American comic books are overdoing the theme of violence to such an extent that kids become hardened to other people's dilemmas."

Comely's reluctance to capitalize unnecessary violence, but only in comic books but the media in general, prompted him to print ad article about the effects of violence on children in the second instalment of Captain Canuck.

Comely says reaction to his anti-violent stance from American readers has been particularly favorable.

"They like the puritanism. They're glad to see I've been conscientious about the content I put in it."

The enthusiasm by U.S. comic book fans seems to have spilled over into the Canadian market. Comely says 90 per cent of the 112,000 issues of the first edition distributed last July were sold, most of them soon after appearing on the newsstands. Issue No. 2 is scheduled for mid-December.

"The fraction ... monkeys. The comic book is walking into stores and within three hours, they were gone."

Comely meets the success of Captain Canuck with apparent aplomb.

"I wouldn't have started it unless I thought it would be successful. I had faith it would work out. There were dis-appointments and frustrating moments but I thought it would be over the next day, but I guess it's the same in any business."

Devoting more time to the financial affairs of the organization has forced Comely to hire two illustrators and abandon some of the artwork duties, although he still writes all the stories.

"The business side of it is something I just want to get out of the way. Once it's done, I want to return to just drawing and writing."

One lesson the fledgling businessman learned was to expect the unexpected.

"The postal strike has hurt us a lot," he says. "Up until the postal strike, we had 1,300 subscription orders. I was reading a statement of Bateman's subscription lists which said that he has only ... names ... lions. And that's for an established ...

Thailand Village Has Advanced Technology

BAN CHIENG, Thailand (AP)—They built no cities, erected no monuments and probably fought no wars, but the nameless people who lived in this quiet village 5,000 years ago may have had the most technically advanced society in the world.

A leaf-shaped spearhead found recently 12 feet under Ban Chieng should "absolutely prove that bronze technology emerged in this area about 4,000 B.C.," says archeologist Chester Gorman of the University of Pennsylvania.

That is about 1,000 years earlier than the Mideast bronze culture that used to be thought the earliest, and bronze bracelets and tools found previously in Ban Chieng have already spurred controversy among scholars.

But Gorman's main concern is piecing together a broader portrait of a people before it is too late: for two years the burly, red-bearded American and his Thai partner Pisit Charoenwongsa have been digging at Ban Chieng in a slow, painstaking race of science against greed.

Hundreds of prehistoric pots, painted with hypnotic, finger-print-like whorls of brick red, have been found near the surface of Ban Chieng and dozens of other sites on Thailand's northeast plateau in the last nine years.

They have stimulated a brisk illegal trade in antiquities.

Villagers learned that pots they once used for slopping hogs could be sold to agents and collectors, and they began mining the historical treasures beneath their homes. Despite laws, many Ban Chieng pots have turned up in foreign shops and auction houses priced in the thousands of dollars.

"It's a real problem, and nobody's doing anything to stop it," said Gorman. If it isn't stopped, we're going to lose an awful lot of sites—we've already lost an awful lot."

Losing the pots is not so serious, he said, because of their profusion. But the amateur excavators scramble the layers of earth that allow archeologists to make history out of bits of stone, bone, metal and pottery.

The latest Ban Chieng dig is in a lane, became almost everything else in the mound that supports the village has already been despoiled.

"The red and white period is not so important to us any more because we've learned that it's only 300 to 1,000 BC," said Gorman. "What we want to learn is where these people came from and why."

Nova Scotia Handled 34 Malpractice Suits

HALIFAX (CP) — About 24 cases between how Canadian malpractice suits were handled and United States courts assess in Nova Scotia court last year, damag s in malpractice suits. says William Mingo, a Halifax lawyer.

In the U.S., damages are assessed by juries and in Nova Scotia they are usually assessed by a judge.

It is generally possible to persuade juries, he said, and it is difficult to have their decisions set aside. In Canada, even when the damages are assessed by a jury they can be adjusted by the judge

Mr. Mingo said judges in Canada would never let juries make the kind of awards which are made in the U.S.

Dr. N. F. Brown, president of the Canadian Medical Protective Association, said cases in the U.S. are usually settled out of court by the doctors' insurance companies but in Canada they have fought it in court whenever they felt the doctor was not at fault.

He said malpractice suits in the U.S. are "an iniquitous practice, where much of the damage goes to the legal profession and not to the patients where it belongs."

Toronto Teachers Continue Strike

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

About 8,000 high school teachers in Metropolitan Toronto continues a strike which began Nov. 12 while 1,600 secondary school teachers in the nearby Brampton area were to vote today on their board's latest contract proposal.

The Brampton area teachers had rejected an earlier offer which was in excess of federal anti-inflation wage and price controls.

In Chatham, Ont., about 600 high school teachers with the Kent County board of education prepared for the last day of a four-day strike. They are to return to their classrooms Friday on a work-to-rule basis.

Negotiations between the Metro Toronto school board and its striking teachers continued through the night Wednesday under three provincial mediators who entered the dispute six days ago in an effort to start a new round of bargaining between the two sides.

One of the mediators, George Adams, vice-chairman of the Ontario Labor Relations Board, said neither side has formally moved from the bargaining position it held when the strike began.

When the last round of mediation broke off Nov. 16, teachers were seeking a 42.9-per-cent increase in a two-year contract plus a cost-of-living allowance.

The board's latest contract offer of a 39.5-per-cent increase was rejected by the teachers before the federal anti-inflation review board ruled last month that the offer was in excess of federal anti-inflation guidelines. The strike, in its fifth week, has disrupted classes for about 160,000 students.

In transition, negotiators for high school teachers under the Peel board of education said Wednesday the teachers, voting today, should reject the board's latest offer because acceptance means they will have no way to fight anti-inflation board rulings except through the courts.

John Paleit, board lawyer, said Tuesday that despite federal controls, the board may grant large salary increases to its teachers because the British North America Act gives the province exclusive rights over education.

Details of the tentative agreement have not been released, but board officials say it is not much different from their offer two weeks ago of a 33.5-per-cent increase over one year. The board has agreed to support the tentative contract before the anti-inflation board if the teachers vote to ratify it.

Alex O'Brien, chairman of the Kent County board of education, said Wednesday that when teachers there return to schools Friday on a work-to-rule basis the board will review the situation daily but probably will keep schools open.

Under new provincial legislation governing collective bargaining for teachers, work-to-rule campaigns are described as strike action and boards of education are given the right to close schools when their operation is disrupted.

Schools have remained open during the strike, which began Monday, and about 20 teachers crossed picket lines set up Wednesday at the board office and the 11 schools affected.

Gary Bonner, member of the provincial bargaining team for the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation (OSSTF), said Wednesday that the board asked negotiators for the teachers to participate in informal discussions but did not ask for a resumption of negotiations which broke off Nov. 20.

Mr. O'Brien said earlier in the day that the board tried unsuccessfully Tuesday to resume negotiations but the OSSTF indicated that until more money was offered bargaining would not take place.

The board is offering a 33-per-cent increase and teachers are crease prior to the introduction seeking 52 per cent.

Meanwhile Education Minister Thomas Wells said Wednesday in the legislature, that a charge of bad-faith bargaining laid against the province by teachers in Ontario schools for the deaf and blind will be heard in due course by the education relations commission.

Mr. Wells said the government's policy is that any financial offer made by Ontario before Oct. 14 will remain the same.

He said the teachers received an offer of an 18-per-cent in o wage and price controls on that date.

The minister also said most Metro Toronto high school students whose parents pay assessments on property owned in other areas of the province have a right to attend schools in those communities while Metro Toronto teachers remain on strike.

Mr. Wells said he will help their children legally fulfil the requirements of the Education Act.

Canadian Company Develops Computer

RICHMOND, B.C. (CP) — A more efficient methods to assemble data for its own purposes—dealing with inventory, payroll, quality control, production, material handling—but found nothing on the market that fulfilled its requirements.

Elco Industries Ltd., based in this Vancouver-area municipality, says the new invention is unique because of compactness and the number of simultaneous electronic functions performed.

Elco says its new device can be adapted quickly and with relative simplicity to virtually any kind of business, industry, enterprise or operation.

It can be used to monitor patients in an intensive treatment ward; be the heart of a hotel security and service system where punch cards would replace room keys; or monitor security production time flow and quality control in a factory.

The latest model for the data collection unit is half the size of a typewriter.

Helmut Eppich, who with his brother Hugo began the Elco group of companies in 1956, says the new development is a case of a subsidiary industry arising from an internal need.

The company searched for cartridges, discs or other memory systems.

At Elco, the terminal is used to initiate and follow the progress of a job. Built into the production control process is a security control, a time-keeping function, inventory control, and quality and material handling control. It also triggers an alarm system in the event of a breach of security or incorrect input of information.

Mr. Eppich says the company is aware it is entering a highly competitive field, "but we think we have something better at this time, call it a better mouse trap."

Elco developed its reputation on an ability to fabricate unusual pieces of equipment to specification and at competitive prices. Past developments have not begun as Elco inventions or designs.

Hugo Eppich says diversification continues to be the company's strategy.

It happens in two ways. First we look for subsidiary companies to feed our existing complex of companies. Second we look for new situations not necessarily related to our existing operations, but with the kind of potential we know we can deal with."

Canada's NATO Land Troops Will Have Better Tanks, Artillery

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence Minister James Richardson has told his NATO colleagues of new plans to make Canadian land forces in Europe a more effective brigade group.

Speaking this week at the Brussels ministerial meeting of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, he said the 2,500-member Canadian land element will have more and better tanks and artillery.

The speech added more details to the forces modernization announcement Mr. Richardson made here last week.

He then talked of improving artillery, which the department said will cost $2.25 million over the next 18 months. He also talked of reinforcement proposals to bring the brigade up to war footing in a crisis.

A department spokesman said the minister's speech means the land element is being beefed up from its present status of "re-inforced brigade" to what the reporters a country has not been singled out for praise this way in many years, if ever.

The minister, who has heard strong continuing complaints about the condition of the Canadian European force, said the new policy has been accepted by cabinet and public.

Partly because of its outmoded equipment the force has had a reserve role on the central front. No plans have been announced of a future change in that role after the force acquires new tanks.

Mr. Richardson announced in Canada that the government will provide its forces either with a new tank or a completely refitted Centurion tank. He said in Brussels that the Royal Canadian Dragoons will have three squadrons of 15 tanks each in place of the present two.

Mr. Richardson later told re-

Province Takes Interest in Quinte Trail

New facilities may be available this winter for cross-country skiing in the Hastings County countryside.

The reason: Provincial government interest in the potential of the Quinte-Hastings Recreation Trail (QHRT) for creating easily-accessible loops.

As QHRT directors see it, the trail — which winds across Hastings and Prince Edward counties — could become a winter woodlands spine for the loops.

In Belleville Wednesday they talked with an official from the natural resources ministry's Napanee district office.

As a result a survey of possible loop sites will be made this week along the trail in Sidney, Thurlow and Rawdon township.

Jim Staveley, QHRT president and secretary Grand Harvey will soon discuss similar surveys with officials in the ministry's Tweed and Bancroft districts.

If such projects prove feasible, says Mr. Staveley, the ministry is contemplating funding preparation and maintenance of loop sites by the QHRT.

If such hopes are borne out it could be a minor — but significant — breakthrough as far as the trail's volunteer initiators are concerned.

It would mean government has finally recognized why the trail was originally built — to meet a demand for recreation space in the rural outdoors, Mr. Staveley.

Early Planning Under Way On Century Place Second Phase

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Preliminary plans now are being formulated for the second phase of Century Place, a spokesman for Belle-Bridge Developments Ltd. said Wednesday.

Brian Holmes said details of the second phase are sketchy as plans are still in the formative stages. Ed Zeidler, responsible for the design of the first phase, was on the spot this week preparing preliminary drawings, said Mr. Holmes.

The second phase will "possibly" reach $1.5 million in construction costs and will measure in terms of floor space "at least one third of the size of the existing complex," said Mr. Holmes.

The five-storey building at the intersection of Front and Bridge Sts. now encloses some 110,000 square feet including two floors of retail space topped off with three floors of office accommodation. The first phase now in the completion stages was estimated to cost approximately $3.5 million which includes land purchase.

Mr. Holmes said the second phase now is being considered and that developers own three properties on McAnnany St., where the addition will be located.

He said the addition will contain more retail and office space but could not comment on the possibility of the addition measuring five floors high. "A final decision hasn't been made on the second phase yet."

Commenting on the existing building, Mr. Holmes indicated construction is slightly ahead of schedule and that renovations and decorations for tenants are progressing.

He said the building's heating plant was recently put into operation and that permanent power should be turned on within the next week or so.

He said work will begin almost immediately to prepare the building's third floor for Bell Canada as the largest, single tenant in the building. Bell will occupy the entire floor. The telephone company is expected to move into its new quarters in March.

Guernsey Trust Co. Ltd. will begin decoration of their quarters in the building Jan. 15 and it is expected the firm will be moving in by Feb. 1.

"In addition to these two tenant's, another 7,000 square feet of floor space will be taken with tenants expected to move in April 1 as well," said Mr. Holmes.

County Watching Studies

A Hastings County council committee is keeping a close eye on restructuring studies on its flanks.

Council's municipal reform committee reports to council this week it awaits "with interest" the recommendations of such analyses.

County restructuring studies are still under way in Lennox and Addington to the east and Northumberland on the west.

The committee, headed by Reeve Barbara Allen of Tweed, said its policy is not to interfere in any decision-making process of the neighboring counties unless any of the recommendations affect Hastings.

It also reminded council that a provincial Special Program Review recommended postponement of any further plans for regional governments or restructured counties.

Woman Charged

Penelope Smith, 22, of 37 Fleetwood Cres. at RR 7, Belleville has been charged with failing to yield the right-of-way with a car-truck collision late Monday on Highway 2 at Montrose Rd. just west of Belleville.

Ontario Provincial Police at Belleville say a 1973-model Volkswagen was turning east onto the highway from Montrose Rd. when it collided with a westbound 1971-model International tractor trailer driven by Wayne Douglas Sharpe, 29, of 82 Martinus Dr. in Trenton and owned by Canadian Pacific Express of Toronto.

Two Hurt In Crash

A North Park St. man has been charged by city police for failure to obey a red light following a two-car collision at the intersection of Victoria and Church St. Wednesday morning.

Charged is Ernest C. Roberts of 30 North Park St.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said today the Roberts vehicle was eastbound on Victoria when it failed to stop at a red light at the Church St. intersection and was in collision with a southbound vehicle driven by Francis Badgley of RR 1 Shannonville.

Two passengers in the Roberts vehicle, Robert Hayward of Forin St., and Elizabeth Roberts, were treated at Belleville General Hospital for minor injuries.

Damage to the Roberts car was estimated at $700 and $350 damage to the Badgley vehicle.

Thieves Leave Empty-handed

Police today reported nothing was stolen when thieves broke into the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club sometime during Tuesday night. Entry was gained by forcing a south side window, said police.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said the break-in was not reported until Wednesday.

Library Extends Service

CANNIFTON —As of Jan. 1, Thurlow Township residents will be able to become full members of Bellevile Library.

Thurlow Township Council Wednesday passed a motion allowing Reeve Hogace Casey sign an agreement with Belleville Library Board to allow approximately 4,500 township residents full membership privileges.

The agreement between Belleville Library Board and Thurlow Township Council, makes up Thurlow Township Library board's costs as a result of a $9,000 grant from Ontario ministry of culture and recreation.

Reeve Casey said the grant, awarded at a rate of $1.50 per capita, will be turned over the Belleville library in return for membership privileges.

Glass Job Complete

The last of dozens of pieces of reflective and smoked glass were hoisted into position at Century Place this week. A spokesman for the developers said now the exterior is almost com-plete workmen will begin interior decorating to suit tenants. Already, the second phase of Century Place is being considered with preliminary plans now being prepared.

'Clearing House' Approach Rejected by Centre Heads

Quinte Information and Assistance Centre directors say wage and price complaints should be directed in the anti-inflation board in Ottawa.

Centre directors Wednesday refused to act on a clearing house concept for such complaints as suggested by staff member Bill Hockley yesterday.

Opposition to the idea was led by director Doug Sword, also president of the Quinte District Labor Council.

Mr. Sword said by permitting such action, the board would become an agency of the government, essentially, doing someone else's work.

Complaints to the Ottawa board are an individual responsibility, and one out of the jurisdiction of the centre, he said.

As proposed by Mr. Hockley, the centre could collect complaints and act as an intermediary, sending standard complaint forms regularly to the board in Ottawa.

Both Mr. Hockley and director Vern Farrow argued the concept was within the centre's charter, but the board decided to postpone any action.

It was agreed to wait until additional information was available from the anti-inflation board on its requirements.

Likewise, the same concept, applied to the proposed Ontario government rent review boards was set aside by the centre board, despite arguments by Mr. Farrow that Quinte residents now had no known group to turn to for help.

Chief Won't Name Deputy

CANNIFTON — Thurlow volunteer fire department will not be appointing a new deputy fire chief to replace Elmer Middleton who held that position until he died Nov. 24 answering a fire call.

Chief Vince Maher told Thurlow Township Council Wednesday: "I have two good captains" and said he doesn't feel a deputy chief is necessary. The department has halls in Point Anne and Corbyville.

Donations to Centre Soon Tax Deductable

Donations to the Quinte Information and Assistance Centre will shortly be tax deductable, the centre's board learned Wednesday.

In a letter from Revenue Canada, the centre learned it qualified for registration with the federal government as a non-profit charitable organization.

As such, it will be able to issue receipts suitable for exemptions on income tax forms.

Revenue Canada said a number under which the centre will issue receipt will be forthcoming shortly.

Director Ivy said they see the tax exempt forms as an enhancement to donations, needed as a source of funds to supplement present operating grants.

The centre, which has a checkered history of acquiring grants, recently was given a $15,000 grant from the federal ministry of consumer and corporate affairs.

It currently operates under a $12,000 grant from the same ministry.

The Long Journey

Joseph and Mary, portrayed by deaf students Ralph Baxter and Florence Lance of the Sir James Whitney School for the Deaf, graduating class, make the long journey to Bethlehem for the Nativity, an annual Christmas pageant more than 30 years old at the school. It will be presented Dec. 12 and 13 at 8:15 in the gymnatorium.

Health Unit Not Exempt From Financial Restraints

News that Ontario health facilities will not be excluded from constraints on all provincial government expenditures in 1976 has the Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Board of Health in a quandary.

The board, Wednesday, perused a notice from Ontario minister of health S.W. Martin who said in next year's health unit budget, "costs of purchased goods and services will not be accepted at any level which exceeds 10 per cent over the approved 1975 budget."

He said:

"It is expected that, where cuts are necessary, in the first instance, these will affect administrative items, e.g. administrative staff, travel and conference expenses, rather than direct services," Mr. Martin noted.

However, it is the second and greater instance which concern the board.

Mr. Martin said, "definite reductions by the volume of services will have to be made and reductions in number of staff will have to take place on a selective basis in order to live within the funding limits available."

He added no increase in ministry funding will be allowed for new programs or expansion of services and the ministry will not accept requests for staff increases.

Threatened reduction of current services particularly worried Dr. Dennis A. Warrick, health unit director of dental services, who announced in October a list of dental service activities, including some expanded elementary school services, for 1975-76.

Dr. Warrick pointed out the irony of the situation to the board. He commented that during the past few years, the health unit has faithfully followed health ministry guidelines to upgrade and increase services.

"Now they (services) are going to be chopped," he remarked.

He suggested the board should go to the ministry with a justification of health unit programs in operation at present.

"Elected people, people on boards, should take a stand on a letter like this," commented Ald. Jean Smith of Belleville. They (ministry officials) are not looking at the services we have."

Driver Charged

RAWDON — A Stirling man has been charged with careless driving after he lost control of his vehicle on the 4th Concession Rd. of Rawdon Township Tuesday.

Charged is Arthur Ross Gouzard, 21, of RR 1 Stirling.

A spokesman for the Madoc Ontario Provincial Police said the eastbound vehicle went out of control entered the south ditch, travelling for 600 feet before it turned over the highway entering the north ditch and striking a hydro pole and two fence posts.

City Ski Program Shy of Participants

Participation in this winter's city ski program hasn't exactly been as scarce as snow on the slopes in September.

But response so far to the annual project run by the city's recreation department hasn't been up like a blizzard either.

As yet, applications haven't been as numerous as hoped, says recreation director Gerald Belch. There is still plenty of space in both classes — for beginners and advanced skiers.

There's no apparent reason for the slacker response this year. But part of it could be the weather — "which hadn't the look of winter until this week."

Now, with the first heavy snow on the ground, Shoppa may turn more easily on skis" says Mr. Belch.

The eight-week program has been running for the past three at the Batawa Ski Club.

There's room for 25 on the bus used to transport skiers to Batawa.

Skiing starts Jan. 6 for beginners and Jan. 6 for advanced skiers.

Bus pickups will be at the YMCA, the recreation centre and Quinte Secondary School.

Inflation — including higher costs of transportation — has boosted fees this year — from $18 to $22, says Mr. Belch. The charge for out-of-city residents is $27.50.

November Bad Month

Ontario Provincial Police (OPP) at Belleville investigated six fatal motor vehicle collisions during the past three weeks in which 30 in which nine people were killed.

November was the worst month for all types of traffic accidents with seven persons killed in four fatal collisions, the OPP report.

October was free of fatalities but September produced two fatal collisions with a passenger and a pedestrian killed.

November saw 30 personal injury collisions while September had 21 and October 13. A total of 43 people were injured in November but only 21 in September and 22 in October.

The total number of collisions showed November leading the way by a large margin with 94, September with 72 and October with 67.

Car, Train Collide

TWEED — No one was injured early today in a car-train collision about a mile west of here. Damage was estimated by Ontario provincial police in excess of $1,000.

Police say a vehicle driven by Harold Smith, 45, of Stirborough, Ont. was in collision with a CNR train striking it was northbound on a line about two miles north of Boonsville.

The train, pulling 23 box cars, was driven by Norman Meldrum, of 117 Hastings Dr., Belleville.

Police say the visibility at the scene collision was poor. Police said there was no damage to the train.

Getting Into the Act

Barbara Howard got in the act at Glanmore House puppet show Wednesday night . . . although she wasn't always visible. The 12-year-old was among backstage puppeteers helping with the show as part of the museum's week-long Christmas program.

Community to Benefit from Sentences of Two City Youths

By ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

James Robert Bateman and Dennis Allan Davis, both of 116 Station St., had been charged with various counts of break, enter and theft in connection with break-ins at several Belleville area business establishment this year.

The incidents culminated with an Aug. 17 break-in at Motorland Chrysler Plymouth Ltd. at 250 North Front St. during which $7,000 in damage was caused.

Bateman pleaded guilty to nine counts of break — enter and theft and one count of possession of property obtained by crime and Davis was found guilty on eight counts of break, enter and theft.

Judge Clendenning commented that during the probation period, the maximum allowed under the Criminal Code, the two youths will each reserve about 18 hours per week to "perform such services to the community as may be directed by the probation officer."

He explained the number of hours for each youth was determined by dividing each youth's share of the estimated total damage by Ontario's minimum wage of $2.60 per hour.

Judge Clendenning also ordered the youths to observe a curfew of 10 p.m. each night except where their community service work might interfere.

In addition, he ordered them to continue to attend secondary school, remain in the jurisdiction of the court, keep the peace and be of good behaviour and report monthly to their probation officer as required.

He told them their sentencing is part of a new program of community-oriented sentencing which has seen success in Belleville in the past—year by being a deterrent to recvitism by young criminal offenders who are placed under the guidance of community volunteer agencies.

Judge Clendenning said Davis could have received a maximum of ,112 years in prison and Bateman could have been sent to prison for 128 years but he added, "those limits are unacceptable in the case of these accused."

He pointed out incarceration probably would engender recivitism" and would cost the public $14,000 per year.

Firefighters (from left to right), Dan Bowers, Grant Parks and Larry Fritz, pose with the array of trophies that will be awarded Saturday at the conclusion of the Belleville Firefighters Second Annual Invitational Wrestling Tournament at Centennial Secondary School. Over 200 entries will be on hand for the meet which begins at 10 a.m. and will continue on into the evening.

300 Wrestlers In Tournament

Three hundred wrestlers will invade Belleville Saturday for the Second Annual Belleville Firefighters Invitational Wrestling Tournament to be held at Centennial Secondary School. The early numbers have more than doubled for this year's meet" — and some schools had to be turned down," explained organizer of the event, Larry Fritz.

A total of 29 schools ranging from Toronto, Kingston, Pembroke and Ottawa along with local wrestling teams will be taking part in the event. Last year, in the first meet 120 wrestlers took part from nine schools.

"Next year it may be as big or bigger than the Montreal Open," noted Fritz.

Preparations are already being made for next year's event.

"Next year there will be at least double the number of entries and we may have to spread it over two days," said Fritz.

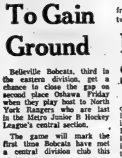
Last year's grand champion team from Cobourg East High School will be back to defend their title and try to make it two years in a row. This year the school will be sending a team of 22 wrestlers, six short of the maximum of 28 in two per weight class.

The awards this year will be the same as last, a trophy for first, second and third place and a ribbon for fourth.

The local tournament is the only wrestling meet in Ontario including the All Ontario wrestling finals for high schools, that gives out trophies, say organizers.

The bad point system will be used in scoring. This means that a wrestler has to accumulate a designated number of points before he is eliminated from competition. Wrestling is set to begin at 10 a.m. Saturday morning and continue on into the evening. Price of admission for the meet is 75 cents for students and 50 cents for adults.

Trojans and Nicks Get Wins



KENT MANNING

Moira Secondary School Trojans bounced back from an eight point half time deficit Wednesday night to defeat Centennial Chargers 54-43 in the opening game of the Senior A Basketball Doubleheader.

The Trojans, sparked by forward Kent Manning's 23 points, earned a share of second place in the standings with a 3-1 record.

In the second game, Nicholson Nicks and Belleville Collegiate squared off in a defensive duel tha tfinished with the Nicks on top 48-38.

While Manning was taking care of offence, Mike Thompson was keying Moira's defence and it was the defence that made the difference in the second half as the Chargers were held to just 23 points. Scott Simon added 10 points to the Trojans' attack and John Lowe got eight. Thompson checked in with six.

The Chargers, who were in front 30-22 after the opening two periods, got an excellent two way effort from Dennis Kamada. He popped 13 points, as did John Long, and John Hipwell scored 10.

NCC 48, BCI 38

The Nicks and the Collegians spent the first half of the contest playing tight defensive ball. Neither could afford to make mistakes so both made sure on every scoring opportunity. These tactics led to a 22-22 deadlock at half time.

But it was the Nicks who got the jump in the second half and rolled up 13 consecutive third quarter points before BCI could get on track.

Dale Wilson led the Nicks scoring with 15 points and Jeff Boyle counted eight. Guard, Bruce Collins came up with 12.

Two Collegians closed the gap to 33-30, but that was as close as they could get. Veteran forward Brian Bell had 14 points and John Guthrie scored eight. Mike Kirby was next with six.

Thomas Marks His Return in Style

By GLENN COLE
The Canadian Press

Wayne Thomas played his first game on Montreal Forum ice in two years Wednesday night and the soft-spoken Toronto Maple Leafs goaltender said it was probably his best ever in Montreal.

Thomas, acquired by the Leafs from Montreal in a trade during the off-season, blocked 25 shots, helping Toronto to a 3-3 tie with the Canadiens in one of six National Hockey League games played.

In other action, Buffalo Sabres and New York Rangers battled to a 3-3 tie, Detroit Red Wings nipped Pittsburgh Penguins 3-2, Chicago Black Hawks bombed Washington Capitals 7-2, Los Angeles Kings topped St. Louis Blues 5-4 and Philadelphia Flyers tied California Golden Seals 3-3.

Guy Lapointe deflected John Van Boxmeer's shot from the right point with 3:32 remaining in the third period to give Montreal its tie, preserving the Canadiens unbeaten string at the Forum. The Canadiens are the only team in the NHL without a loss on their home ice this season and now have a 10-0-1 record at the Forum.

Yvan Cournoyer and Jacques Lemaire scored the other Montreal goals. Jim McKenny scored in the first period for the Leafs with Lanny McDonald getting two in the second to give Toronto a 3-1 lead going into the final period.

"We kind of laid back in the third period and they came on," said Thomas, who sat out the 1974-75 season as Montreal's third-string netminder.

Thomas thought his best save came in the last minute of the second period when he stopped Peter Mahovlich.

"I enjoyed that save the most. I just waved my stick in the air and the puck hit it. I didn't even see who shot the puck.

"I never really played that well in the Forum when I was with the Canadiens. I played well on the road when I was with Montreal."

In New York, Gilbert Perreault beat New York's John Davidson on the goaltender's stick side with a 40-foot shot for his 15th goal with seven minutes remaining in the third period to give the Sabres their tie with the Rangers.

Jacques Richard was the other Buffalo scorer with Walt Tkaczuk and Jerry Holland replying for the Rangers.

The Red Wings snapped a three-game losing streak and extended their home-ice unbeaten record to six game with the win over Pittsburgh.

Mickey Redmond tipped in Nick Lapointe's shot with 5:31 remaining in the final period for the game-winning goal. Bill Hogaboam and Dennis Polonich were the other Detroit marksmen with Jean Pronovost and Lowell MacDonald replying for Pittsburgh.

MacDonald, shaken up in a first-period collision, left the game shortly after putting Pittsburgh ahead 3-2 with 36 seconds gone in the middle period. He ran into Detroit's Bryan Watson and suffered a possible broken thumb and an injured shoulder.

Dennis Hull had two goals and a pair of assists in Chicago's one-sided win over Washington.

The game was rough in spots with referee Bob Kilger assessing 44 minutes in penalties in the second period as two fights broke out within a minute of each other.

Chicago's Grant Mulvey and Washington's Gordon Lane were assessed fighting majors at 13:47 and 46 seconds later. Darcy Rota of the Hawks and the Caps John Paddock were chased for spearing and fighting.

Centre Marcel Dionne scored a goal in each period to bring his total to 30 for the year and Rogatien Vachon recorded his third shutout of the season leading the Kings to their fifth consecutive win.

Oilers' Ullman Member Of Exclusive 500 Club

The Canadian Press

It isn't often a hockey player scores four goals in a game and has to share the spotlight.

That's exactly what happened to Tim Sheehy of Edmonton Oilers, who had his four-goal game on the same night team-mate Norm Ullman joined hockey's exclusive 500-goal club.

Sheehy and Ullman helped the Oilers to a 7-4 win over the slumping Quebec Nordiques in a World Hockey Association game.

Ullman, who switched to the WHA this year after a 20-year stay in the National Hockey League with Detroit Red Wings and Toronto Maple Leafs, scored his ninth and 10th goals of the season in the third period after Quebec narrowed Edmonton's lead to one goal.

The Provencr, Alta., native became the eighth player ever to score 500 major league goals in regular-season action, joining Gordie Howe, Bobby Hull, Frank Mahovlich, Maurice Richard, Phil Esposito, Jean Beliveau and Johnny Bucyk.

In Wednesday's other games, Winnipeg Jets edged Toronto Toros 4-3 in overtime, New England Whalers edged Minnesota Fighting Saints 3-2 and Indianapolis Racers shaded Phoenix Roadrunners 3-2.

Ullman's career has come full circle since he played junior for Edmonton Oil Kings and turned professional with Edmonton Oilers of the old Western Hockey League in 1956-57.

The big league career that began the following season with Detroit appeared to be near its end last year when he saw limited duty with the Leafs and finished with nine goals and 28 assists, his lowest totals since his rookie year.

But the return to his native province seems to have given him a second wind. Thursday's goals gave him 32 points for the season, making him Edmonton's top scorer.

Sheehy, a former U.S. college star, got two goals in each of the first two periods to increase his output for the season to 15 and give Edmonton a 4-1 lead.

The loss was the third in a row for the Nordiques, who were outshot 43-23 and dropped three points behind the Jets in the Canadian Division standings.

Winnipeg's Bobby Hull whistled a slap shot between the legs of Toronto goaltender Dave Tataryn in the first minute of overtime to give the Jets their win.

Tataryn, a rookie from Whitby Warriors of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series, relieved starter Mario Viro in the first period and played another outstanding game.

He was particularly effective against Hull in regulation play and stopped several point-blank shots. While the Toros were outscoring the Jets 3-1 in the third period to force the game into overtime, Tataryn blocked 15 shots.

Tom Webster's power-play goal midway in the third period enabled New England to end a three-game losing streak at Hartford. Rosaire Paiement and Larry Pleau were the Whalers other scorers.

Brian McDonald scored during a goal-mouth scramble midway through the final period to give the Racers their win before a Phoenix crowd of 4,380.

Tonight's WHA schedule has Indianapolis at San Diego Mariners and Edmonton at Calgary Cowboys.

Selects Show '67s How

OTTAWA (CP) — Moscow Selects secured their second victory of a Canadian tour Wednesday, defeating Ottawa 67s of the Ontario Hockey Association major junior A series 9-6.

It was a display of team versatility for 5,944 fans in the 9,300-seat Civic Centre as nine players scored for the Russians, who Tuesday defeated Nova Scotia Voyageurs of the professional American Hockey League 6-2.

It also was a revelation to the fans, used to rough and ready OHA junior hockey, as only eight penalties were called in the game—five of them to Russian players.

Boris Alexandrov, Vaddimir Golikov and Serge Kotov gave the Russian team a 3-2 first period advantage before Vladimir and Vaddimir Petrov scored unanswered goals in the second.

Ottawa actually outscored Russia in the third period. Goals for Russia went to Alexander Bartnev, Vaddimir Kovin and Alexei Volcherbert.

FOREMAN OPENS BID

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Former heavyweight champion George Foreman opens his bid for another shot against Muhammad Ali when he battles Ron Lyle in a 12-round bout at Las Vegas on Jan. 24. The announcement of the place and time came Wednesday at a news conference with both Foreman and Lyle attending. Financial arrangements of the Foreman-Lyle bout were not announced. Foreman, who will be 28 two days before the Las Vegas fight, lost his championship on an eighth-round knockout to Ali in Zaire, Africa, on Oct. 30, 1974. Lyle was stopped in his championship bid at Las Vegas last May 16.

Americans Keep Blowing Chances

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

For the third time in eight nights, Rochester Americans blew a chance Wednesday night to take over first place in the Northern Division of the American Hockey League.

The Americans, who trail Nova Scotia Voyageurs, were frustrated by the goaltending of Ed Stankowski, who stopped 54 shots in a 4-1 victory by Providence Reds.

Stankowski, the top pick of St. Louis Blues of the National Hockey League in last spring's amateur draft, was a standout last season with Regina Pats of the Western Canada Hockey League.

In Wednesday's game, he in turn contributed on offense, feeding the puck to Lynn Powis for an empty-net goal after Rochester pulled its netminder late in the game.

The goal was one of three for Powis. Jamie Masters had the other Providence goal while Ron Garwasiuk scored for Rochester.

Hershey Bears outlasted New Haven Night Hawks 6-7 in Wednesday's only other game.

A line of Jean Gratton, Gary McAdam and Wayne Blanchin contributed nine points to the Hershey attack. McAdam had two goals and an assist, Blanchin a goal and an assist and Gratton four assists.

Hershey led 7-1 after two periods, but the Hawks got six goals in the final period, three of them from Alain Langlais.

Yves Bergeron scored what proved to be the winner for Hershey early in the period.

The win, the sixth in a row for Hershey, moved the Bears to within two points of first place Richmond Robbins in the Southern Division.

Ron Snell, Steve Cardwell, Michel Deziel and Pete Lafrancoise had the other Hershey goals. Tom Colley, Rick McCann, Bill Plager and Brian McCutcheon were the other New Haven scorers.

Liberal Candidates Criticize PCs for Handling of Strike

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Liberal candidates in the Ontario provincial leadership campaign castigated the Progressive Conservative government for its handling of the Ontario teachers' strike but most favored the right to strike for teachers when questioned on the issue at an all-candidates meeting Wednesday.

Six potential leaders of the party were on hand for the first in a series of meetings being held around the province to give exposure to candidates wanting to succeed Liberal Leader Robert Nixon, who has announced his intention of stepping down.

The new leader will be chosen at a convention Jan. 23-25 in Toronto.

On hand for the opening meeting were: Dr. Stuart Smith, MPP for Hamilton West, David Peterson, MPP for London Centre, Albert Roy, MPP for Ottawa East, Mark MacGuigan, MP for Windsor-Walkerville, Larry Grossman, MP for Sault Ste. Marie and Michael Houlton, a public relations executive from Ottawa.

All but Mr. Peterson, who is expected to declare his candidacy Friday, have announced their intention of running. Terry Colp, a Toronto teacher who also has announced his candidacy, was not at the meeting.

A London school teacher, in a question asked the candidates their positions on provincial Bill 100 which gives teachers the right to strike.

Dr. Smith, the first to answer, said he did not like strikes but teachers should have the same rights as other workers.

He said Toronto teachers, on strike since mid-November, have not played the situation properly but the provincial government has totally abdicated its responsibility in handling the strikes.

"It would not permit the teachers to be scape-goated," he said.

Mr. MacGuigan, too, said the provincial Tories have "shirked their responsibility" in handling the strike.

"But I do not think the right to strike should exist in public service . . . . There has got to be other and better ways."

Mr. Roy said he was concerned about the right to strike in the public sector but said he would consider it "unconscionable to take away the right to strike unless we come up with another alternative."

Mr. Peterson called the strike by Toronto "an absolute shambles."

He said if he was the premier he would have taken steps to force now in order to help reach a settlement.

"I think the whole thing has been mishandled from the beginning," he said.

Mr. Condon said he favored the right to strike for everyone except police, firefighters and those maintaining order.

"But you have to be realistic and face facts," he said, adding that the working sector has an obligation to live by the anti-inflation guidelines set by the federal government.

Mr. Houlton said he believes in the right to strike for teachers and does not believe they should be legislated back to work.

Earlier, in eight minute speeches to 100 persons, the candidates' statements ranged from attack on socialism to a call for an increase in the province's minimum wage.

Dr. Smith said Ontario restricts do not want socialism.

He talked of the lop-sided growth of the province and called for a redistribution of growth from the Toronto area to such areas as Kingston or Victoria-Haliburton.

Mr. MacGuigan said there should be restraint in government expenditures.

"There must be cuts in hospital programs, in education and in the government's own payrolls," he said.

Mr. Roy called for a "certain amount of independence" from the federal Liberal party.

"The voters must perceive us to be an Ontario party."

Mr. Peterson said he became the premier he would decentralize government.

"Why shouldn't the natural resources ministry be based in Sudbury?" he asked. "Why shouldn't the agriculture ministry be in Brantford?"

Mr. Condon said he would raise the minimum wage to $3.50 an hour from $2.40.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — William Wellman, a motion picture director whose life was as colorful as some of his highly acclaimed films, died Tuesday of leukemia, his wife said.

Wellman, whose films included the classic, Wings, in 1927, the original Beau Geste and A Star is Born, had been seriously ill since September.

Among other Wellman films were Public Enemy, which made James Cagney a star, the classic western The Ox-Bow Incident, and The High and the Mighty.

Wellman, a First World War flying ace and former barnstorming pilot, asked that his ashes be scattered in the sky following private services, his son Bill said.

OTTAWA (CP) — Telesat Canada signed a $19.1-million contract Tuesday with RCA Corp.—the American communications company—for Canada's fourth communications satellite, to be launched in 1978.

Telesat president D. A. Golden said the Crown corporation plans to lease the satellite's services to the federal government, but would not give the sum involved.

Nearly 30 per cent of the contract for the satellite—$5.6 million—will be subcontracted to the American firm's Canadian branch, RCA Ltd. of Montreal, he said.

RCA also will supply tracking and command equipment for Telesat's earth station near Toronto.

The Montreal firm will be responsible for much of the technological innovation in the satellite, said G. D. Clark, president of RCA Ltd.

This includes development of equipment capable of transmitting and receiving the four special high frequency channels the satellite will carry, he said.

These high frequency channels will allow Telesat to establish earth stations for the satellite in large cities, said John Davidson, a communications department spokesman.

The new satellite will replace the first Anik, which was launched in 1972 and will need replacing by 1978. Under international agreement, Canada can have only three satellites in operation.

MILAN, Italy (AP) — American soprano Shirley Verrett has scored a new triumph at Milan's La Scala opera house, singing Lady Macbeth in Verdi's opera Macbeth for the first time in her career.

She was great," Renata Tebaldi, herself an opera star, said after Sunday night's opening performance. An Italian critic said: "She was a splendid Lady Macbeth. She is a great singer, a splendid actress and a real artist."

Miss Verrett, a native of New Orleans who grew up in Los Angeles, was making her fourth performance at La Scala. She was warmly applauded and received several calls after every act of the opera.

LOS ANGELES (Reuter) — A millionaire pleaded guilty Monday to involuntary manslaughter in the death last year of Scottish musician Robbie McIntosh, drummer of the Average White Band rock group.

McIntosh, 28, passed out after sniffing heroin at a rock party and later died in the arms of his wife, Edith.

The party host, Kenneth Moss, 32, who made millions as a broker on the New York Stock Exchange in the late 1960s, but abandoned Wall Street to found a charter airline for hippies, was originally charged with murder in McIntosh's death.

But Superior Court Judge Vernon Foster accepted an involuntary manslaughter plea Monday and set Jan. 6 for sentencing.

Television star Cher Bono, in testimony sealed until Moss's plea Monday, told the Los Angeles County grand jury last July she walked upstairs in Moss's house and found McIntosh slumped in a bathtub.

"His fingernails were all blue and his face was kind of gray," she said. "I mean he looked like he was dead."

Yacht Club Site For Unique Art Show

The CFB Trenton Yacht Club will provide the setting for a vivid art show with the works of Canadian artists Gordon Roach and Jackie Alger Sunday from 1 p.m. until 5.

Organized by Valerie MacIntosh and Betty Ferguson, the one-day exhibit may well become a new method of art exhibition.

The atmosphere of the Yacht Club — natural lighting with the Bay of Quinte providing the background — as well as antique rom settings, will provide dimensions to a show that features two totally opposite artists.

The antiques, provided by Postings, will break the monotony of the gallery hangings, explained Mrs. MacIntosh.

She said the two artists were combined because of the different subjects and effects each uses.

The dramatic figurative works Seela painter Roach will provide the social comment while Alger, a resident of Ontario, will highlight the exhibit with her warm vivid paintings.

Roach has been called a painter with a warm, sympathetic sensitivity. His painting depict the harsh life of the Atlantic country-pawnbrokers, tatoo parlors and lonely streets.

Roach, who uses acrylics on canvasses textured with gesso and gel, said he gets his ideas and sketches like a "thief in the night. Most of my people are unaware they are being painted."

Algee deals mainly with bright scenes that radiate a warm atmosphere. She works with oils and acrylics and different media, including seascapes, are her favorite subject.

Paper Bridge Plugs Product

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bridges have been built of stone, concrete, wood, steel and even rope, but St. Regis Paper Co. has hopes of the future to advertise its product.

The bridge of triplewall corrugated packaging was 12 feet high, 110 feet long, weighed 7,500 pounds and took nine days to build.

It was constructed at the Hollywood-Burbank Airport for use in a 60-second television commercial. During the filming, a 376-ton Hells-Angels was driven across the bridge.

Specially-constructed presses laminated the corrugated paper for the bridge.

The layers varied from six for the floor of the bridge to as few as two at the base. Only glue and paper were used.

FRANKFURT, West Germany (Reuter) — A man who went to sleep in an apartment building garbage container was hauled to safety Wednesday minutes before the trash was dumped into a furnace, police said.

The man climbed into the garbage Tuesday night to sleep off his evening's drinking and closed the container's cover, police said.

The container was emptied into a garbage truck and taken to a furnace plant supplying heating steam for much of Frankfurt, where the man was dumped 35 feet down a shaft.

Luckily, the operator of a mechanical shovel feeding the furnace heard his cries and hauled him out.

CEFALU, Sicily (AP) — Traffic police fined the municipal band $7.50 for marching in the wrong direction on a one-way street in this Sicilian town near Palermo.

Diana Ross Already Setting Sights On Third Film, Despite Reviews

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Diana Ross has a second hit on See, second starring movie, but this one is different.

Her first was Lady Sings the Blues, an uncompromising account of the life and hard times of Billie Holiday. It won big receipts at the box office and an Academy Award nomination for Diana Ross in her first dramatic role.

Now comes Mahogany which also is doing big business in the major cities in spite of generally devastating reviews. The glossy tale is of a Chicago ghetto girl who rises to fame in high fashion, then discards her career to help her politician sweetheart.

Does the criticism bother Diana Ross? Seemingly not.

"Critics feel that they have to criticize—that's where the name comes from," she says. "I'll admit if I had been the producer-director of Mahogany, I might have made different choices. But the whole experience was a good one, and I have no regrets.

She says bad reviews can be beneficial to an understanding of her performances, even if she does not agree with them. For instance, some critics said Mahogany is artist because she heroine gives up her career to help her man's political campaign.

"They have their viewpoint; I have mine," Miss Ross, 31, replied. "I'm not saying that all women should become housewives—I think that each woman should do what makes her happy. In the case of Mahogany, she chose the life that seemed suited for her."

Diana Ross now has a record album to do, dates in Las Vegas to catch up on and a television special with ABC. She plans a European tour with the opening of Mahogany and would like to follow with a U.S. tour.

Another film? She has discussed the possibility of portraying the late Josephine Baker.

"I certainly don't want to do you my film career to playing black starr. But there is something about Josephine Baker that intrigues me, and I want to learn more about her life."

Cola Drinks Can Be Dependents

By G.C. THORESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thoreson: To settle a bet, would you please answer this question: are cola drinks addictive or habit-forming?—S.B.

Because of a confusion of terms, such bets are rather foolish, and I suggest that I can settle it for you. But such bets often do raise interesting points.

You have already introduced two terms—"addictive" and "habit-forming"—into the introduce a third—"dependence."

This is the term most commonly used in this matter—dependence, either psychic or physical. I think these terms give us a better frame of reference in which to discuss your question.

There is caffeine in cola drinks, and one can develop a mild psychic dependence on it, then because of the stimulating effect of the caffeine. If one feels that, all in all, this is not such a bad thing, then one might keep on drinking such substances, and continue to be psychologically dependent on them to some degree. But such dependence would be very minimal. I should think.

This is not the same as the physical dependence one develops from a drug like morphine or heroin for example. In the case of such drugs there is a direct physical effect, and there are very significant signs when the drug is withdrawn. That is far removed from the psychological aspects mentioned earlier. One stops drinking colas, and that is the end of it.

So you divide the whole range of drugs (alcohol included) into either the psychological or physical dependence categories. Within that range there are gray areas research has yet to identify.

I'm afraid this does not settle your bet, mainly because of your choice of terms. Bets are better reserved for horse races, anyway.

Dear Dr. Thoreson: What is the blood sugar danger point in hypoglycemia?—Mrs. L.

Low blood sugar usually refers to a reading of under 50 milligrams per cent, or 50 milligrams per 100 cubic centimetres of blood.

For practical purposes the danger point is reached when the symptoms of an attack are present, and this is usually several hours after last eating. A rapid rate of decline in blood sugar, even at higher levels, can cause symptoms. A normal blood sugar reading would be from about 80 to 120 milligrams per cent.

Dear Dr. Thoreson: Could you please tell me what would cause the white cell count to go down dramatically? Also, what glands all over my body are swollen. I am taking vitamin C, high-potency type, for this.

Should I see a specialist? I just saw my family physician.—Mrs. M.R.

There are many reasons for a depression of white blood cell counts. Chronic infections (particularly viral), a reaction from pain killers, sedatives, and other medications, poisoning by exposure to chemicals are a few.

But as to your swellings, these usually indicate a generalized infection process. Did you have this when you last saw your physician? In any event, you should get back to him promptly because of these obvious symptoms. He will be able to judge whether or not you need to go to a specialist, and he would have your history to send along with you. This alone will not raise your white blood count.

Planners Chosen

GODERICH, Ont. (CP) — Jim Cooper has received eight applications to fill the rural planner position in the county planning department. Gary Dobbin, planning director, said the top four applicants will be interviewed shortly for the $20,000-a-year post. The new planner will be working on the preparation of secondary plans for the 11 township which still lack official plans in order to conform to the county official plan.

Lacks Blood

STRATFORD, Ont. (CP) — Perth County's mobile blood donors committee finished its 1975 quota drive Monday. The quota despite a good public response to the clinics, committee chairman John Howard said. The city has a quota of 1,800 pints of blood to be gathered for the central blood bank in London. So far more than 1,350 units were collected this year.

Funds Collected

TORONTO (CP) — Ninety per cent of the Christmas Seal funds collected stay in the communities from which they are received. Provincial Seal offices go to research and community action to prevent and control lung disease. The programs also aim to reduce cigarette smoking, the chief cause of emphysema and chronic bronchitis, and air pollution which aggravates lung disease.

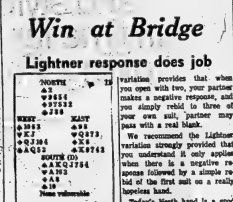
Lightner response does job



By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

Yesterday's article discussed the Herbert convention in which the next reading and is used as the negative response to a three-heart bid. The convention is interesting, but it has the serious weakness that it gets you into lots of trouble when you want to make a positive response in the next reading suit. We feel that this disadvantage overbalances its advantages.

Today's hand shows an example of a modification first suggested by Theodore Lightner in 1933 or '34. The Lightner variation provides that when you open with two, your partner makes a negative response, and you simply rebid to three of your own suit, partner may pass with a real blank.

We recommend the Lightner variation strongly provided that you understand it only applies when there is a negative response followed by a simply rebid of the first suit on a really hopeless hand.

Today's North hand is a good example. It really can't produce a part of a trick. He passes and South makes three spades.

Ask the Jacobys

An Alaskan reader wants to know a penalty for passing your partner's forcing bid.

The answer is that there is no penalty. The convention is used so rarely that it has gone entirely out of fashion. Most players, meeting in a partnership parliament where all have been playing bridge for years, are in the outland where they meet Wild Jack, a modern Don Quixote.

THAT CRAZY APRIL — Lily Pons.

Children in the middle grades will enjoy this family story with a "crossing" theme. Eleven year old Cressi Conley's parents are dead and she is reared in a genteel fashion above, and in the shop below, she is refused admittance to a metal working club at school. Cressi is not the only one where her loyalties lie, and comes through a difficult time.

SNOW WHITE — The Brothers Grimm.

Trina Schart Hyman has used acrylic paints to create colorfully glowing illustrations for this new translation of the favorite fairy tale. Her dwarves are believable little men and her queen a young woman of brunette beauty. Pictures and text combine to provide an exciting fairy tale.

MASTER ARGALLO — John and Patricia Kiyaki.

Set in Elizabethan England, this is the story of a young girl who had no desire to become a lady. Instead a series of mishaps she arrives in London where the eventually joins a company of players, performing in Shakespeare's Globe Theatre. Life becomes dangerous for Rosalind when the queen's consort is trying to kill her.

LOVELY — Carol Byrne Seuling.

The early 1900's provides the setting for this story of a family left on their own for the summer, under the protection of a grandmother's door. The book is filled with happy adventures and mischief in the back yard, entering a parade — as well as some tense situations.

A DANCE TO STILL MUSIC — Barbara Corcoran.

Margaret had just entered her teens when Hiroshima was permanently deaf. Determined not to enter a school for the deaf, Margaret must know what to do when her mother planned to remarry. Leaving home, she becomes involved with an interesting character named Josie and soon found a happier life.

RUN FAR, RUN FAST — Walt Morey.

Phillies Get Jim Kaat

President's Post for Veeck

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — Bill Veeck is back in major league baseball, but not exactly the way he planned.

A Veeck group of about 40 people was approved Wednesday as the new owner of Chicago White Sox of the American League. But the 61-year-old Veeck wound up with little or no capital interest in the team.

Veeck disclosed that he had to sell much of the interest he would have received for putting the purchase package together in order to raise the additional $1.2 million required for league approval.

The colorful Veeck actually winds up as president of the White Sox at a reported $65,000-a-year salary.

The majority stock (80 per cent) purchased from John Allyn for $9.75 million is owned by investors, including former home-run king Hank Greenberg and Bill DeWitt, one-time owner of the old St. Louis Browns and Cincinnati Reds. Allyn retains a 20-per-cent interest.

League approval of the Veeck group at the winter baseball meetings didn't come easily. It took one ballot by the owners before the necessary three-quarters vote was obtained.

League president Leo Macphail confirmed that the holdup arose because Veeck didn't conform to the league's stipulations after the owners turned down the group Dec. 5, demanding the extra $1.2 million in working capital.

While the American League solved one of its headaches, the National League met down the hall deliberating on what to do with the failing San Francisco Giants.

National League president Charles Feeney said his owners hope to have something definite on the Giants' situation today.

Representatives of two groups trying to acquire the franchise for Toronto also were on hand, along with a municipal delegation headed by Paul Godfrey, chairman of Metropolitan Toronto council.

Franchise discussions didn't stop the ball clubs from continuing their trade action.

Chicago White Sox and Philadelphia Phillies made the most significant deal of the meetings. The Sox sent 20-game winner Jim Kaat, an American League all-star, to the Phillies for three young players pitchers Dick Bosman and Tony Thomas, and infielder-outfielder Alan Bannister, all No. 1 draft choices.

Earlier, Texas Rangers acquired pitcher Bill Singer from California Angels for first baseman Jim Spencer and a reported $100,000.

Reds Had It All

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Cincinnati Reds, who had the most potent offensive in the National League last season, also played the best defense.

Fielding statistics released Wednesday show that the Reds made 103 errors, 25 fewer than Los Angeles Dodgers who finished second in the team defensive statistics. Cincinnati had a .984 fielding percentage to the Dodgers' .978.

Baseball's world champion Reds had 175 double plays, second to Montreal Expos who had 178.

Second baseman Joe Morgan was the Reds' only individual fielding leader, with a percentage of .988. Pete Rose, who moved to third base after spending most of his career in the outfield, was second to Houston Astros' Doug Rader at that position, and Cesar Geronimo of the Reds was second to San Francisco Giants' Von Joshua among the league's outfielders.

Rader had a fielding percentage of .971, while Joshua's mark was .985.

14 Pro Teams Are Under Fire

TORONTO (CP) — Teams in the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A series say they still are waiting to be paid for 34 players drafted by teams in hockey's two major professional leagues.

Lists submitted by the junior teams to league commissioner Clarence (Tubby) Schmalz on Wednesday show 16 pro clubs are delinquent and only a handful of players have been paid for in full.

Schmalz will turn over the list of players to league lawyer Joe Kane, who is to contact the teams in the National Hockey League and World Hockey Association and report back to the league at a Jan. 21 meeting.

"If there is not enough satisfactory payment by that time we will consider legal action," Schmalz said in an interview.

Although the players involved signed contracts obligating them to pay 20 per cent of their first-year contract back to their junior team, Schmalz said the league is taking the stand that the professional teams are equally responsible.

The list of Ontario Major players still not paid for:

RON SHAVER

Shaver on Road Back

THUNDER BAY (CP) — Ron Shaver of Cambridge, Ont., one of the world's foremost free skaters, continues his comeback trail here this week as he tries to qualify for the Canadian figure skating championships.

Shaver, runner-up to Toller Cranston for the national men's singles crown in 1973 and 1974, has had to qualify for the Canadian competition only once previously since he entered senior events in 1970.

He is not expected to have any problems winning the senior men's singles of the Central Canada figure skating championship which begins today.

Shaver was forced onto the qualifying trail this winter by a leg injury he suffered while taking an exhibition during the Brandon last January, two weeks before the nationals.

Although he has been the only skater able to provide close competition for reigning champion Cranston for the last several years, Shaver was forced, under Canadian Amateur Figure Skating Association rules, to compete in a series of qualifying meets.

He easily won the Western Ontario championship and here he will face only two other competitors, defending central men's champion Lee Armstong of Chatham and young Kevin Hicks of Windsor, Ont., who won the Canadian junior singles title in his first try early this year.

Only three competitors also are expected in the senior women's ranges with the majority of the 80 skaters entered in the novice and junior events.

There will be junior and senior men's and ladies figures today as well as novice dance of free skating routines.

Bills' Owner Has an Ally

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Owner Carroll Rosenbloom of Los Angeles Rams said Wednesday that if Buffalo's Ralph Wilson is fined for criticizing National Football League officiating, he'd like to pay half of it.

Wilson, owner of the Bills, sharply censured an official's call when Buffalo lost to Miami Dolphins 31-21 last Sunday and were eliminated from the playoffs.

Mercury Morris of Miami apparently fumbled deep in his own territory with about nine minutes left and Buffalo trailing, 24-21. Defensive end Pat Toomay of the Bills recovered in the Miami 28. The ball was ruled dead. Toomay was called for elbowing an official, and the Bills were penalized.

Rosenbloom, recovering from heart surgery, said he wired Wilson asking to pay half of any fine assessed by the NFL for criticism of officiating.

"If he is any kind of man, he's got to give me that privilege," declared the Rams owner, who had owned more Colts prior to coming to Los Angeles.

"When a man gets robbed like that, he must give me part of the action. I knew the feeling. I have lost two major playoff games because of bad officiating. I suffered in silence and I wound up with a coronary.

"Wilson will, too, if he doesn't say something."

Rosenbloom referred to a questionable field goal call in the Colts' 13-10 loss to Green Bay Packers in the 1965 NFL conference playoff and to another call in last season's Rams-Minnesota Vikings NFC title game.

Berger Holding Out on Rodgers

MONTREAL (CP) — Johnny Rodger... running back and wide... receiver of Montreal Alouettes of the Canadian Football League, said Wednesday that term owner Sam Berger has refused to pay him playoff bonus money because "it wasn't in my contract exactly."

All Alouettes except Rodgers, including those on the injured reserve list, received a total of $4,000 in playoff money—$1,100 for the Eastern Football Conference semi-final victory over Hamilton Tiger-Cats, $1,300 for the EFC final against Ottawa Rough Riders and $2,500 as losers' share for the Grey Cup game against Edmonton Eskimos.

"I admit I'm well paid, but I don't believe in playing for nothing," said Rodgers, who is reported to have a seven-year contract through 1981 worth about $1 million.

Rodgers said Berger told him that according to my contract he didn't have to pay me for those three games."

Berger said that in Rodgers' agreement the clause in the standard players' contract dealing with post-season pay was left blank.

"I don't see why there should be any trouble over this," Berger said. "He's been paid under the terms of his contract and he's not entitled to any more and that's it.

Social Credits Smash NDP in Double Defeat for Barrett

VICTORIA (CP) — Bill Bennett said Thursday night he wants to get on with the job of returning British Columbia to Social Credit rule after his party smashed British Columbia's first NDP government in its first test at the polls.

For Premier Dave Barrett, the defeat was a double blow as he lost by 167 votes to car dealer George Kerster, 38, in Coquitlam.

Mr. Barrett, a 45-year-old podgy, political brawler, entered the legislature in 1960 after he was fired as a social worker by the Social Credit government for criticizing its prison policies.

On Thursday, he was fired by the voters after what he earlier called "the happiest campaign of my life."

A recount is likely. The official count for the riding is expected Dec. 23.

But for Mr. Bennett, a 43-year-old millionaire Kelowna businessman who stepped out of his father's footsteps to reverse the equally-crushing defeat W. A. C. Bennett's Social Credit party suffered in 1972, the picture looked like this with 80 counting nearly complete:

	1975 Dissolution	1972
SC	39	14	10
NDP	16	27	38
L	1	5	5
PC	1	1	2
Total	55	55	55

"Tomorrow we go to work because this province needs a government to get to work right away to solve the problems," the premier-elect said in Kelowna after thanking his supporters and the electorate.

He said his party won with people, not with flip slogans and "put forward the strongest fighting candidates I have ever seen put together by a political party."

His father, who took power for 20 years in 1952 with a minority government, shared in the pandemonium of his son's victory.

"This is a great night for the people of British Columbia said the elder Bennett as he blinked back tears. "A people's government is back in power again."

The voters put their finger on the hot core of socialism in 1972 "and tonight they have taken it away."

Mr. Barrett, who wasn't personally defeated until the final poll was counted in his riding, comforted party workers and smiled in the face of adversity.

"We have only lost a battle, not the war," said the premier who plans to hand over the reins of government within a week.

That statement was repeated by several members of his decimated front benches. Eight other cabinet ministers were defeated.

"Every measure of social progress that we made will stay and no one will dare touch that," said Mr. Barrett whose fate as party leader was not immediately known.

Mr. Kerster polled 17,980 votes to 17,813 for Mr. Barrett who won Coquitlam riding by more than 13,000 votes in 1972 and had the largest penalty of any candidate in that election.

The NDP and Social Credit were the only parties to field full slates of candidates as Mr. Barrett's snap election call on Sept. 3 left the Liberal and Progressive Conservatives with depleted war chests.

McMurtry Proposal
Driving Age May Be Raised

TORONTO (CP) — Attorney-General Roy McMurtry said Thursday he wants to see Ontario's drinking and driving ages raised.

The attorney-general told a news conference at Queen's Park there is no question that raising the legal drinking age from 18 poses difficulties, but he said the problem is serious enough for review.

The legal driving age is 18.

Mr. McMurtry said his cabinet colleagues have not reached a consensus and there must be a great deal more discussion before any legislative action is taken.

The earliest the government could act to increase the drinking and driving ages would be spring, he added.

Society has become accustomed to 18 as the legal driving age and a "readjustment of certain values" may be necessary to raise the age to 17 or 18, he said.

Mr. McMurtry said he and many members are concerned about drinking and driving where it concerns young people. Increasing the drinking age to 19 would help alleviate the problem, he added.

He said he has instructed Crown attorneys in Ontario to pursue prosecution of drinking drivers vigorously.

Opposition Leader Stephen Lewis said some of his party members believe the drinking age should be increased. He said the NDP will discuss a resolution calling for an increase at its provincial council session early next year.

Earlier Thursday, Mr. McMurtry told the Toronto Automobile Association that stiff penalties for alcohol abuse cannot be accompanied by better detection methods.

He urged increased use of road-side breathalyzer tests, adding that the law which says a policeman has to have reasonable and probable grounds before he can ask for a breathalyzer test puts too much stress on the officer.

The legal limit of 80 milligrams of alcohol per 100 ml litres of blood is too low, he said, adding that many drivers are dangerous with a much lower level.

He also laid a great deal of the blame for highway deaths on what he called "irresponsible marketing techniques" employed by automobile manufacturers.

The manufacturers, he charged, are "pandering to some of our more immature instincts."

"How do you feel about putting a two-ton steel bomb into the hands of an 18-year-old when the basic premise is that it goes from one end of the land to the other and it'll injure or kill most of his girlfriends?" he asked.

Simcoe Must Take Toronto Students

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Simcoe County board of education has been told by the Ontario education ministry to accept as county schools Metropolitan Toronto students affected by a teachers' strike, the board announced Thursday.

In a news release, the administration said E. E. Hall, regional director of the ministry, has told the board to accept students for enrolment if they qualify under the Education Act.

A spokesman for the board said the board accepts the ruling.

One Simcoe County administration employee estimates that between 100 and 150 students might enrol in the county's school system next week. The administration has received 100 calls during the strike from cottagers who pay county taxes and some under the Act, wanting to enrol students.

In Brampton, a spokesman for the 1,600 Peel County high school teachers said about 70 per cent of the teachers who voted Thursday on their board's final contract offer for 1975-1976 rejected it because it was in excess of federal anti-strike wage and price controls.

City Buses May Not Operate Boxing Day

By AL ZARAS
Staff Reporter

City bus passengers may be without transit service Boxing Day if city council proclaims the day a public holiday.

The Belleville Transit Commission Thursday agreed to give employees a paid holiday, providing the city declares Dec. 26 a public holiday.

City council is expected to deal with the subject this Monday.

In a linked motion, the commission again decided to cut bus service at 7:45 p.m. on Christmas Eve.

The shortened day, said BTC chairman Marylea Burtt is "sort of a Christmas present to the fellows (drivers)."

Manager Lewis McMullin said the commission has opted in previous years to curtail service Christmas Eve because "everything seems to die after 8 p.m. and no one goes anywhere."

Over the years, no complaints have been received from the public over the shortened Dec. 24 service day, he said.

Under the 1975 BTC has not operated Boxing Day bus runs.

Opposition Mounts Against Heirs

MADRID (AP) — Leftist opposition to Francisco Franco's political heirs is expected to continue despite the appointment of the monolithical cabinet since Franco crushed the Spanish republic four decades ago.

The 19-man cabinet announced Thursday night by Premier Carlos Arias Navarro includes two former ambassadors considered advocates of democracy and four other ministers considered liberals or moderates.

Although all 19 appointees are loyal Franco men, there are only two holdovers from the cabinet the late dictator picked two years ago after the assassination of Premier Luis Carrero Blanco.

"The government was not what was hoped for or some liberals, but it was as far as we could go," said a member of the premier's staff.

Moslems Ignore Ceasefire Truce

BEIRUT (AP) — Leftist Moslem gunmen besieging the last major Christian position in the heart of this Lebanese capital vowed today to ignore all cease-fire agreements until they drive their foes from the downtown hotel district.

"The ceasefire is not binding until the Phalangists get out of the Holiday Inn," said a Nasserite militiaman manning fortifications room in the Palm Beach Hotel.

"We will not lay down arms until the Holiday Inn is purged of Phalangists, even if the state and the army threaten us. When the area came under our complete control, it will be restored to tourism and business."

Other Moslem warriors said that, despite the declaration of a new ceasefire, they will not stop fighting until the Christians agree to Moslem control of the government, parliament, army and economy, all of which have been dominated by the Christians.

Cabinet Approves Contract

Trudeau Says Settlement Won't Weaken Guidelines

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau insisted late Thursday that the cabinet's decision overruling the anti-inflation board's rejection of the postal workers' settlement reached last week will not weaken the federal restraints program.

"It would if we were to do this consistently, but we are acting under the law and the regulations as they stand now," he told reporters after a second cabinet meeting Thursday.

The government will seek royal assent to make its anti-inflation bill law later today or tomorrow — avoiding any immediate repeals of direct cabinet appeals.

The special administrator—yet to be appointed from the revenue department—will handle cases the anti-inflation board decides are excessive. There also will be an appeals tribunal from board rulings.

However, while cabinet can overrule the administrator, it will not be required to hear appeals from his decisions.

Under the order-in-council by which the anti-inflation board is temporarily operating, the cabinet was the only body to which it could refer cases like the postal workers' one that it considered excessive.

The decision by cabinet removes the fear of renewed postal disputes over the contract.

Joe Davidson, president of the Canadian Union of Public Workers (CUPW), said "we went on strike, we moved ... so how can it be overturned by getting what we are justly entitled to?"

Jean-Luc Pepin, anti-inflation board chairman, refused to comment. The board had argued that the 30-month contract with the postal workers a 17.75 per cent annual pay increase when they were entitled to no more than 11.62.

New Democratic Party Leader Ed Broadbent predicted that the cabinet ruling means "every labor group in the country" will want to appeal to the cabinet.

The board earlier sent the negotiations for negotiations after rejecting a 38.2 per cent pay offer from the Toronto school board as excessive.

Asked about the high school teachers' case, Mr. Trudeau ruled out an immediate appeal for them to cabinet because no agreement had been reached that the board could refer either to cabinet or to an administrator.

Poaching Damages Cohoe Population

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Stocking of Lake Ontario with cohoe salmon have been boosted angling in the Bay of Quinte.

But it also has increased the activity of poachers, say provincial conservation officials.

Poaching for years has mostly concentrated on local waterways in search of the yearly spawning runs of fish from Lake Ontario, say conservation officials.

Now, with the cohoe introduced in the fall of 1972, poachers are moving into the Bay of Quinte area.

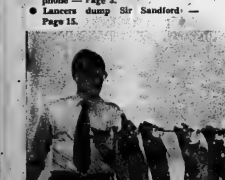
Illegal netting and spearing of the fish spear river mouths means more than an immediate loss.

It also affects future fish populations by reducing the number of egg spawn.

Conservation officers cite one example: A fisherman recently caught illegally starting cohoe with a gill net near Presqu'ile, had a bag of seven cohoes and two rainbow trout.He was fined $75 in court.

That four of the cohoes contained more than a gallon of spawn.

"This sort of activity obviously has an impact on the restoration of fish in Lake Ontario," says a conservation official.



Harry Mulhall

Poached Fish

Illegal catches like this can hurt the future of fish rehabilitation in Lake Ontario region. Cohoe salmon in possession of provincial conservation officers Mike MacDonald (left) and Bob Orok were taken during spawning season, which means loss of new stock.

Driver Escaped

William Baldwin of Mississauga escaped serious injury early today after his tractor trailer was in collision with the rear of another transport on Highway 401, one mile east of Salmon River Bridge. Thief's Identity Key Issue In Drug Store Theft Trial

Paul Kelly, pharmacist and owner of Kelly's Drugs, testified in Hastings County Court here Thursday he is not absolutely certain that accused robber Douglas Ernie Cochburn is the man behind the mask who robbed a post office sub-station in his store on Sept. 9

The 19-year-old Cochburn of R.R. 1, Kingston is on trial by judge alone for the armed robbery at the drug store located at 411 East Bridge St. in Belleville during which, it is alleged over $300 was stolen.

Identification is a key issue in the trial which entered its second day today at the Pinnacle St. courthouse before Judge Russell C. Honey.

Mr. Kelly said four drug store employees testified that at about 2 p.m., a person they described as a young male with a nylon stocking-type mask pulled over his head and brandishing a small, cocked pistol, approached the postal station counter and was successful in demanding money from the till.

Postmaster Roy Walsewight of Belleville testified an audit conducted about one hour after the incident revealed the till was short $261.32.

When asked by assistant Crown attorney John Woods of Belleville if he could recognize the man if he saw him again, Mr. Kelly said he would be able to.

When Mr. Woods asked if the man was present in the courtroom, Mr. Kelly indicated Cochburn as the man who "looks like" the robber.

Defence counsel Wilf Tausendfreund objected to the identification questioning, saying such recognition is guesswork and should be inadmissable.

However, Judge Honey ruled the evidence admissable and elaborated that its relevance will depend on the weight with which he considers it when he attempts to reach a verdict.

Mr. Tausendfreund attempted to clarify Mr. Kelly's identification by establishing to what extent the robber's facial features were distorted by the apron-like mask.

Mr. Kelly explained the face was reasonably clear due to amount of stretching of the mask but added the ears and hair were vastly distorted.

Mr. Kelly commented that even in cases where no mask is used "it is not possible for anyone to be 100 per cent certain."

The four employees testified they would be unable to recognize the robber if they saw him again.

Library Boards Rejects Sharp Budget Hike

Mayor Ben Corke wants the Belleville library board to chop $10,000 from its initial 1976 proposed budget of $294,854.

The recommended budget is an increase of $28,000 from 1975.

"We have a severe problem in the matter of using the taxpayer's money," said Mayor Corke during a discussion when he referred to city-wide budget problems.

Mr. Corke told the library board of directors this week cuts are necessary.

Library board directors after learning Mr. Corke's remarks rejected the budget.

Mayor Corke suggested $100,000 as guideline for the next proposed budget.

Thanks to the aid of the Trenton Lions Club Karen Wessel (seated) will be able to communicate with other deaf friends by a special attachment to her telephone. Anne McKercher of Sir James Whitney School instructs Mrs. Wessel on how to use the new device which transmits impulses from a teletype machine through normal telephone equipment to a receiver on the other end.

Printer Enables Deaf Residents To Communicate On Telephone

BY JERRY BROWN
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — Karen Wessel is an active mother with an interest in furniture repairing, tennis, crosscountry skiing and judo and for the first time in her life she can use a telephone to talk to some of her friends in the Quinte area.

Karen Wessel is deaf and has been since birth 27 years ago but thanks to the assistance of the Trenton Lions Club, Mrs. Wessel will now be able to communicate with friends over normal telephone lines by using a "coupler."

The coupler is a simple device that allows deaf people to communicate by transmitting impulses of a teletype (TTY) machine across normal telephone lines to another machine on the other end of the connection, providing a printed message.

"Most deaf people find it difficult to buy the TTY machines because of the expense and that is why they are loaned to the users after they have been reconditioned by the 'Pioneers Club,' a Toronto Association," said Anne McKercher, a teacher at Sir James Whitney School on hand to demonstrate the operating procedures to Mrs. Wessel.

There are currently 16 such units in the Quinte area and the intention of the school is to outfit all of the area deaf, about 80 of them with similar units, said Miss McKercher.

In an emergency most people would just pick up a telephone and call the authorities but this option has rarely been available to deaf people with speech problems.

"The Belleville police department will soon have one of the units donated to them and this will enable them to receive calls from deaf people," said Mrs. McKercher.

The machines are simple to operate and require little training other than learning how to type and rest the telephone receiver in the cradle of the coupler. Three Belleville technicians have been trained by the Toronto group to service the machines.

"Hopefully, all emergency centres will one day be equipped with the units and new avenues of communication will be opened to the deaf."

Trenton Lowers Request For Additional Land

TRENTON — A town request to the Northumberland Task Force (NTF) asking for 1,200 acres has been cut by almost 50 per cent after population figures it was based on were rejected, said Aubrey Sharp, town clerk.

The original request for the land was based on a 1972 population projection study completed by the Quinte Planning Board and submitted to the task force. But Trenton town council has been told by project director Peter Walker that the estimate of 35,000 people by the year 2,000 is too high.

Trenton officials returned to the planning board and asked for a re-evaluation of the figures and were told the original estimates were based on a larger geographical area that included eastward expansion, said the town clerk.

The new figure projected the population at only 27,000 and consequently the land request was reduced to 630 acres, said Mr. Sharp.

The NTF, at a two-day workshop in November, recommended that a bailey none be placed around Brighton and other urban core areas in the county. If this idea is accepted, Trenton's growth to the west would be stopped at the current Murray Township line.

Garage Looted

PICTON — The Picton detachment of Ontario Provincial Police is investigating the theft of snowmobile equipment valued at $125 from the residence of a Consecon man.

Police say that Blair McKay of RR 1 Consecon reported that he stored three snowmobile suits, two helmets, two pairs of gloves and two pairs of boots in his garage last May. When he prepared to use the equipment this month, he discovered it was missing.

Christmas Plants In Bloom

PICTON — The traditional flower of Christmas, the Poinsettia, is in full bloom this week at the Lockyer Garden Centre just west of Picton where approximately 2,500 plants have been potted for sale.

Florist Creighton Lockyer says the Poinsettia naturally grows much taller than the colorful, low blooms admired by Christmas shoppers.

To create the low, full look the plants are sprayed with a growth retardent. The result is a much shorter stalk and a more cultivated appearance for the blossoms.

The green leaves now are a sea of bright red dotted with white.

The perennially popular red blooms are mixed with white blooms in a number of the pots offered for sale.

Its beginning to look a lot like Christmas at the Lockyer Garden Centre just west of Picton where approximately 2,500 Poinsettia plants are in full bloom. Florist Creighton Lockyer Thursday offered visitors a view of the crimson fairyland of flowers.

Shoppers More Discriminating But Expect Auto Insurance to Hit Us Again

By VINCENT EGAN

Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

Business is finally getting the message: consumers care about price and quality, and they are changing their buying habits accordingly—where they can.

Retailers generally report a strong surge of pre-Christmas business. But many of them note that shoppers are more discriminating about quality this year, and less willing to buy goods that they consider over-priced.

An advertising executive who has made a recent study of supermarket trends, says that two out of three consumers claim to be economizing on their food purchases.

Examples: sales of most substitutes have risen since last year, while sales of paper towels, soft drinks, sugar and rice are down, said George Clements.

The trend is toward cheaper types of dog food as well, says Mr. Clements, a vice-president and national research director at J. Walter Thompson Ltd., Toronto.

Mr. Clements, in an interview, stressed that his findings are based on a relatively small cussions with about 30 groups of six or seven consumers each, in Canada's two largest cities.

In those groups, however, it's clear that an effort is being made to shop less often, and thus to cut down on impulse purchases.

The change that has taken place in consumer attitudes should not be exaggerated.

People are not cutting out vacations, and they would in a severe economic plight—but their choice is likely to be a holiday-destination closer to home.

And major retailers report that sales of high-priced gift items and consumer durables during the fourth quarter have been healthy, even though consumers are taking more time to study quality and features and to compare prices, before they commit themselves.

However, traditional pre-Christmas shopping patterns have been changed to some extent this year by such factors as relatively mild weather, the anti-inflation program, and the post office strike.

Mild weather has, of course, slowed the sales of winter clothing and footwear as well as seasonal sporting equipment.

The anti-inflation guidelines have raised the possibility that prices will no longer rise at an ever-increasing rate. This could discourage consumers from throwing away dollars that are eroding too quickly, and encourage greater prudence.

The post office strike boosted over-the-counter business at the expense of catalogue sales. Settlement of the strike gives retailing a psychological lift, in the view of some merchants.

In a nutshell, consumers are showing that they are not sheep.

When world sugar prices went up, for instance, consumers recognized that they would have to pay more at the supermarket.

Now that prices have retreated on the world market, while prices of candy, drinks, chocolate bars and other sugar-intensive products remain high, a substantial number of consumers appear to be making up their minds and refusing to buy.

That same discretion, unfortunately, can seldom be exercised in buying services.

For example, auto-insurers have been increasing premiums substantially every year, on the ground that accident rates and repair costs are soaring.

Now, however, speed limits are being sharply reduced (with the promise that accidents will be fewer), and increases in labor and parts costs are slowing.

In addition, insurers are able now to invest their reserves at yields that are at or near the highest levels in years.

Count on it, though—some of this will prevent a whopping increase in your next premium notice.

Firefighters' Problem

There's a lot of smoke surrounding the issue of whether Belleville firefighters will be permitted to bring up their establishment to its full complement of 44.

City Council and the Firefighters' Association union local have gone to arbitration over a vacant firefighting position which council refused to fill following a retirement earlier in the year. According to the union, council's refusal to replace the fireman, who retired in March, compounded by firemen on sick leave, has placed a strain on the firefighting capability of one fire department shift.

A factor the arbitrator must consider is that firefighting does place a big strain on the heart—a factor borne out by the heart attack suffered by Capt. George Woodhouse while fighting a blaze October 27. A 19-year-veteran, Woodhouse is one of those on sick leave. The shift the city fireman headed was a man short at the time, and the suggestion is he might not have been stricken had he not had to take such an active role. This of couse is hypothetical, and the tradition of filling in for others is not one confined to firefighting alone; nonetheless the rigors of firefighting demand that a full complement should be available when the occasion demands.

The question is, should Belleville be left with a firefighting force that is undermanned? Should the firefighters themselves be placed in a situation which in their estimation reduces their efficiency and makes an already hazardous task more dangerous?

Belts and Lower Speed

Ottawa Journal

The Ontario government took some time finding the nerve to introduce legislation to lower speed limits on the highways and to make the wearing of seat belts mandatory. But it was worth the wait for these useful measures.

There will be complaints about much of the moves. The seat belt law will be described as an invasion of individual "rights" and an unenforceable one at that. But the time had come to place the rights of society — the one that foots the bills for mounting medical costs above the "rights" of individuals. The seatbelt law is the strongest possible way the government could find to advise citizens to do what's best for themselves. It is self-evident that enforcement will be low key and so spotty. Some people will take that as an invitation to ignore the law and their own safety. But no law can change people like that. They certainly aren't an argument against making seat belt use mandatory.

An Ontario energy department official is quoted as saying the lower limits — 60 mph on superior highways and 50 on others — will mean a one per cent saving of gasoline. That prediction seems a bit low. But even a one per cent saving would conserve enough petroleum to heat a medium-sized city for an entire winter. Ottawa isn't in a position to scoff at that kind of saving.

Let's give animals a better break, and in particular those in the category of pets — dogs and cats mainly — which too often are considered to lead the proverbial "dog's life" for want of owners who really care.

There should be more citizens like the woman observed walking her Airedale on a leash on Sidney Street Sunday. Of course there are show dogs which receive the best of treatment, but what about the strays, the abandoned, those that, by virtue of some outhouse and never exercised?

A report from Rochester, N.Y. in recent days pointed out that inflation is affecting animal care along with everything else.

Because owners are finding it increasingly difficult to make ends meet, among the first to suffer are pets. Thus they have less of a place in the social scheme of things than ever.

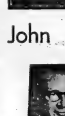
This in turn places an additional strain on community facilities — the Quinte branch of the Ontario Humane Society for one. Finance is always a problem, but a $25 donation from a Trenton reader who has written on the subject is an exception to the general public apathy surrounding animal care. It's possible that with further action such as this the branch could do more to extend and improve its service.

John Yaremko Honored in Toronto

By DON O'HEARN

Queen's Park Bureau

Thomson News Service



TORONTO — One of the most distinguished head tables of recent Toronto events, and 1,400 other people (at other night paid tribute to one of our more distinguished politicians.

John Yaremko's probably won't be into the history books.

He didn't build any great monuments or concoct with any bad women the material of which history's footnotes are made.

But in the inner world of politicians of today he is recognized as remarkable.

Still only 47, he had been a member for 24 years, the nearest dean of Ontario legislature, when he retired before last year's election.

He had been a Conservative cabinet minister for 14 years, another near-record. And in that period had held seven different portfolios.

He won his riding of Bellwoods originally from a Conservative MP who was always the proudest defender of anti-communism in Ontario politics.

Yaremko was one of the most absent from the house here. But he was constantly under attack.

He was an obvious target.

For what he believed in, he believed in, including himself, and when you mentioned anything else, you set off a spurt.

A good many people, too many, including the opposition, judged him on this.

But this was an extremely unfair assessment of the man, by those who did not know John Yaremko.

For there are many thousands of people in Ontario who, if you could find words against Yaremko would have their fists up.

There are hundreds or thousands of civil servants who will resent him.

Actually, he was the supreme politician.

The man who was for the people, who was bright enough to make money while he was in politics, but who might have made a great deal more outside of it, but who never let his private gain.

Let us have more of them.

City Hall Aesthetics

About the most a lot of people know of their City Hall is the rather stark and unimpressive entrance and Dickens-like environs of ground floor office space where those grassroots business of the city is conducted.

If it is municipal fundamentalism, spartan interiors and no-frills architecture the city wishes to project, it has succeeded.

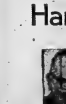
Council is aware of this however, as witness the study it commissioned earlier this year, with a view to effecting improvements.

The results of this study are now in council's hands and it is clear much could be done to this end.

More than $100,000 worth in fact, so quite apart from aesthetic considerations council will need to give this considerable thought.

Aside from the economics though, the prospect of a brighter, more functional interior in city hall is an attractive one, in step with Belleville's increasing status as one of the more progressive cities in the province.

Hard-nosed Claude Wagner Has Sights on P.M.'s Office



By RICHARD JACKSON

Ottawa Correspondent

OTTAWA — Take a good look at Claude Wagner.

He could be your next Prime Minister.

Not because the good-looking, 50-year-old former Crown Attorney, Attorney-General and Court of Sessions Judge is a French-Canadian.

Not just because this articulate, fluently bilingual, two-term Conservative MP from Saint Hyacinthe, of all the leadership candidates, has the best credentials for breaking into the Liberal's Quebec powerbase and picking up seats that could make the difference between victory and defeat.

But because he is a proven-at-the-polls winner and is the only candidate with the self-confidence to say "I can win."

Because, too, he is a tough, hard-nosed law-and-order man in an age and society where to be soft and yielding is to be politically dead.

Because, also, of the company he keeps.

When he went for the leadership with his recent formal declaration of "I am the candidate to win," he had the instant support of 10 other special members of the Conservative Parliamentary Caucus.

And a man can often be known by the company he keeps.

Two of them are Quebec Conservative MPs who, except for Howard Graffety, a leadership candidate himself, and an onlooker, give Claude Wagner a monopoly of the party's existing constituency support in Quebec.

One is Roch LaSalle of Joliette and the other is Jean-Pierre Frenchy-Canadian political miracle-man, Jacques Flynn of Quebec City who whipped Pierre Juneau, the personally hand-picked candidate of a humiliated Prime Minister Trudeau, in the recent byelection.

But this, for a moment, about the other eight of the 10 Conservative parliamentarians backing Claude Wagner.

Otto Jelinek, Jack Ellis, Paul Dick, Erik Nielsen, Stanley Oberle, Erik Nielsen, Stanley Schellenberg, Charles MacKay.

Like Claud Wagner, with one possible exception, they're small "C" Conservatives. Not "Red" Tories and Conservative socialists. Not liberal Conservatives.

Conservatives, period.

They subscribe to Claude Wagner's basic credo for Conservatism:

"Our party must become the agent of national direction and determination.

"We must be strong, united and concerned.

"We must restore a sense of order, of justice and of a conviction that the state will tolerate no extortion by any segment of the public good.

"We must make an end to power-mad exercise of democratic authority."

Finally, Claude Wagner is hard-nosed enough to scorn the easy fix and lets most other politicians use to mush-mouth their way around the capital punishment issue.

No soft, marshmallow approach from the former Attorney General. He comes on strong with a firm commitment to the death penalty for premeditated murder.

Public protection and personal straight, easy-to-understand "law-and-order." And not Justice Minister Otto Lang's and Solicitor General Warren Allmand's flexible, might-mean-anything "peace and security."

Claude Wagner was the fast-acting, hard-hitting Quebec Attorney General whose no-nonsense riot police, laid their heavy-loaded night-sticks hard on the backsides of the separatist - student hoodlums who tried to taint the Queen on Her Majesty's last visit to Quebec City some 10 years ago.

Even the low-ass-level Montreal underworld didn't feel a real soft touch under Wagner.

When he first came to Parliament two elections ago, he seemed a full like Conservative of the Toronto Tory establishment who, finding his "hanging judge image," as they called it, unacceptable, tried making him over into a sleek, slick, svelte pussy-cat.

He wore slinky suits, let his styled hair grow long, talked softly and did nice things.

But that wasn't Claude Wagner. It was a phoney counterfeit.

Now, though, Claude Wagner again is, as he says, "my own man . . . I'm not going to run as my own man and I'll come out of the campaign my own man."

He is the same kind of conservative candidate — only more so — as Jack Horner, Sinclair Stevens, Allan Lawrence and Jim Gillies.

And when the leadership comes down to the last ballot, Claude Wagner against one of the liberal "Red" Tories, they will find it easy to vote for him.

'Loyalist Village' Concept

Editor,
The Intelligencer,

I refer to an item in my recent development report to Prince Edward County Council which solicited Council's support for the concept of a "Loyalist Village" and instructed me to report further on the possibilities.

In consequence of this, apparently, Mr. Hayden's "Quinte Flyer's Guide" contained an item by your Bureau Reporter headed "Report Overlooks Key Facilities", which for sheer non-representation would be hard to beat. The article contains 25 lines of type, on which all the facts to fact and twenty-nine to bliss Hayden's fancy. On the other hand, thirty-seven lines (or over 50 per cent of the article) are concerned with your writer's interest in the Crystal Palace Chapel, which certainly doesn't have much to do with my report on possible development.

As for the suggestion that a Loyalist Village concept relates to the brainchild of the Assistant Deputy Minister of Tourism, a question and answer at the County Council meeting at which your reporter was present elicited the information that the Ministry of Industry and Tourism plus tourist operators, local citizens and sundry tourist visitors had all provided input, the Chamber of Commerce has been suggesting for years that an authentic "reproduction" of a "Loyalist Village" and instructed me to report further on the possibilities.

The most distressing part of this singularly ill-informed diatribe is that the outline item by your fellow Loyalist Village is used by Miss Haylock only as a introduction to the argument that the County's five museums and the White Chapel are being ignored. Nothing of course, is further from the truth if a tourist-oriented centre combining considerable interest with historical accuracy is able to draw large numbers of visitors, then the increased visitor usage of the other facilities by those interested will naturally follow, since such interested persons will be physically present in the County. Moreover the Village would contain a centre for the dissemination of information regarding other areas of historic interest.

Strikes and Working Wives

Editor,
The Intelligencer,

Dear Sir,

Although little, if anything, has been said about it, I would suspect that as a result of the strikes we have been so plagued by strikes in recent years is the increased number of working wives.

In the past, when the man was the sole support of the family in the financial sense a decision to go back to the labor force was a decision not to be taken lightly. Now, however, it is quite probable that the number of two-income families has increased to the point where voting in favor of striking is not the major decision it once was for the husband since the other income can help the family for a more or less prolonged period.

If, in fact, working wives have made it possible for strikes to be more frequent and prolonged, working women now appear likely to bring about the opposite condition. Increasing coverage inside post offices about the personnel who have started to work there on an initiative, it appears that the majority are working to help out the number of families where the husband's sole support is increasing drastically because the husband has become unemployed or even unemployable! Certainly the reason given for going back to the labor force is that money is urgently needed for family support.

Many women's libbers have long said that the liberation of women is the liberation of men. Perhaps women's income possible in the near future to say also that women's lib is the liberation of the labor movement from the inconvenience of numerous and needless strikes.

CAA Calls For Lower Speeds

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Automobile Association (CAA) has called for reduced highway speed limits in all provinces to help conserve fuel.

The CAA said in a statement Thursday that it has asked Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie to press provincial ministers at a federal-provincial energy conference today to adopt this policy. Mr. Gillespie is chairman of the conference.

Ontario and British Columbia already have moved to lower speed limits and Mr. Gillespie said he would like to see reduced speeds across the country.

The CAA said most cars get best fuel economy at speeds of about 40 miles an hour.

Recent studies show the average increase in gasoline consumption between speeds of 50 miles an hour and 70 miles an hour is about 30 per cent, the CAA said. A fuel saving of about two per cent is possible if motorists drive no faster than 55 miles an hour.

Pills Banned

OTTAWA (CP) — Birth control pills banned Wednesday in West Germany and Britain because of a possible link to cancer have been off the Canadian market since 1973, a spokesman for the federal health protection branch said Thursday.

Dr. Albert Liston said American studies in which oil pills containing the hormone megestrol-acetate showed they caused cancerous tumors in dogs, after the dogs were fed 50 times the human dose over seven years.

He said these tests caused enough concern to warrant the withdrawal of the pills from the Canadian market.

McMurtry Warns

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario legislation concerning arbitration awards will apply until the federal anti-inflation measures become law, Attorney-General Roy McMurtry said Thursday.

Once the federal legislation is passed, it will over-ride these sections of the economy covered by its regulations, he told the legislature.

Programs Cut

OTTAWA (CP) — Treasury Board President Jean Chretien said Thursday it is inevitable that some federal programs will be cut as the government tries to slow its rate of spending.

Mr. Chretien told reporters nothing is untouchable although the government must focus attention on programs that account for about 30 per cent of federal spending.

Secret Ballot

OTTAWA (CP) — A private bill to empower the cabinet to intervene and order a secret ballot of union members in strikes such as the just-ended national postal strike was introduced Thursday in the Commons by Michael Forrestall (PC—Dartmouth-Halifax East).

Overtime Pay

TORONTO (CP)—The Metropolitan Toronto Board of Police Commissioners has approved a $530,000 transfer of funds to pay policemen for accumulated overtime but counsel for the Metropolitan Toronto Police Association asked Solicitor-General John MacBeth to appoint an arbitrator to stop the payment.

May Visit Japan

OTTAWA (CP) — The prime minister's office said Thursday that Mr. Trudeau has no officials in visit Japan next year, contradicting a report that the Canadian ambassador to Japan had told Prime Minister Takeo Miki of a planned visit.

Begins Showcase

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Walt Disney World will begin construction of its World Showcase, the initial phase of an experimental prototype community of tomorrow, in 1976 instead of 1977 as originally planned, officials say.

Kills Nine

DACCA (AP) — A wild elephant trampled nine persons to death and injured 10 others Tuesday in two villages about 90 miles from Chittagong Port, police and forest authorities reported.

Kerr Lays Blaim

TORONTO (CP) — Environment Minister George Kerr said Thursday a five-month delay in the results of asbestos-fibre tests conducted in Belleville, Ont., last April was the fault of the Ontario Research Foundation.

Mr. Kerr told the legislature there is no excuse for the delay and said he will try to speed up the release of the latest test results.

Gilles Sandeman (NDP—Peterborough) said the most recent figures show asbestos-fibre levels at the Raybestos-Manhattan plant in Peterborough are six times the acceptable level.

The minister said more tests are planned for January and added he hopes some equipment decisions in the next week will reduce the fibre count to an acceptable level.

Mrs. Sandeman said outside the legislature tests show that one plant taken outside the plant are dangerously high. Some of the tests were taken near a school, she said.

The MPP said there is apprehension in the community and urged immediate action.

Britain Rejects Hanging

LONDON (Reuter) — The British Parliament rejected by a 361-to-222 vote Thursday night a fresh call to bring back hanging for terrorist murders.

The non-government motion, presented by a Conservative opposition member, had become a major political issue here because of the extension of a guerrilla campaign by the Irish Republican Army (IRA) from Northern Ireland to mainland Britain.

Some 50 people have died in 19 bombings and shootings on the mainland in the last three years.

On the last occasion the death penalty was debated by the House of Commons a year ago, it was rejected by a sizable majority.

The debate cut across party political lines. The ruling Labor party mostly backed the view of Home Secretary Roy Jenkins that it would be wrong and counterproductive to reintroduce the death penalty for terrorist murders and make penalties harder the task of police combatting kidnappers.

But Jenkins assured MPs concerned about the IRA attacks: There will be no amnesty. I recognize no political excuses for cold-blooded crimes of murder or maiming. Those who have committed them will serve in jail for decades and in some cases until the end of their lives."

There was strong support for hanging from the Conservative opposition whose members repeatedly stressed that public opinion in Britain was in favor of the death penalty and said it was the only firm way to deal with the bombers.

Senate Approves

OTTAWA (CP) — The long-delayed first stage of the government's business competition policy finally was approved by the Senate on Thursday.

A series of amendments to the Combines Investigation Act and other legislation, the bill first was introduced in Parliament in October, 1972. It died on the order paper at dissolution of that Parliament and was reintroduced in the current one in October, 1974.

Wells Says Cabinet Needs Dramatic Proof

TORONTO (CP) — Education Minister Thomas Wells said Thursday the Ontario cabinet is looking to the federal anti-inflation board for some dramatic action on prices to assure the public that the board is serious about controlling prices.

"We need examples as dramatic as what they have been doing with various wage settlements," Mr. Wells said after a meeting with the Ontario Teachers' Federation (OTF).

George Gardiner, OTF president, said the federation wants the province to ask an anti-inflation board to deal more sensitively with teachers.

He said federation members are starting to feel the federal anti-inflation board is concerned strictly with wages and that there is no control on prices.

The federal anti-inflation board recently ruled that the Metropolitan Toronto school board's offer of a 29.5-per-cent salary increase to its striking secondary school teachers is excessive.

Stephen Lewis, Ontario NDP leader, said outside the legislature Thursday that the anti-inflation board is so inconsistent that it has become a laughing stock.

Ontario Treasurer Darcy McKeough said he expects no provincial action on controlling prices because the provincial government sees little evidence of rising prices. He said he has told the anti-inflation board about complaints of lack of control on prices and that the provinces will continue to prod the board.

Landlords, Tenants Can Appeal Rent Increases Ontario Decides

TORONTO (CP) — Landlords and tenants will be allowed to appeal rent increases that occur between July 1 and Dec. 31, the legislature decided Thursday.

The Progressive Conservatives and the Liberals combined to support that amendment to the government's rent review legislation over the opposition of the NDP.

Opposition Leader Stephen Lewis said his party will decide today whether to reconsider its earlier support of the spirit of the legislation in light of the various amendments.

Michael Cassidy (NDP-Ottawa Centre) charged that the amendment is being watered down by Liberal and government members.

Under the original legislation, no appeal was to be allowed during the July 29-Dec. 31 period and the maximum increase allowed was eight per cent. The legislation also stated that the landlord would have to refund any increase of more than eight per cent.

It also will allow landlords to charge an increase of more than eight per cent during the same period if both the tenant and landlord agree. The amendment provides the tenant with a 30-day, cooling-off period in which he may change his mind.

The amendments, introduced by Housing Minister John Rhodes, provides that the first month's rent for units first rented in new buildings between July 29 and Dec. 31 will act as the basis for further increases.

An NDP amendment making the legislation retroactive to Jan. 1, 1975, also was defeated by Liberal and government members.

Ed Good (P.-Waterloo North) said the amendment removes inequities from the original legislation.

Mr. Lewis, the NDP leader, said the government quietly and deliberately is trying to slant

Belleville Boy Scouts Commended for Efforts

Belleville scouts have been commended by the provincial scouting organization for their part in the national fund-raising project Trees for Canada.

The District Council of the Boy Scouts of Canada received the citation at the annual election of officers meeting.

The project, sponsored by community pledge sheets, involved the planting of 30,000 trees by more than 600 beavers, scouts, cubs and venturers early May.

The majority of the trees were planted on the property of Jon Cole of Downsview while 150 trees were planted in Stanley Park.

The trees, supplied by the ministry of natural resources, are a variety of white spruce, poplar and white and red pine trees.

The national share of the funds went to Operation Amigo to assist two workers in Latin America. At the provincial level the funds assisted camping trips and outdoor development.

Ken Bartlett, local president, said the local organization was one of the leaders in the province in several phases of its work.

"With the continued volunteer efforts of the leaders and co-operation of the parents we will have a successful new year," he said.

Russ Taylor, was re-elected as first vice-president; Harold Bankier, second vice-president; Peter Hall, secretary, and treasurer Ken Coates. Bud Jones was re-elected as commissioner.

Steenburg Convicted In Gas Station Theft

Harold Milton Steenburg, 20, of RR 2, Belleville pleaded guilty in Hastings County Court here Thursday to a charge of theft over $50 in connection with an incident at the Gulf Service Centre at the intersection of Highways 401 and 37 on July 22.

Steenburg was remanded by Judge Russell C. Honey to Jan. 19 for sentencing.

Ontario Provincial Police at Belleville say two men robbed the service centre of about $170 in cash at gunpoint, abducted the attendant identified as Bob Munro, and Canadian and then released him, offering him $35 to remain silent.

Police say the men drove into the service centre at about 4:25 a.m. and one man got out of the car with a gun in his hand and demanded money from the till.

The man then drove the attendant, a short distance west on Highway 401 and dropped him off at the Sidney St. overpass where they offered him the money to keep his silence.

Provincial Crown attorney John Woods of Belleville said a case involving one of the men has already been disposed of in provincial court here.

Lampost Approved

WALLBRIDGE — Sidney township council approved by bylaw this week the installation of a lamppost on Bell Ave., just north of highway 2, that will cost Quinte Heights homeowners about $12 a year to maintain.

Council acted in response to a request from subdivision residents who wanted the intersection lit, fearing serious accidents.

Fear of Flying Takes Its Toll

TORONTO (CP) — Fear of flying has grounded up-and-coming careers, shaken marriages and created countless other problems for those who pale at the thought of tasting down a runway.

The sufferers are legion: A woman whose husband has grown cool towards her because she cannot fly with him on business trips, a young athlete who can't travel with his team, a businessman who turns down a vice-presidency because it requires hours in the air.

"There probably are over a million men and women in this country who have a phobic fear of flying," says Dr. Leslie Solyom, a psychiatrist at McGill University's Al-an Memorial Institute in Montreal.

"More and more of them are seeking professional help to rid themselves of their crippling condition."

Behavior therapy is the type of treatment favored by most psychiatrists and clinical psychologists. Th- theory is that persons can learn fairly quickly how to behave in new ways, without prolonged probing of the psyche.

Treatment is successful in 80 to 90 per cent of cases and after two to eight weeks, it dispels the usual symptoms of fear when flying—loss of appetite, dizziness, tense muscles, and perspiration.

Dr. John Jamieson, a Toronto General Hospital psychiatric consultant, and many other therapists use systematic desensitization to relax patients for their ordeal in the air.

Patients are asked to list the aspects of flying that frighten them, beginning with the least fearful, Dr. Jamieson said.

A typical list begins with learning a plane trip is required, exercises in speedy check-in and take-off, and ends with air turbulence during the flight.

Dr. Jamieson teaches the patient how to relax every muscle in his body and then reads him the anxiety list.

The patient takes his hard as soon as he begins to feel uncomfortable. The doctor stops reading and the patient does relaxation exercises.

"After 10 or 20 sessions of about 20 minutes each, most patients can accept the idea of flying without getting upset," said Dr. Jamieson.

At this point, the patient is ready for graduation exercises and is sent to the airport for a flight.

Dr. Stephen Neiger, director of the Lakeshore Psychiatric Hospital's behavior therapy clinic, accompanies patients to Toronto International Airport to watch planes, check in and listen to departure announcements.

Dr. Leslie Solyom and Dr. Carol Solyom have a different approach to behavior modification at Montreal in St. Mary's Hospital and the Allan Memorial Institute.

The treatment room is a model of an airplane interior and patients buckle into a chair. One hand is attached to a device that can give shocks.

The other hand activates buttons that control a tape recording and film of an airplane taking off. The patient can stop the frightening sounds and sights but will receive shocks if he does.

"We offer them eight treatment sessions, each one an hour long," said Dr. Carol Solyom.

"After that, we expect them to go out and fly. And do you know what? That's exactly what eight out of 10 of them do."

Making Your Own Decorations: Enjoyable, Easy, and Economical

When Christmas comes to the Cranston household on the concession of Thurlow, it's an extra special affair.

As the decorations come out of their storage boxes, memories come right along too.

For the Cranston ornaments and wreaths have been homemade over the years by Sandra Cranston, with a little recent help from sons Mark and Keven, now 11 and seven.

They're a handy decoration in the living room that was made 25 years ago, the first year Sandra and Ken Cranston were married. Fashioned of painted, beni coat hangers, tinsel, and colored balls, it has been "perked up" at intervals, but retains its original shape.

The newest addition is a creche scene on the piano, made this year from starched cloth over bottle shapes for the figures of Mary and Joseph.

And from the years in between, there are a wide range of ingenious, economical and unique decorations.

There are golden bells tied together on the door, that only a few years ago were the tops of bleach bottles. But cut, painted, with little "sleigh-bells" fastened inside, and trimmed with blue holly, they have a much more elegant air.

On another door, a Christmas tree gives little indication that it was once an egg carton. Cut into a pyramid, painted and trimmed with green tinsel, the old carton is a pretty addition to the season.

Salmon cans, well-washed and painted gold, have been soldered into a pyramid "tree" by Mrs. Cranston, with an ornament hung in the centre of each can. More of these cans have also been soldered into a circle, and the same technique used to make an attractive window wreath.

The stocking that hangs inside the front door is in fact two macaroni dinner boxes glued together, covered with bright paper and stuffed with tiny, tied and wrapped parcels.

With a strip of metallic filler paper from the oil furnace, Mrs. Cranston made a candle holder that is the basis for a table centrepiece. With milkweed, painted gold and fastened with pins on a styrofoam cone, she has made a "tree" that serves as an ornament in the living room.

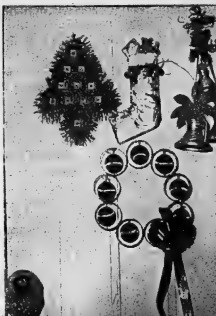
One of her meal-time decorations that's a real favorite with the boys is an upside-down ice cream cone covered with green icing and trimmed with small colored candies.

As a seasonal tough in the bathroom, Mrs. Cranston has sewn a toilet lid cover from felt, that features a happy Santa's face on the top side. Inside the lid, the same Santa holds two red mitts over his eyes to avoid the view!

Mrs. Cranston says that many of her ideas have come from other women in the area, from Women's Institute meetings, magazines, and a night course she attended at Harmony Public School.

"Nothing is hard to do," she says. "It's all fun. It's a one time of year I have a 'hobby' — and I really enjoy getting ready for Christmas."

Sandra Cranston hangs the ornament she made 13 years ago that is still as "good as new" since she freshens the tinsel every few years.



A felt door handle decoration an egg carton Christmas tree, a macaroni box stocking, a cluster of golden bleach bottle bells, and a salmon can wreath — all beautiful, all home-made.

A furnace filter candle-holder, a Santa and angel with detergent bottle bodies, styrofoam ball faces, salmon can tree and a painted milkweed, tod tree, and the appliqued felt toilet seat cover.

Golden Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. William Gillespie of Roslin, held Open House on Sunday afternoon in St. Paul's Anglican Church Hall, to celebrate their 50th Wedding Anniversary. More than 200 guests attended.

Mrs. Gillespie was the former Ethel Reid, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Adam Reid of Roslin, and William Gillespie, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Gillespie also of Roslin. They were married November 18, 1925 in St. Paul's Rectory, by the Reverend H.R. Pentlem. Their attendants were Mr. and Mrs. Fred Coulter, the bride's sister and her husband, both now deceased. A number of gifts, flowers and cards were received by the "bride and groom" of fifty years. Also greetings and congratulations from the Governor General The Honourable Jules Leger Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and Robert Stanfield.

Nutrition Breaks For School Kids

School officials are adding their concern to the issue of child nutrition, says Olga Wallace, director of nursing for the Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Health Unit.

Miss Wallace told the counties' board of health meeting that a recent Hastings County gathering attracted teachers, custodians and cafeteria staff from schools in Madoc, Marmora and Trenton to voice their opinions on nutrition.

She said they were concerned about the quality of cafeteria food and advocated mid-morning nutrition breaks in view of the inability of school students who must leave home as early as 7 a.m. each weekday morning.

Miss Wallace added although nutrition week is completed, Quinte area libraries have requested information on nutrition and seek avenues by which to obtain films on the subject.

She said there have been requests as well for public health nurses to attend public meetings and speak on nutrition.

C.W.L. YULE PARTY

MADOC — The annual Christmas meeting of Sacred Heart CWL was held in the Parish Hall here recently beginning with the celebration of Mass at six o'clock. This was followed by a sumptuous pot luck supper for 23 members and guests.

The meeting after supper opened with the League Prayer, led by the Spiritual Director, Father P.H. Murphy. The minutes of the last two meetings were read and approved. Roll call was taken. Monica Tobin gave the Treasurer's report.

Tickets are now printed for the New Year's Party. These were distributed to some of the members for selling.

A list of Christmas shut-ins was compiled to be sent seasonal greetings from the League. A discussion took place on the scholarship to be awarded by the C.W.L. at next year's graduation ceremonies of CHSS. Monica Tobin will look after making an investment at Victoria and Grey on behalf of the League, the interest from which will be used for the scholarship.

It was decided that C.W.L. meetings would be held on a regular basis on the second Tuesday of every second month.

It was reported that $35 had been sent to the Mental Health Association for the Christmas Party to be held at the Manor Manor Nursing Home.

The meeting adjourned on motion of Mario Mahoney, seconded by Helen Murphy.

Father Murphy then showed a film entitled, "The Good, Good, Good, Good Life", followed with a thought-provoking question-answer period.

An exchange of Christmas gifts brought the meeting to a pleasant close.

Montreal's Second-hand Alley Helps Shoppers Beat Inflation

MONTREAL (CP) — A mini shopping centre backed in old houses and called Second-hand Alley is helping shoppers in Yalois, a suburb of Montreal, have fun while beating inflation.

All the stores specialize in used articles at low prices. It starts with the Ski Rack, which sells used boots, bindings and skis, and ends with Granny's Attic, which boasts a pot-pourri of old articles.

Except for the Ski Rack, all shops are run by senior citizens who hope to earn extra money while adding new interests to their lives.

"We've all become friends," said Donna Cole, 22nd owner of Granny's Attic with friend Jean McGee, both middle-aged housewives who started their business one year ago.

"We had both been looking for jobs with no success, partly because of our age and partly because of Bill 22 and our lack of ability to speak French," Mrs. Cole recalled.

After several months of fruitless effort they came to the conclusion that if they could set up their own business, they would not have to live up to any arbitrary requirements.

Armed with little money and even less stock, they rented their present three rooms in an old house.

"When we started we had nothing to put in the place but my mother-in-law gave us some things," said Mrs. McGee. The older Mrs. McGee also contributed some.

"It's just like Grandma's attic," she joked on first seeing the store.

Freda Kelly, proprietor of Freda's Folly, anticipates shop next door to Mrs. Cole and Mrs. McGee, pays $130 rent, which is much the same as the other shops in the area.

She began collecting antiques 10 years ago when her mother gave her a spinning wheel to decorate her new home in Pointe Claire.

Then she started cruising through the countryside picking up good buys. After a decade of amassing antiques, she had so many they would not fit into her house.

Barbara Hartbinan has found selling small books in her shop a booming business. She owns a two bookstore in the mini-shopping centre and says that because new books—even paperbacks—are so expensive now, people are quite happy with second-hand novels.

Bob Cavanagh, who owns the ski supply shop, buys his equipment after it has been used for demonstration purposes.

"Our best customers are families with young children," he said.

The Toy Chest exists side by side with the Ski Rack and after children have been fitted with ski boots, they often drop in on Margaret Flower and Bridget Wall to see what games, dolls or Meccano sets they can attempt to make members to buy.

The shop sells toys in good condition at half price or less. The two women accept only dolls, stuffed cars and the like if they arrive in first-rate condition.

The most popular toys are used Fisher-Price models and large rocking horses. A doll house in excellent condition sells for $5 whereas, says Mrs. Flower, she has seen them in department stores for $12 and more.

Olympic Doll

As department stores and toy shops vye up for a busy Christmas season, parents are eyeing the market for suitable playthings to place under the Yuletide tree. Regal Toys' "olympic doll", dressed in the official costume, is expected to be popular with the younger children. (CP Wirephoto)

Parents of Twins Band Together

OTTAWA (CP)—Books just can't tell you all the fine points of raising twins, agree members of the Ottawa Twins Parents' Association.

"Sometimes, when they're going through a biting stage you think maybe you've done something wrong to make them this way, and it's really reassuring to talk to someone else who has gone through the same experience," said Lynne Crocker.

The 15-year-old association now has 81-members who get together at a local church every fourth Wednesday of the month to swap stories, problems, recipes and just generally let their hair down.

"I remember before the twins came my husband would come home and ask what's for supper," said Diane Molbelland, the association's vice-president.

"After the twins were born he started asking if there was any supper at all."

A $4 yearly membership fee helps defray the association's expenses. Members can attend the monthly meetings, receive a newsletter, take advantage of twice-yearly bed-clothing sales, buy used furniture cheaply from other members, bear guest speakers and get store discounts.

"Having twins is not cheap," explained Sharron Welby, association president. Shoes and clothes were expensive and the used clothing sale was a real help.

Twins also pose unique problems, the mothers explained, because they often work together getting into mischief.

"My boys used to get together and see how much toilet paper they could pull through the bottom before they pulled it off the roll," said Lynda Edwards. "They got pretty good," she laughed. "They could pull it through almost every room in the house before it broke."

The association also corresponds with similar groups across the country and with two Australian groups to gather tips and ideas.

"We usually recruit our members "by word of mouth or through birth announcements in newspapers," said Mrs. Molbelland.

"If I see someone on the street with twins I will ask them if they want to join," added Mrs. Welby.

The women agree that twins create a lot of work—about 150 diapers a week, for one thing—and it takes extra care to arrange feeding and medication as well as every day routines.

"I have to put a chart on the wall to figure out who has had their vitamins and even arranged different colored T-shirts so that I would know who had been fed," said Mrs. Edwards.

"It doesn't always work, though, and it's once my husband got the T-shirt code wrong and fed me baby's bottle and accidentally neglected the other."

A poll of association members revealed that a surprising number of women are carrying twins are unaware of the fact until after their children are born.

"We had 30 people answer our questionnaire and about nine-third knew well in advance. Another third knew a couple of weeks in advance and the final third found out they had twins after the event," said Mrs. Edwards, who belonged to the latter category.

"The first thing that always enters your mind is how will I ever cope," she added, and the laughter of shared children members over the memory showed that humor helps a lot.

Ann Landers

Her Ex-husband Turns Up, She Fears 'Real Trouble'

Dear Ann Landers: What do I do about an ex-husband who surfaces after 27 years and hasn't changed a bit?

A few days ago I was shopping with my mother and my teenage children by my second marriage. Up walks this obnoxious, grinning ape. He yells, in a voice that could be heard all over the store, "I used to sleep with you—but the baby!"

My mother recognized the creep before I did. I tried to be polite, introduced him to the children and attempted to move along. He glommed on to me, dragged out a wallet filled with snapshots of his family and proceeded to bore us all to death.

Before I was able to pry myself loose he announced that he had been married twice since we parted company. One wife died, one he divorced, and at present he is unmarried and would like to be friends.

The following day he telephoned me "just to chat." I have a hard time getting off the phone. Five minutes ago he phoned again. How can I get rid of this pest? I don't want my husband to know he called. It could mean real trouble. —Wish My Ex Would Exit.

Dear Wish: The way to avoid "real trouble" is to tell your husband at once that the ape called and ask him what he thinks about getting an unlisted phone number.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a girl 14 in ninth grade with a problem I'm ashamed to talk to anyone else. I can't bring myself to read in front of the class. The sound of my own voice frightens me. I even have trouble raising my hand and answering when called on. I CAN'T start a sentence without saying, "Uh-h-h . . ." or something stupid like that.

There is nothing mentally wrong with me although I'm sure some people think I'm short a few marbles. I have this problem of talking. What can I do to cure my horrible handicap? —Locked In

Dear Locked: Start by reading aloud to yourself for 30 minutes every evening in front of a mirror. After two weeks get one other person to listen to you. Next check with your school counselor and ask where you can go for speech lessons. Follow through and don't let anything stop you.

Your problem is not unique. It is shared by thousands of others in varying degrees. It can be overcome if you will work at it. Get going and good luck.

Dear Ann Landers: I have a friend who is blind. She has chosen to use a guide dog to help her get around.

Unfortunately, about 90 per cent of the restaurants, food stores, etc., hire ignorant personnel who don't know that guide dogs are permitted by law to accompany their masters nearly everywhere. My friend is frequently stopped by these uninformed people who question her in a manner that is irritating and offensive. She must then defend herself which is humiliating.

Since your column is the world's largest billboard, please ask your readers to look for a harness on the dog in question. All guide dogs wear one. The dog wearing a harness is allowed by law to go to almost every public place with his master. Tell people not to embarrass sightless individuals who need dogs to replace their eyes. The deserve to be treated with consideration. Thank you. — Santa Barbara Friend

Dear Friend: Here's your letter on "the world's largest billboard." I hope it helps.

Actress Cries Her Way to Teary Fame

TORONTO (CP) — Actress Belinda Montgomery cries in the movies.

She cried for six years in American daytime soap operas, too.

The 25-year-old Canadian actress discovered when she went to Los Angeles that she was considered a genius because she could turn on the tears.

"I had to cry through most of the first show I ever did (Marcus Welby MD) and I've done it in every one since," she said.

"My agent doesn't even look at the scripts any more. He just asks 'How many minutes does she have to cry?'"

The Welby show was in 1969, shortly after Miss Montgomery left a career in Toronto and signed a seven-year television contract with Universal Station.

She shed a tear for the Medical Centre, Doctors' Hospital, The Virginian, The New Land and many others. She went through television movies like Women in Chains and Devil's Daughter.

Last year she appeared, with tears, in her first film, The Other Side of the Mountain.

Now she's working in Toronto on her first Canadian movie, Breaking Point. Miss Montgomery has no speaking lines, only a few tears.

But she's wondering if this film will be the start of something new, perhaps even a permanent return to Canada.

"You get a little jaded putting out that TV crap all the time. But there's no time to make it good. They're shot in seven days, and your leading man says 'Hello, you're in love with me,' he dies, you cry and say 'I do.'"

She's also working on a script for a television comedy with her father.

"He started writing it because he looked at the crap on television and just said 'Hell, anyone can do that.'"

Miss Montgomery already has written another, a children's book she wrote will be published in January and she has just finished producing, writing, directing and selling a documentary on the Colorado mountains to the American educational television network.

"I'm getting definitely more interested in writing and less in acting," she says.

"Ways and means should be found for volunteers to be recognized for the invaluable work they are doing."

Hadassah-WIZO—Women's International Zionist Organization—is a volunteer women's organization which raises money for volunteer projects in Israel.

There are 17,000 members in Canada and 300 in Calgary, making it the largest of its kind in both places, Miss Frank said.

Materialism Causes Bad Volunteer Image

CALGARY (CP) — The idea that volunteers are demeaned by not being paid for their work is a product of the materialistic world, says Lily Frank, national executive director of Hadassah-WIZO.

Volunteerism helps women develop their potential and gives some the necessary self-confidence to go on to other things, Miss Frank said in an interview.

One woman who was "scared to open her mouth" developed enough self-confidence while heading a volunteer project to get a job as a television talk-show host, she said.

Rewards for volunteers came in the form of prestige and satisfaction, which could be much greater than financial gain.

Native Use of Fisheries Resources Under Scrutiny

TORONTO (CP) — Native exploitation of fisheries and other wildlife resources came under scrutiny Wednesday at the 27th annual fish and wildlife conference, a United States institution with Canadian associates.

The conference was winding up its first meeting in Canada since 1970. It brings together U.S. midwest state officials and Canadian federal and provincial officials in the same fields.

Allan Guy, Manitoba associate deputy resources minister, had one conclusion that his province cannot restrain Indians from hunting deer and moose for food by any means while the federal government disclaims responsibility. He called the situation one of a number of anomalies concerning native rights.

"I don't say they don't have this right," he said, "but from the management point of view, at some stage you have to control hunting."

Robert Weir of the federal Indian affairs department at Ottawa said the question of how far natives can go in taking game is a difficult one. The federal government is pushing for that it is prepared to negotiate native claims rather than get into litigation.

The three-day sittings of 200 delegates heard discussions on a wide range of topics.

Two studies dealt with problems of the Atlantic salmon, affected by over-fishing and environmental problems. Richard Saunders of the North American Salmon Research Centre at St. Andrews, N.B., described a project of river rehabilitation using stocks of salmon selectively bred with traits required for establishing runs in rivers.

He said the hybridization program is designed to produce fish with a wide genetic base enabling descendants to adapt to different river conditions.

Wilbur Mauck of the U.S. fish and wildlife service described efforts to determine the effect of forest insecticides on survival and development of the Atlantic salmon. He said the habitat of the dwindling fish is threatened as forest areas that are being sprayed for control of spruce budworm.

Thomas Jolliff of the New York State environmental conservation department, speaking of the state's program of stocking salmon-type fish in Lake Ontario, said the sea lamprey seems to be the cause for poor survival of stock between 1969 and 1972.

Significant decreases in sea lampreys have resulted from chemical control, though they were still much denser than in any of the upper lakes, he said.

The Ontario chapter of the Canadian Society of Environmental Biologists distributed a brief urging that agricultural practices be changed within a total environmental systems plan.

"In the past," it said, "the resource management emphasis has been placed on a species approach, to the detriment of the rest of the environment. ... The over-emphasis of these approaches has led to the management problems that face society today."

The group said there should be a provincial land use policy to preserve prime land for agriculture and ensure natural resource systems are preserved and managed.

Other recommendations included: Monitoring of soil quality, prevention of over-application of pesticides, discouraging over-use of chemical fertilizers, and abandonment of government subsidies which encourage degradation of natural resource systems such as wet land drainage.

Yellowknife Mayor Doubles as Janitor

YELLOWKNIFE (CP) — This Northwest Territories capital of 11,800 has a mayor who gave up being a full-time chiropractor to become a janitor.

Bob Findlay, 41, a burly-bearded father of four, found it impossible to maintain his practice after he was elected mayor in late 1973 following two years as an alderman. So he bid on a janitorial contract for the school board.

"It's ideal for this position because it's large enough that I hire people to do the work," he said.

"When I have spare time I can go in and relieve them. I still do weekly work I've gone over at midnight after a dinner or a meeting or something and put in three hours swinging a mop. City Hall problems will clarify and crystallize during that time."

Mr. Findlay hasn't given up his chiropractic practice altogether. He sees patients at noon, weekends and in the evening at a clinic in his home.

When he's not mopping floors or straightening out patients, he is contemplating a new tax structure for Yellowknife.

"We're going to a split mill-rate situation (in 1976). We're going to eliminate our business tax and this in effect will allow us to charge the government a business tax.

"By splitting the mill rate and charging a smaller rate on residential accomodation and a larger one on commercial, in effect every commercial building will pay that increased mill rate. What it will mean here in Yellowknife is an additional $100,000 on the revenue side of the ledger."

Mr. Findlay said he hopes the result will be that taxation on residential property—a three-bedroom home pays about $800 a year—stabilizes and that the major industry, the territorial and federal governments, picks up the slack.

The city receives no significant federal grants but does get help from the territorial government to augment property taxes—its only source of income. The territorial government gives the city a $50-a-year unconditional per-capita grant and a $5-a-year per-capita grant for recreation.

The territories will pay 50 per cent of approved paving costs and offer 100-per-cent forgiveness loans on approved sewer and water-mains construction. Special grants of $25,000 a year are available for the capital or cost of approved recreational development.

A $1.8-million city hall was opened last August. Originally, the plan called for a library and day-care centre on the lower floor of the building but another site was found for the library "at a economic conditions forced the city to rent the space in the federal and territorial governments.

When the territorial government moved from Ottawa to Yellowknife in 1967, the city's population was 3,200 and services were installed to handle a population of 7,000. The population now stands at about 10,000 and the downtown area is still 10-and-15 storey buildings.

The result, Mr. Findlay said, is a serious strain on the water system.

"Here in Yellowknife, you can't simply send a pipe into a new subdivision and run your laterals on it. You have to circulate the water and during the winter so it's not only expensive, it's very complicated.

The problem is to make adjustments to the system so it can put enough water through at a high enough pressure without ripping the existing system up and starting all over again. So far, the city hasn't found an answer.

The increase in population also added to the housing shortage, which Mr. Findlay said is improving. But it was four years ago when he was looking for a house and had to camp with his family in two tents all summer until he could find one.

"We have, however, just the kind of a situation which would do a great deal to solve the problem: I'm speaking of a major development coming on line and building bonus to sell. We're never able to attract one before."

71 Years With Weekly

HANOVER, Ont. (CP) — After 71 years working with the weekly newspaper, Robert (Bert) Scarbrough still is working there and he says he may work another 10 years if he is in good health.

"Why stop work when there is work to do and you are only 84?" Bert, who started with Hanover Post Nov. 27, 1905, says. He has no plans to retire. He now works four hours a day.

He thinks his term of service is not unusual, even for one of the longest in Canada's printing trades.

As a Grade 8 dropout, he got his first job at The Post at age 14 as a printer's apprentice and later worked into the mechanical end of the business. He has remained in that department ever since except for a few reporting stints covering city council meetings.

He says that his first three-year apprenticeship agreement with The Post pred him $160 the first year with $30 increments in each succeeding year.

Turtle Races Occur in Vermont

JAY, Vt. (CP) — Shining under the light of a single lamp, just a country road near the resort town about 10 miles south of the Canadian border, were the words: BELFRY DAFT. TURTLE RACES TONIGHT.

Every Tuesday night in turtle night at the Belfry, as soon as the snow falls and the ski lifts at nearby Jay Peak mountain begin to whir.

Inside, a four - by - two - foot plastic box with five jewels made of cardboard was nailed to the wall, barely visible behind puffs of cigarette smoke drifting around the sliding air of the tiny pub.

All but one level was lit with tiny twinkling bulbs and the crowd's anticipation was as thick as the foam on the beer.

"We want the turtle race! We want the turtle race!" the patrons were shouting in time with mugs banging on the wooden tables.

The race was a half-hour overdue when the bartender finally appeared beside the plastic box and blew into the microphone.

A few seconds silence, an announcement cracking over two battered loudspeakers, and the clamor rose when half the tavern rushed to a back room in the rear to watch the race.

Inside the back room were a mahogany bar, a set of diminished snooker table and 19 turtles, no two alike, each vying for a cardboard box.

Within five minutes each turtle had been bought for 50 cents apiece and given a temporary name.

Silence descended the room as the bartender placed the first five little green animals in their starting spots on the five levels of the plastic box two weeks. There were Speedy Gonzales, Roadrunner, Sunshine, Jake the Jock and Tortoise.

Shouts of encouragement burst through the room as the host gave a second-by-second account of the turtles' movements in their plastic stage.

Nearly an hour later when the fifth and final race began, the room still humming with excoriating rachel, despite the truth of the tale.

Most of the turtles had crawled only a few inches before turning back to the starting line and refusing to budge another fraction.

LCBO Cheating Wine Industry

BARRIE, Ont. (CP) — The secretary-manager of the Ontario Grape Growers' Marketing Board said Thursday the province's wine industry is not being treated fairly by the Liquor Control Board of Ontario (LCBO).

Keith Matthie told a service club that in 1970, listings of imported wines equalled those of Canadian brands. By 1971, listings of Canadian wines had increased by about 50 per cent, but imported listings had increased 175 per cent.

"Consumers have three times as many opportunities to buy foreign wines," he said. "Moreover, sales of wine per listing are in the reverse order when the six brands of Canadian wines sell over three times as many gallons as each brand of imported wines.

"We are simply not being given a fair treatment by the LCBO in the amount of listings they carry. . . ."

A list of his remarks was released prior to delivery.

Opposition Questions Cost of Living Increase

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition spokesmen questioned the credibility of the anti-inflation program Thursday as Statistics Canada reported the cost of living continued to rise in November.

The consumer price index rose nine-tenths of one per cent during the month, mainly because of higher rates for shelter, transportation and food.

The latest jump—the same as that recorded in October—covers the first full month since the selective wage and price controls program was imposed Oct. 14. There have been substantial monthly rises in six of the last seven months, the exception being a slower pace recorded in September.

James McGrath (PC—St. John's East) said in an interview the November index jump is "stretching the credibility of the government's whole anti-inflation program.

"I don't think they have a prayer in expecting wage earners to hold the line in wage settlements while the prices keep going up."

Munro Optimistic Over Paper Talks

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor Minister John Munro said Thursday the federal anti-inflation board's rejection of the postal workers' settlement should not affect attempts to resolve lengthy strikes by 25,000 workers.

Mr. Munro said after a meeting with Henri Jarrain, president of the Canadian Paperworkers' Union, that industry managers in Eastern Canada have been hiding behind the wage-and-price control guides.

The newsprint mill strike at various mills in Ontario, Quebec and the Atlantic provinces, are seeking a three-year raise of $1.80 an hour on a base pay rate of $4.60 hourly—a little more than 39 per cent.

The board turned down a similar increase to postal workers earlier this week.

The federal wage guides generally limit first-year pay raises to 10 per cent, although larger increases may be granted in special cases.

Vancouver Faces Scepticism at UN

OTTAWA (CP) — Scepticism about United Nations policies and the federal contribution to UN Habitat conference in Vancouver in June are major problems facing Canadian organizers trying to build support for the meeting.

In an apparent reference to a recent UN resolution condemning Zionism as racism, a draft report by a federal advisory group on the UN conference says:

"It is difficult" to convince people that a United Nations conference can credibly pursue international understanding and promote a sense of international morality when the UN General Assembly itself displays contrary tendencies."

But Urban Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet, who has been trying to calm these emotions, took the opposite tack Thursday night in speaking to a pre-Habitat conference here.

He said "something rather electric has happened to make Habitat take off"—the political ploy plaguing the conference which is to look at urban problems around the world.

Mr. Drouin, a Jew, fiercely opposed the conference decision a request by Vancouver city council last month to cancel the meeting.

After a hurried visit by Mr. Ouellet, city council agreed to co-operate with the conference although it refused to withdraw its objection.

The Canadian Habitat committee says in its draft report to the federal government that such decisions by the UN "seriously diminishes the respect with which the UN is viewed in Canada."

The committee has been holding regional conferences across the country for more than a year to sound out voluntary groups and individuals on their views about the conference, from transportation to the quality of life.

The committee also says that people remain unconvinced that their views will be seriously considered by the government in preparing its conference position.

Mr. Drouin told the final conference of these voluntary groups Thursday that the government has not yet decided what position it will take and that delegates would have a say.

Enrique Penalosa, a former Colombian cabinet minister who is secretary-general of the Habitat conference, told the delegates the Vancouver conference will be a political meeting.

It would be political because it was a conference of governments, he said, and a chance to attain political action on urban problems.

"The technical formulas are available," he said. "What's badly needed are the political decisions, the political commitments of the international and national level."

Opposition Seeks To Improve Pensions

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition MPs spent nearly a day from the government's pre-Christmas legislative timetable Thursday in press for action to improve pensions of former prisoners of war.

The government still hopes to conclude a heavy business load including unemployment insurance changes, a bill to eliminate special tax advantages to advertisers in Time and Reader's Digest and a bill amending citizenship laws before the Dec. 24 recess.

All three bills have met with strong opposition in the Commons.

But plans to press on with the government legislation were disrupted Thursday when Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North) put forward a motion demanding action to raise the pensions of former prisoners-of-war.

Mr. Knowles and the Progressive Conservatives have been pressing the government recently for legislation to enact pensions improvements unanimously approved by a Commons committee six months ago.

Veterans' Affairs Minister Dan MacDonald, who had to plead for Commons vote before speaking in the debate, said the proposal still was before cabinet for a final decision.

Mr. MacDonald said all ministers have legislation they want approved but have to face restrictions because of competing priorities and available resources.

The report causing the dispute urged higher pensions for veterans who were prisoners of the Japanese in the Second World War and also some improvements for prisoners in Europe. Widows' pensions would also receive increases if the proposals are approved.

The Commons committee asked for benefits for veterans held by the Japanese which would total the base pension plus another 50 per cent and additional benefits for disability.

Other prisoners would be paid pensions based on the length of time confined. Veterans held for up to 1½ years would get 10 per cent of the base amount; those held 1½ to 2½ years would get 15 per cent. Those imprisoned longer would get an additional 20 per cent.

Mr. Knowles said he thought Mr. Macdonald has been pressing for the legislation but the government had set it aside because of its spending restraint policy.

Clarke Rollins Waves During Recent Campaign, His Last, He Says.

Clarke Rollins Firm on Decision to End Career

BY HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

MADOC — Local Progressive Conservative organizers are making immediate move to find a political successor to Clarke Rollins.

His constituency organization in Hastings-Peterborough now has a new executive.

Like everyone else, they were caught unawares by Mr. Rollins announcement on Thursday to retire from provincial politics.

But no one yet is talking a nomination convention to choose a candidate for the next provincial election.

In fact, Terry Pidlam, new Conservative association president in the riding here, said Thursday he wants to talk once more with the veteran MPP before any future plans are discussed by the executive.

But interviewed from Queen's Park Thursday, Mr. Rollins was asked if anything could happen to alter his decision.

His reply is a word: "No."

He retires whenever the next provincial election is called, ending a long career in public affairs.

Starting as councillor in his native Wollaston Township in the 1940s, he became a dominant force in county politics with his election to the legislature in 1963. He has campaigned under three premiers—starting with Leslie Frost.

Now 64, he still maintains the characteristic pace that keeps him in close contact with local affairs by the hour. His stay in office may be constituency territory expand until it reached from north of Peterborough to Deseronto in this year's provincial election.

There has been some expectancy among these close to Mr. Rollins that he might not seek re-election. But his sudden public confirmation at a party organization meeting here was a total surprise.

The indication comes from Ken Smith, Conservative association president for the last 10 years and manager of four successive Rollins campaigns.

"I felt he wasn't going to run again," said Mr. Smith, who is reeve of Elzevir-Grimsthorpe Township and former county warden, at the time of the announcement came as a surprise.

Discussing his decision, Mr. Rollins noted his health, his service, and the size of his new constituency.

He and his wife, Beverley, have a four-year-old son, Thomas.

"I have my family to think about too — which is important," said Mr. Rollins.

But he also made mention of this week's debate he attended at county council involving Hastings official plan.

Provincial government officials came in for criticism as the county's planning committee accused of delays. Mr. Rollins suggested he could arrange a meeting of the ministerial level on the issue. But the committee decided to center once more with civil servants.

Mr. Rollins said the move "was a definite contributing factor" in his decision to announce his retirement.

He said it was "a clear indication" that it "wasn't necessary to have an elected representative involved" in the official plan process.

"I was prepared to offer assistance to get the official plan finalized and it wasn't accepted."

With his government party in a minority the life of the current legislature is unpredictable.

Province Cancels Monday Meeting To Discuss New Bay Bridge Study

A meeting set for next Monday in Belleville between provincial transportation officials and local government representatives on a new Bay Bridge route has been cancelled.

The discussion was to review findings of the study involving a new Highway 14 link across the Bay of Quinte between the Belleville area mainland and Prince Edward County.

Cancellation of the meeting set for the Hastings County administrative building was announced by Hugh O'Neil, MPP Quinte.

His announcement indicated the transportation and communication ministry's study team was awaiting more data from senior government.

Reason for calling off the meeting was "lack of clarification of points" from the provincial environment ministry and the federal transport department, he said.

Prince of Wales Hazard?

School Shape Concerns Parents

BY RON CARSON
Staff Reporter

A parent group at Prince of Wales Public School in Belleville's north end, will meet with Hastings County Board of Education officials early next month to discuss the possibility of a new school to replace the existing 51-year-old structure.

A spokesman for the group, Rolly Thomas, said Wednesday parents are becoming increasingly concerned about the physical state of the school, particularly in view of what they consider potential fire hazards.

Mr. Thomas, a parent of a student at the school, explained that some parents are worried about fire hazards and believe the only real solution is a new school.

Bob Horwood, superintendent of this school, said Thursday board officials have been aware of the problem since 1967 when it listed a new facility here as a top priority.

Mr. Horwood said the board believes that advanced renovations would not correct the situation but he added that a new facility to handle about 400 students, would now cost $1.1 million.

Mr. Thomas, an area assistant bank manager, said the school's principal and staff do everything they can to cope with the physical structure. He said the principal even conducts extra fire drills to compensate.

The Hastings board took over Prince of Wales Public School in 1969 when that part of the township was annexed into the city. Mr. Horwood said a new school on the 4.5-acre site is still "top priority with the board."

However, he added a note of caution by saying that the capital forecast looks bleak for this year. Since the province introduced education spending ceilings the board only gets a fraction of its requests.

Mr. Horwood said the board sympathizes with both sides of the issue. He said board officials would be happy to meet with the parents.

During 1974, both the staff and school's official parent group Prince of Wales School Advisory Committee prepared reports on the school's physical problems as well as its educational shortcomings.

Prince of Wales currently has an enrolment of about 330 students and serves a kindergarten to Grade 8 cross-section. The school also houses a separate Grade 7 program.

The school basically has a multi-level structure with several additions in later years.

Stone Mason Says St. Thomas Biggest Project of His Career

By COLIN BRUCE

Whether its cutting stone for St. Thomas' Anglican Church or for a fireplace, stone mason Paul Johnsen of Wellington treats his work as an artform.

A versatile breed, Mr. Johnsen is currently one of four qualified stone masons between Montreal and Toronto and one of a possible six stonecutters in all of Ontario.

As a sideline, two of Ontario's stone cutters are now working with Mr. Johnsen in the restoration of St. Thomas Anglican Church. "I've got half of the best in the province working."

Working with stone selecting it first, then shaping it is an artform," said Mr. Johnsen. "I put my heart and soul in to it. It's hard to explain."

He started his trade 25 years ago in Toronto as a steeplejack mason earning $1.10 an hour.

"But when I was first asked to work on St. Thomas I knew it would be the biggest job I had ever done and I had mixed feelings whether the job was for practical."

"I didn't think it actually could be done," said Mr. Johnsen. "I was pleasantly surprised that the building hadn't disintegrated as badly as I had thought."

Working with many handtools that are no longer made set alone used by contemporary tradesmen, Mr. Johnsen and his elite crew have completed about 70 per cent of the church restoration. Other trades still working on the project include carpentry, plumbing, painting and electrical work.

Rev. Peter Teti, whose congregation was left without a church building by a fire which gutted the 128-year-old structure, April 30 said "their financial projections will not be available until early in January when all contracts for restoration work have been let."

The church financial goal for restoration is a total $750,000, of which $227,000 is taken care of through insurance money, Rev. Teti said the congregation has already raised $194,000.

"We will get a long way to go...$61,000 at least," he said.

"I'm fairly confident we'll be able to move back in by October," he said.

Drivers May Get First Aid Course

City bus drivers may in future be given first aid techniques, the result of consultations between commissioners over a late November car-bus collision that sent eight persons to hospital.

Belleville Transit Commission Chairman Marylen Burtt broached the subject at a commission meeting Wednesday, saying drivers should be instructed in first aid techniques in case of a similar emergency.

She suggested that the course be supplied through the commission, possibly with St. Johns Ambulance.

Commission manager Lewis McMillin said he will discuss the course with employee union representatives in the near future.

'Ham' Operators Need More Space: Expert

By CLIFF KENTON

Canadian amateur radio operators need more frequencies and will be asking for them president of the International Amateur Radio Union (IARU) said in Belleville Thursday.

"We will undoubtedly be asking for more frequencies and justify that request because of growth," Mr. Eaton told members of Quinte Amateur Radio Club.

He said there are now about 15,000 amateur radio operators in Canada. With predicted growth at about 5% to four per cent a year he said there will be about 20,000 by 1980.

Additional frequencies are needed, he said, due to congestion and interference and sharing of frequencies with other air wave users.

He said he met with members of federal department of communications earlier this week to begin investigations into Canadian proposals to be made at the 166-country ITU conference in Geneva in 1979.

"There have been enormous changes in this organization in the past 20 years," said Mr. Eaton.

Functions of ITU, formed about 100 years ago, include allocation of frequencies and setting of technical standards and operating procedures. Membership since the last convention in 1959 has increased by 60 countries.

Transports Collide

Highway 401 traffic near Marysville Rd. Tuesday was snarled for several hours early today as police and emergency crews worked to untangle the wreckage left after two westbound tractor trailers collided near the Salmon River Bridge.

Belleville OPP corporal Dan Garlick, investigating the 3 a.m., rear-end crash, said investigation into the mishap is continuing.

Andre Perets of Brampton, driving for Husband Transport Lines hauling general freight for Canadian National, and William Baldwin, in a following truck hauling frozen peas and cleaning solvent, both escaped serious injury in the collision.

Cpl. Garlick said approximately $7,000 damage was done to the rear of Perets' truck and $33,000 damage to the tractor of the Baldwin rig.

Pleasant Surprise

Paul Johnsen, one of only a handful of stone masons left working their trade, said he had mixed feelings when he was asked to restore the stonework in the 120-year-old St. Thomas' Anglican Church. "I was pleasantly surprised that the fire had not deteriorated the stone as much as I had thought," he said.

Delegation Seeks More Funds for Dams

A delegation from city hall and the Moira River Conservation Authority (MRCA) is in Toronto today to discuss funding of re-central dams with provincial government authorities.

Government cuts in the MRCA's 1976 budget have forced plans for building the two dams.

Construction has been set to start next year on the projects — near College St. and further downstream at Reid St. — designed as permanent flood control measures for the city.

The budget cut ruled out building the College St. facility. Provincial officials suggested the Reid St. dam could be built, but the MRCA considers construction of the downstream project first as unsound planning city council has been told.

The aim of today's delegation is to ask the government to reconsider the budget cuts or provide sufficient funds to build the College St. dam first.

Jaimet McLeod, MRCA secretary-treasurer, said Thursday the group was to meet with Natural Resources Minister Leo Bernier's parliamentary assistant.

However, an immediate decision is not expected, he said.

Any changes would also have to be reviewed by the cabinet's Board of Management.

MRCA representatives along with Mr. McLeod are manager John Johnston, chairman Guy Hughes and vice-chairman Harold Thompson.

City spokesmen are Mayor Ben Corke and Ald. Jack Meeks, city council's representative on the MRCA.

New Nursery Tries Unique Approach to Child Care

By SUSAN McCONVELL
Staff Reporter

First Adventure — an adventure in learning for two-to-five-year-olds — opened its doors of a centre located on the corner of Bridge and Bleecker streets.

The centre, in an old house now under renovation, opened Monday for 13 children. It will officially open early next year.

A pilot project, First Adventure is the first of its kind in Ontario and possibly Canada. It is a unique project that stemmed from the work of volunteer organizations in the Bayshore area.

The centre began with the organization of the Bayshore and District Children's Services Committee, lead by Miriam Lange of the Volunteer Bureau.

The philosophy is integration between average children and children with physical or mental handicaps.

First Adventure consists of three levels.

The basement nursery is operated for emotionally disturbed children by the psychiatric department of Belleville General Hospital and is funded by the ministry of health. The co-ordinator of this level united from First Adventure is Mary Sutherland.

The main floor will house children with emotional or physical handicaps while a regular nursery school will operate on the top floor.

The upper levels receives 80 per cent of its operating costs from the ministry of community and social services and depends on the charitable donations for the remaining 20 per cent.

Bridge Street United Church provides Sunday collections for other items published in the Belleville Yardbird Society Fund has also made a donation.

First Adventure also received a Local Initiatives Program grant to hire a driver and custodian.

Some parents are paying $3 per session per child.

The main level can accommodate 30 handicapped children in two separate sessions — morning and afternoon. On the second floor 16 children, 22 in each program, can be accommodated.

The staff, directed by Anne Carruthers, a registered nurse consists of six people, all with Early Childhood Education diplomas. Two hold certificates in mental retardation.

The nurseries feature children work areas such as a cubbies where the children will be integrated for learning experiences. Observation win-

Cash Taken

City police today say a ladder was taken from a neighbour's home be thieves to gain entry through a kitchen window at 30 Applewood Dr. where $11.46 in cash was stolen Wednesday.

Nothing else was stolen and no damage was done to the home of Mrs. Jane Williamson of the Applewood Drive area.

Thieves gained entry by forcing the kitchen window.

dows complete with sound systems are used throughout the centre.

The integration program is scheduled to begin January.

"Treated as a centre do not have a bias or prejudice — they are all in their formative years," said Mrs. Carruthers.

"If we expose the average child to children who are different than they are, they can grow with it—see children in a natural way."

Mrs. Carruthers said the staff also plans to work closely with the parents.

"Handicapped children are often exposed to programs which segregates them. They aren't exposed to the average children and they learn," she said.

"You can't just deal with the children. The family situation has to be dealt with as well."

Espo Goes Home to Surpass 1,200 Points

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

It was a homecoming, of sorts, but Phil Esposito, one of Boston Bruins' leading all-time scorers, looked out of place Thursday night wearing the visiting blue uniform of New York Rangers.

Esposito showed no emotion when he received a standing ovation from a packed crowd of more than 15,000 at Boston Garden.

Once the National Hockey League game started, Esposito got down to business.

In his first Boston appearance since being traded here, a 6 in the Rangers, the big centre managed two assists, one on Steve Vickers' tie-breaking goal in the second period, as New York took a 5-1 victory.

The loss snapped the Bruins' 14-game unbeaten string—nine wins and five ties.

In the only other NHL game Thursday, Minnesota North Stars beat Kansas City Scouts 5-3 with Bryan Hextall picking up two goals and two assists for the winners.

World Hockey Association results saw Edmonton Oilers 3, Calgary Cowboys 2; and San Diego Mariners 5, Indianapolis Racers 3.

The results put the Rangers in a third-place tie with Atlanta Flames, both with 28 points in the Patrick Division. The Bruins remained second in the Adams Division with 30 points.

"I was sweating, there's no doubt about it," Esposito said after becoming only the seventh player in NHL history to crack the 1,200-point mark in regular-season play. He now has 540 goals and 533 assists—cans in 83 only more than eight seasons with the Bruins.

Wayne Dillon also scored two goals for the Rangers.

Vickers snapped a 1-1 tie with his 11th goal at 16:26 of the second period. He went alone to beat goalie Gilles Gilbert after Esposito and Rick Middleton outmaneuvered Boston defenders to open the pass over.

Kansas City peppered goalie Pete Loprestti with 18 shots in the first four minutes of play, but the Scouts came up empty-handed. Minnesota led 3-0 after the first frame.

Bill Goldsworthy and Dwight Bialowas gave the Stars a four-goal advantage in the second period.

In Calgary, two unanswered goals in the third period carried the Oilers past the Cowboys before 4,145 fans.

The victory moved Edmonton to within three points of the third-place Cowboys in the Canadian Division.

Rusty Patenaude, Tim Sheehy and Norm Ullman scored Edmonton's goals while Butch Deadmarsh accounted for all the Calgary scoring.

Right winger Nick Harbaruk scored his 13th goal of the year to help the Racers tie the Mariners 3-3 in overtime.

The Racers overcame a 3-1 deficit with two goals early in the third period. Brian McDonald scored only 20 seconds into the period to cut the score to 3-2 and then Harbaruk scored at 2:08.

San Diego moved to a 2-0 lead when Norm Ferguson scored his 18th goal at 5:07 and Ray Addonco scored the first of two goals at 11:25.

Brockville Takes Over

OTTAWA (CP) — The Central Junior Hockey League has taken charge of Brockville Warriors on an interim basis while the club owners sort out ownership management problems.

Jean-Marc Lemonde, league informant officer and vice-president of the ruling Ottawa District Lacrosse Association responsible for junior hockey, made the announcement Thursday night.

He also said Walter P. Jewell had been fired by the five other club owners as president and paper-el-manager and that Dan Dexter, the team coach, had been appointed interim general manager.

But, because the franchise is in Jewell's name alone, it was thought Dexter might not have table control until either Rick Knox or Ray Reinhardt of the other owners from Philadelphia-Cherry Hill or Brockville Saturday to straighten matters out.

In the meantime, the club will fulfil its commitments to the league, including a game here tonight against Rockland Nationals. Jewell said the club would be suspended.

In his Wednesday statement, Jewell said the club was being withdrawn temporarily from the league while ownership and responsibility difficulties were ironed out.

Lalonde said Thursday it was this withdrawal of the team, which left Cornwallon with the other owners, that led to Jewell's dismissal.

The six Philadelphia owners bought the club last year with Jewell liaising between the club and the owners.

Rockland Pulverizes Pembroke

ROCKLAND, Ont. (CP) — Rockland Nationals continued bombarding their Central Junior Hockey League opponent Lumber Kings 11-3 before about 400 fans.

The victory moved the Nationals eight points ahead of Gloucester Rangers atop the six-team league.

Norm Brisbois, with three goals, Randy Burman and Bob Moses, with two each, led the scoring parade as the Nationals held 4-1 and 7-1 period leads.

Behind them for Rockland were Gilbert Lecavalier, Gerry Leroux, Jean Thibodeau and Tim Strasdonnis, with one goal each.

Terry McQuade, Rob Norris and Jim Caldwell scored for Pembroke.

The Kings outshot 58-36, needed two goalies after starter Gerry was hit in the face by a puck with the score 6-1 in the second period. He was replaced by Andy Culhane, a newcomer to the team.

It was the only game scheduled for the night, but tonight Gloucester is in Smiths Falls against the Bears and Rockland is in Brockville to play the Warriors.

Asselstine May Return

TORONTO (CP) — Ron Asselstine, who quit as a World Hockey Association referee last Friday after a run-in with Gordie Howe, said Thursday he has reconsidered and will return to work as a linesman.

The WHA, which gave him time to reconsider his retirement this week, "left the door open for me to come back as long as I remain a referee or a linesman, but I don't think I can continue with the pressures of refereeing."

The incident that sparked his resigning occurred in Houston when the veteran Aeros' winger sth owed the official in the stands while arguing a minor infraction.

Asselstine gave Howe a game ruleconduct and the Aeros' star winger slid club president subsequently was assessed a two-game suspension, the first suspension in nearly 30 years of professional hockey for the 47-year-old Howe.

Asselstine left the ice after clashing with Howe and the game was delayed for 20 minutes while the two coaches, Houston's Bill Dineen and Bobby Kromm of Winnipeg, coaxed him to return.

"I kept taking the game home with me," Asselstine said. "I was always trying to referee a perfect game and when it couldn't please everybody it carried over off the ice."

Loyalist Climbs Over Break Even

Loyalist Colleges Lancers completed the first half of their 1975-76 season Thursday night with a convincing 79-55 victory over visiting Sir Sandford Fleming from Peterborough. The win gave the Lancers a 5-4 record and marked the first time the squad has finished with a better than .500 record in the half of their new Eastern Ontario Colleges Athletic Association league.

Ken Fairbank, who scored 18 points Wednesday in a losing cause against Kingston, topped in 26 against Sir Sandford. Jim Belfall and Mike Lynch were next with 14 apiece and Dave Culmer had nine, seven of them from the free throw line. As a whole the Lancers took full advantage of Peterborough's numerous fouls. Loyalist was good for 31 per cent of their final shots.

Steve Dinsdale was top scorer for Peterborough with 14 points.

TONY MEAGHER

Meagher Clicks In Metro Play

If you're at tonight's Metro Junior contest at the Memorial Arena analyze the strength of the Belleville Bobcats up the middle. Although highlighting Paul Tilley won't be back from his suspension until Sunday's game in Bramalea, the Cats still have two of the finest centres in the league. One, of course is veteran Grant Geegan, the other is rookie Tony Meagher.

At only five-foot-seven and 133 pounds, Meagher is leaving an impression on every team in the league. Though just 17 years of age he plays with all the finesse and self-discipline of a ripe veteran.

Meagher started the season on a scorching goal scoring clip. Th r rookie tallied at least once in each of the Cats first six games and after the initial nine starts of the schedule he had amassed 13 goals and 11 assists.

In the following four games, one of which he missed, Meagher was held off the scoreboard completely. But just as the Cats appear to be revitalizing their attack, Meagher seems to have completely broken out of his short slump.

In his last three starts he has scored four times. Tonight against flaying North York Rangers, Meagher could perform some incredible goaltending feats. His real test tonight will come Sunday. An excellent two way player, Meagher will have to get all of his talents to work to be effective against the powerful Bramalea Blues.

The number to watch for tonight, if you want to watch a fine all around hockey player is 18.

Ken Just, Mike Van Alstlen and Jason Morris were the Belvedere marksmen.

Nicks Making Mark

Nicholson Catholic College Purple Nicks are quickly making a name for themselves in Bay of Quinte Basketball Association action.

The Nicks opened their regular schedule Tuesday, defeating Quinte Saints after winning the Centennial Junior Tournament on Saturday. Thursday night they came out on top in a tight defensive contest with Belleville Collegiate 42-32.

Boyd Kalnay and Paul MacAlpine paced the Nicks with 12 points apiece and Ernie Rainbow got 11. John Geen scored nine and Randy Donovan seven for BCI.

In the midget contest, the Collegiate came back from a five point half time deficit to catch a 44-35 victory over the Nicks.

Bayside Off To All-Ontario

Bayside Red Devils will represent Central Ontario at the Ontario Federation of School Athletic Association girls basketball championship January 8,9,10.

The decision was announced Thursday by Bayside's coach, Terry Boyd. Thursday night the team won the AA Central Ontario Secondary School Athletic Association championship Saturday, there was some discussion as to whether they or Nicholson Catholic College should represent the region. The Nicholson entry captured the A COSSAA title on Us weekend and in late November captured the Bay of Quinte championship.

"Generally the host team from the area is selected to represent the area," Boyd, However, since Nicholson's enrolment is so small they had the right to participate in the A COSSAA tournament. Bayside played off in AA and won their Central Ontario classification.

Since this is the first year ever for an all-Ontario girls basketball championship, it was questioned as to which team had the right to represent the Central Ontario region according to team strength. Though Bayside had earned the right by winning a higher class COSSAA championship, Nicholson had demonstrated strength by defeating all other teams in the Intermediate area including Bayside, for the Bay of Quinte championship.

The decision was made based on a COSSAA ruling which includes clauses in school wishing to participate in an AA tournament must first eliminate all other AA classified schools.

As a result, Nicholson would have had to play off against Bayside and NCC elected to past.

Lions Lose to Oshawa

Belleville's Lions Midgets breathed a sigh of relief Thursday night following their 6-3 Ontario Minor Hockey Association loss to Oshawa Park, way TV. The game was the last the Lions will have to play against the powerful Oshawa team in the 1975-76 regular schedule.

The local club has yet to win a game in AA OMHA hockey against their Oshawa counterpart. Thursday, they jumped in front 3- in the first period, but were quickly taken in hand.

Rob Bunton, John Jinnopoulous and Peter Hall were the marksmen for Belleville

Murphy a Strong Bet for Belleville

This weekend Terry Murphy turns 19. He'll have an opportunity to make it a memorable birthday if he comes through the way national weightlifting coach Ken Carr-Brant believes he can.

The Apollo Barbell Club presents its 21st Annual Eastern Ontario Teenage Christmas Contest Saturday at Moira Secondary School and Murphy is considered Belleville's best bet for a gold.

Competitors will travel from all over the province and things get under way at 12 noon. The event finishes around 7 p.m. and admission is free.

Bobby Bonds Sent Packing for Second Consecutive Season

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — New York Yankees started the winter baseball meetings by unloading Bobby Bonds in the first of two trades designed to give the team a new player image to go with its refurbished stadium.

The question is whether the Yankees got their money's worth in deals Thursday with California Angels and Pittsburgh Pirates. They gave up Bonds and popular pitcher Doc Medich in return, they got a swift outfielder in Mickey Rivers, and three pitchers, Ed Figueroa, Ken Brett and Dock Ellis, and infielder Willie Randolph.

Visibly shaken by the trade, Bonds said: "The next time something like this happens, I'll be sitting at home and wonder what's going on and why before I leave. It's going to have to be with my consent, 'cause otherwise I'm not going."

The wheeling and dealing by New York was the big news as the fifth day of the meetings, which also brought the announcement that the National League would continue to finance the financially troubled San Francisco Giants until Dec. 31. The league expects the Giants to be sold to one of a number of white offers, says league president Charles Feeney.

Among the groups seeking to buy the Giants are Labatt's brewery of Canada and a Maple Leaf Gardens bid headed by Lorne Duguid, both interested in the team for Toronto.

The big surprise was moving Bonds, who came to the Yankees last year from the Giants for Bobby Murcer. Bonds played hurt most of last season, still managed to hit .270 with 32 home runs, 85 runs batted in, and 30 stolen bases. He set a major league record with 11 in 20 homer-30 stolen base accomplishment for the third year in a row.

Gabe Paul, president of the Yankees, said "we didn't with last season. I resisted trading him (Bonds), but it opened the door for more trades."

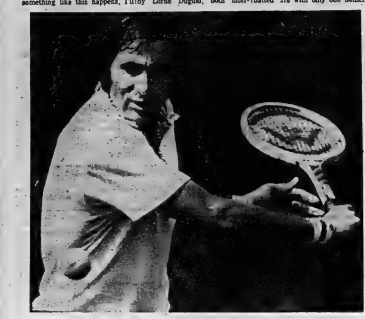
In Rivers, New York obtained one of the fastest outfielders in baseball. The 27-year-old Rivers batted .278 with only one homer and 53 RBI, but he stole 70 to lead the American League.

Paul and manager Billy Martin wanted Figueroa, as that Medich would be expendable in the deal with the Pirates. Figueroa, a right-hander, was 16 and 12 in his first full season, with a 2.90 earned-run average.

Randolph comes highly recommended by scouts as a strong defensive player with a good arm. He can play second or shortstop. He appeared in 36 games for Pittsburgh last season, and hit just .165.

The 27-year-old Brett is strictly a gamble. He has been on the disabled list several times in the last two seasons with a chronic elbow condition. When he's healthy, the lefthander is a fine pitcher, lb was 9-5 with a 3.36 ERA in 1975.

As other trades Thursday, as the deal tally mounted to 11 involving 36 players, Houston sent third baseman Dave Rader, the National League's top-hitting batsman, to San Diego for pitchers Larry Hardy and Joe Mcintosh; California Angels moved first baseman Jim Spencer, whom they acquired Wednesday from Texas, to Chicago White Sox for third baseman Bill Melton and right-handed pitcher Steve Dunning, two major league veterans in a White Sox farmhand with pro-ject Cleveland.



Ilie Nastase Takes Team Tennis Bait

WTT Goes After Biggies

NEW YORK (AP) — World Team Tennis landed one of the biggest fish in international waters, Ilie Nastase, Thursday and dangled lines in front of other established stars, including Arthur Ashe of the United States, Australian Rod Laver and Jimmy Connors of the U.S.

Nastase, who only last week-end won the rich Grand Prix Masters in Stockholm, wound up as a member of the Hawaii Leis after a flurry of wheeling and dealing involving New York Sets.

The fiery Romanian decided while in Sweden that he would like to play with WTT but not in New York, where he has been roundly criticized for his uncourt gamesmanship and explosions.

The Sets, who owned his draft rights, gave Nastase permission to deal with the Leis. They came to terms quickly. He signed a one-year contract for a salary reported in excess of $100,000.

Cleveland Nets drafted a blue-ribbon lineup that included Ashe, Connors and Swedish ace Bjorn Borg.

Millan Hurlers Favorite Target

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — National League pitchers didn't have Ron Hunt to knock around during the 1975 baseball season. They picked on Felix Millan of New York Mets.

Official statistics released today revealed that Millan was hit by the most pitches this year, 12.

Hunt, the infielder whose big league career ended after the 1974 season during which he was hit 11 times, led the league in seven consecutive seasons in the painful category and he holds the major league career record of being hit 243 times.

Dave Parker of Pittsburgh Pirates edged Greg Luzinski of Philadelphia for the 1975 slugging title, with a percentage of .541 to Luzinski's .540.

Cincinnati's Joe Morgan, the league's most valuable player, drew the most bases on balls, 132, and among players with a minimum of 500 plate appearances bit into the fewest double plays, three.

Ralph Garr of Atlanta and Luzinski shared the league lead in intentional walks, receiving 17 apiece. Mike Schmidt, two-time home run champ, also became a two-time strikeout champ, fanning 180 times this year.

McGinnis' Greed Pays

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

You really have to hand it to George McGinnis.

Philadelphia 76ers did Thursday night and as a result, they took a 118-108 National Basketball Association victory over Phoenix Suns.

McGinnis kept getting the ball from his team-mates and wound up with a game-high 28 points, including 14 in the last 10 minutes.

McGinnis not only contributed offensively, but defensively as well. He made a vital steal and turned it into a three-point play with 52 seconds left.

In other NBA games, Atlanta Hawks defeated Buffalo Braves 123-99, Cleveland Cavaliers downed New York Knicks 100-95, Washington Bullets beat New Orleans Jazz 109-99 and Golden State Warriors trimmed Portland Trail Blazers 101-88.

American Basketball Association results were: Denver Nuggets 111, Virginia Squires 100; and New York Nets 124, Indiana Pacers 123

Nine of McGinnis' points came in the last two minutes after Phoenix had edged ahead 100-99 with 2:30 left. The victory trained Philadelphia's record to 17-6 and gave the 76ers 3rd consecutive victories. The loss snapped a three-game winning streak for Phoenix and left the Suns at 11-6. Alvan Adams led Phoenix with 21 points.

Atlanta's John Drew came off the bench and scored 13 second-quarter points to lead the Hawks' 33 an easy victory over the slumping Braves.

Drew, who finished with 29 points, teamed with Tree Rollins, who had 16 points in the second quarter, as the Hawks overcame a 26-24 Buffalo first quarter margin to take a 58-44 halftime lead. Henderson finished with 21 points. The Braves lost for the eighth time in 10 games and fell below .500 at 11-12.

Dick Snyder and Bobby Smith scored 12 points each in a third-period rally as Cleveland ended a three-game losing streak by beating New York. Cleveland center Jim Brewer led all scorers with his team-leading 26 points in the losing effort.

Phil Chenier scored 24 points and got plenty of help from his team-mates as Washington raced past struggling New Orleans. Jimmy Jones had 16 points while Elvin Hayes, Leo Robinson and Dave Bing each had 15 in the balanced Bullet attack.

Faced by the shooting of Jamaal Wilkes and Charles Dudley, Golden State pulled away in the second half to beat Portland. The NBA's defending champions remained unbeaten at home through 10 games and made their overall season record 16-4.

In Memoriam

PARKS — In fond and loving memory of a dear husband and father who left us one year ago today, December 12, 1974. Since you've gone the first and I remain, sad days follow days of pain. Wish slowly down the path of death, I'd walk it with you, dear, if I could. I want to hear once more you take, That I may walk the same, And some day down Memory road, You'll hear me call your name.
— Sadly missed by wife, children and families.

PARKS — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather, Norman Parks, who passed away December 12, 1974.
There's always a lonely heartache, And often a silent tear, And always prudent memories, Of one we loved so dear.
— Always remembered and sadly missed by Ralph and Barbara and granddaughter Jackie and Lisabeth.

WARAM — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather, Rev. Dr. Eric Waram who left us December 12, 1972.
Others may forget,
We shall remember never,
Your memory will live on,
In our hearts forever.
—Lovingly remembered by his daughter Faye and his grandchildren Ruth, Jeffrey and Ian.

FOSTER — In loving memory of a dear mother, Mrs. Alex (Lamie) Foster, who passed away December 12, 1973.
As we travel on,
So we miss you,
Sadly missed by daughter Elva, Howard and family.

DAVIS — In loving memory of a dear wife, Margaret Davis, who passed away December 12, 1971.
As we travel you, as we miss you,
Sadly missed by husband Bob,
Sons Ronald, Leonard and Howard and grandson Jeffrey.
Bringing many a silent tear,
—Always remembered by husband Bob.

Kingston Choir Gives Bright Performance of Handel's Messiah

By Eugene Lang

Georg Frederich Handel's most enduring masterpiece "Messiah" is as much a part of the Christmas season as mistletoe or plum pudding.

Thursday night, a choir of approximately 50 voices from Chalmers United Church, Kingston along with the Kingston Camerata, an orchestral ensemble of 15 instrumentalists, all under the direction of David Cameron, gave an exhilarating performance of this perennial favorite of large scale religious works at the Church of St. Michael the Archangel in Bath in Belleville before an audience that could have been much larger than it was.

During the past 100 years it seems that each choir leader or conductor seems to vie with his colleagues as to who can produce this composition with the most bloated choir and largest orchestra, supposedly to get from these increased forces more thrilling aural effects.

But, strange to say, Handel himself in his later years made do with a choir of 23 voices and his accompanying orchestra of about 26 players. Thus, it is only of recent years that conductors have taken a new look at this oratorio and are depleting the usual heavy choirs so that they are skimmed down to more of what the composer desired.

Furthermore, Handel left it to the interpreter(s) to inject into the score added vocal embroidery and embellishment as befitted their degree of musical improvisation.

This was customary in his time, but a few years after his thought arose in the last century that received only the printed note, to be interpreted — no additions.

Mr. Cameron went back to Handelian customs in that a good number of the solo selections were ENCORE with them extra trills, mordents, appoggiaturas and free wheeling vocal manoeuvrings.

To present day ears this might seem to be an impudence to the often heard hallowed phrases that we hear in a set pattern, but in actuality it was a breath of fresh air tinged with charm and thoughtful recreativeness on the part of conductor and his soloists.

Soprano Audrey Farnell possesses a delightful voice of bell toned clarity which was given full rein in Rejoice, Greatly, O Daughter of Zion with restful literature included in the vocal line. Ringing sounds of dulcet appeal were envisioned in I Know That My Redeemer Liveth as sung in a not-mannered version con licensa.

Mezzo-soprano Edith Lane was admirable in her solos, especially in the familiar He Was Despised. Maybe it was because of the acoustics of the church, but her voice at times came across as somewhat muffled as it reached these ears.

Tenor David Galbraith brought to the aria Every Valley a feeling of excited excitement while Thou Shalt Break Them was declaimed with forceful approach.

Bass Baritone Randall Marsh produced a rich resonance in his offerings, again a muffled quality emanating at the odd interval, which we cannot exactly explain unless it was the acoustics. Why Do The Nations Rage was at a marching pace with frenzied fury in a flinging overview of vocal virtuosity. In The Trumpet Shall Sound this powerful voice sank into the depths of its range rising up with strong straddlings that were sandalwood by appealing obligato of trumpet.

The choir rose to every occasion at the helmic bid of Mr. Cameron. They were lucksive in their entrances where counterpoint commanded, and nuances of timbre shone through at many places. The hearers were so enthralled that applause broke out following the shattering Hallelujah Chorus. Precision, clarity and inspiration were three of their trademarks.

We could have stood a little more backing up from the trumpet in the heavier choruses, but this seemed to be held in reserve for only two examples that we hear. The harpsichord continuo flavored the accompaniments most delightfully.

The orchestra as a whole gave exemplary balance to the vocal relentless be they solo or concerted. All in all a lovely Christmas present from the Limestone City to the Quinte area.

Hearing Aid Gift

Seven-year-old Allan Telford of Stirling received a hearing aid from the Belleville district council of the Boy Scouts of Canada Thursday at Sir James Whitney School (OSD). Fran Hoon, council secretary, made the presentation. The hearing aid was donated this year instead of a Christmas basket.

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Wayne Newton and Ann-Margaret have been named the top male and female performers in the fifth annual Las Vegas Entertainment Awards.

Don Rickles and Joan Rivers were named best male and female comedians, while comedian Gabriel Kaplan was selected best supporting act of the year.

Singers Steve Lawrence and Eydie Gorme were named the top musical variety act of the year.

The awards, announced Wednesday, are voted by the 2,800-member Las Vegas Academy of Variety and Cabaret Artists.

DUBUQUE, Iowa (AP) — The manger in the back of Clement's Christmas display is empty this year because no one stole the infant figure.

"We decided to set up the crib without it," theorized Ronald Kuss said. "Maybe the empty manger will prompt the thief to return the statue."

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Plans call for Pope Paul to ride an electric cart down a ramp several blocks long to an altar in John F. Kennedy Stadium next August to celebrate mass at the International Eucharistic Congress.

Two local architects, Peter Frink and Robert Beauchat, won $5,000 for the design.

Their plan calls for more than 230,000 seats to be set up on scaffolding in the parking lot between the 100,000-seat stadium and the 17,000-seat Spectrum Auditorium, a quarter-mile away. The ramp will be suspended above the seats.

The altar will be 45 feet high and large enough to support the 200 priests who will assist the Pope. Below will be a 1,000-member choir and a 300-piece orchestra. It will be set up to face the open end of the stadium and will be visible to people in the temporary seats outside the stadium.

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — John James Borsemps streaked nude from the Auburn city jail in a rugby escape that has police looking through the prisoner's yoga and astrology books for clues.

Borsemps, 21, escaped his five-foot, eight-inch, 140-pound body and squeezed through a six-by-13 inch jail window in his escape last Friday, police said.

Police Chief Ed Blodgett said Borsemps's clothes and a hat of soap were left behind in his jail cell.

OLDHAM, England (Reuter) — A few juicy swear words, expressed at the right time, can help immigrants feel more at home in their new country.

At least that is what a government-sponsored language school here feels. The school is teaching immigrants in this mill town the art of cursing.

Language teacher David Birkett, who is giving special pronunciation lessons, says: "A lot of swearing goes on and a newcomer has to feel he belongs."

TORONTO (CP) — Harold Greenberg, president of the Montreal and Toronto-based Astral Bellevue Pathe, has announced his company plans to spend $15 million in the next year to produce feature movies in Canada.

Mr. Greenberg said the project is the largest assembled in the country and will involve international stars and co-production and some investment from the Canadian Film Development Corp. (CFDC).

He said the plan includes two films already in production — The Breaking Point and The Little Girl Who Lived Down the Lane.

The Breaking Point is a $1.5-million thriller co-produced with Cinepix Inc. and with the CFDC. It stars Bo Svenson and Robert Culp and is being filmed in Toronto.

Italian director Carlo Ponti is co-producing The Little Girl Who Lived Down the Lane which stars Jodie Foster Smith and Martin Sheen and is being shot in Montreal.

NEW YORK (AP) — No matter what the topic of conversation with Marcello Mastroianni, the subject always centres on love.

"The idea of my being a great lover was invented in America. I am not a lover. I work too hard," said the Italian actor who made his name 15 years ago as the star of La Dolce Vita.

"But women are still the most important thing for me in life. They are much more important than success or money," said Mastroianni.

He then declines to discuss his much-publicized liaisons with Catherine Deneuve, with whom he has a child, and actress Fay Dunaway. He had been married for 25 years to an Italian actress.

"I like romance that is filled with excitement and danger," Mastroianni said. If everything is easy, you run the risk of being impotent. I like to be involved in a game."

Mastroianni is 51, and not happy about it.

"I hate physical destruction. Why does it all have to go? If they can find a way to put men on the moon, why can't they invent something to keep us young? he asked with only a hint of a smile.

There is a certain fadedness about him, albeit a charming one.

Orange Juice Does Not Create Acidity

By G.C. THOMPSON, MD

Dear Dr. Thompson: My husband has had a duodenal ulcer for many years. Recently he developed shortness of breath when climbing stairs. His doctor advised him to have a blood test and it showed him a trifle low in potassium.

He recommended that serve him orange juice or a banana daily. Each of these items aggravates his ulcer. Apparently the doctor cannot understand why.

Ordinarily, the ulcer seldom bothers him, but apparently he cannot tolerate the juice or banana. What other fruit or vegetable can you recommend to help build up potassium for retirement, and which will not affect his ulcer?—Mrs. R.S.F.

A fatty liver is, as the name implies, a liver in which there is an inordinate amount of accumulated fat, sufficient to produce a large, pale organ. Obesity, excessive alcohol, diabetes, and certain vitamin deficiencies can be involved.

The figure you quote has no meaning unless you know just what is represented. It is a measurement of the total blood lipids (cholesterol, triglycerides, phospholipids) then it would be within normal range. If it refers ti cholesterol alone, for example, then it would be seriously high.

As to the fatty liver itself, treatment would depend on its cause.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What does "levocoulosis" mean?—Mrs. C.O.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What are the dangers of a 16-year-old girl smoking cigarettes from smoking? This boy seems to have a cold and a cough do lot. I am worried. Do you think parents ought to allow children that young to smoke?—S.H.

Of the several factors leading to hypertension, cigarette smoking is important. It causes rather high. The cough implies undue lung irritation, which could be a direct result of the smoking.

Starting the habit as early as this can help the boy a positive candidate for emphysema by age 40 or 50, depending on the durability of his lungs. Then, the damage cannot be repaired.

Do what you can to discourage him.

Blue Christmas

(Key of F) *

I'll have a Blue Christmas without you
And so I'll be blue thinking about you
Decorations of red on a green Christmas tree
Won't mean a thing if you're not here with me
I'll have a blue Christmas, that's certain
And when that blue heartache starts hurting
You'll be doin' all right, with your Christmas of white,
I'll be the one who'll have a blue, blue Christmas.

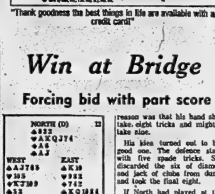
Forcing bid with part score



By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

The whole subject of part score bidding has been given very sketchy treatment by writers. There is a good reason for this. The part score area creates its own special problems.

There is one area of general agreement about two bids with part score which is that the strong-suit two bid is a one-round force even though it is a bid of game.

With 68 on score, North elected to open two hearts. South responded two notrump and North decided to pass. His reason was that his hand should take eight tricks and might not take nine.

His idea turned out to be a good one. Declarer started with five spade tricks. South discarded the six of diamonds and jack of clubs from dummy and took the final eight.

If North had played at three hearts he might have found some way to make the contract but it would require considerable help from his opponents and we have found that experiments don't always co-operate.

Ask the Jacobys

A Mississippi reader wants to know the correct rebid with:

♠AKxxx ♥AQxx ♦xxx ♣x

after you have opened one spade and partner has raised you to two spades.

The answer is that you bid four spades. You should not try to be in game. Why not just bid it?

(Do you have a question for the experts? Write "Ask the Jacobys" care of this newspaper. The Jacobys will answer individual questions if stamped, self-addressed envelopes are enclosed. The interesting questions will be used in the column and will receive copies of JACOBY MODERN.)

AVOID FROZEN LOCKS

Motorists can avoid the frustration of finding frozen locks on their doors this winter by placing an adhesive bandage or plastic tape over the keyhole. To open a frozen lock, insert the key and, if it won't catch or turn lighter, or squirt some de-icer into the lock.

BATTERY FAILURES

About 44 per cent of car breakdowns are caused by battery, starter, and ignition failures. Usually the battery is blamed for the difficulty, but more often than not the battery often has been run down by the frustrated driver's attempts to start a balky engine. Worn spark plugs or points, defective choke, or electrical troubles often are the culprits. Most batteries have a life span of about three years when kept in good condition and properly charged.

To get maximum life from your battery the following precautions are essential:

a) Keep water up to required level at all times.

b) Be sure the battery is kept fully charged.

c) Keep terminals and other connections clean and tight.

d) Keep the battery free of exterior clean.

A point to remember about battery output. A battery that has full power at 80 degrees will have dropped to 65 per cent of its power at 32 degrees. When the temperature hits zero, the battery will have only 40 per cent left. Since the starting job is heavier when the weather is cold, it pays to keep the battery fully charged.

QUESTION: When are the high rates in effect in motels in Florida, Arizona, California and Mexico?

Mr. Yvon L.

ANSWER: In FLORIDA the high rates start December 15th in "most motels, until April 1st in places like Miami Beach and Fort Lauderdale prices almost double after mid-December. Motels around Daytona Beach and Disneyworld are not as expensive in mid-winter because it is cooler here so people are flocking further south. After March 1st the temperatures go up around Daytona Beach and Disneyworld and so do the rates. ARIZONA AND CALIFORNIA:

Three seasons are observed in most hotels. Summer rates in effect from June through September run considerably less than during the winter. Fall rates are priced half-way between. The same months of the season starts in mid-December, for others it may be as late as February 1st.

MEXICO

Light summer rates occur from May to September and October, for the rest of the fall and winter, until the first part of April you should get good weather. Off season rates prevail from May through September.

From mid-December to April rates are the highest. Mexico City does not have off-season rates as the high altitude make it lovely all year round.

QUESTION: We are thinking of retiring to Phoenix, Arizona because we feel it has a dry climate. Could you please tell us if that is true and just throughout the year.

How far is it from Kingston and what is a good fast route down by-passing cities?

Mr. Larry B.

ANSWER: PHOENIX, Arizona has indeed a dry, clear climate where the sun shines 9 days out of 10 which carries the temperatures up into the 70's and seventies in winter. But the nights are cool. It is a desert or fifties and you need a sweater or coat at night. The weather is perfect for golf and exploring the desert, for riding and shopping. You can drive to Mexico in a couple of hours. You can get good motels as low as $15.00 or you $45.00 or more for poolside luxury at a top inn.

Phoenix and its twin city Scottsdale are a favorite haunt for retired people. In addition to the excellent golfing, they both have fine night life shows. A heartbreaker for husbands but wonderful for wives. Indian Jewelry, Indian Blankets, Indian Handicrafts, There are scores of shops in the area selling authentic blankets, paintings, jewelry and beautiful things. These are not roadside souvenir types but the quality of fine merchandise. The Fifth Avenue shops of New York are the ones which the name implies. It's a western style of rambling one-storey houses with wide covered walkways and little patios and yards. Near Phoenix, if you fall in the age bracket which is fifty years of age or more, is the retirement community known as Sun City, which offers reasonable air-conditioned apartments.

Average maximum temperatures from December to April in 88 high in December going up to 94 high in April. Average Minimum low is 45 degrees in December to 53 degrees in April. From May to mid September average maximum temperatures range from 93 to 102 degrees, evening temperatures during this time are in the 80's.

The mileage from Kingston to Phoenix, Arizona is around 2500 miles depending on your route. Ring Out Ye Wild and Merry Bells

(KEY OF C)

Ring out, ye wild and merry bells,
Ring out the old, old story
That first was told by angel tongues
From out the realms of glory!

Peace on earth was their sweet theme
Glory in the highest!
Echoing all the hills away,
Glory in the highest!

Ring, sweet bells, ring ever more,
Wafted from ev'ry steeple,
Christ the Lord, shall be our song
And we shall be His people!
Ring out, ye silver bells, ring out
Ring out your consolation!
That God with man is reconciled
Go tell it to the nations.

Therefore let us all today,
Ring in the Christ-child,
Banish sorrow far away,
Glory in the highest!
Ring out, sweet bells, ring ever more,
Christ the Lord shall be our God
And we shall be His people!

Opposition MPs Attack Immigration Guidelines

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition MPs continued their attack Wednesday on a proposal to shorten the residency requirement for Canadian citizenship to three years from five.

The shorter residency requirement will place a low value on Canadian citizenship, said William Scott (PC—Victoria-Haliburton).

Leonel Beaudoin (SC—Richmond) said an immigrant can live for three years on the margin of society without learning how to be a citizen. The five-year period was needed to find out more about the immigrant.

However, MPs welcomed other sections of the bill to make men and women equal under the Citizenship Act and allow 18-year-olds to apply for citizenship independently of their parents. The age limit now is 21.

The Commons turns today to a bill to limit the federal share to of increased costs under provincial health insurance programs.

Bill Kempling (PC—Halton-Wentworth) said he thought the five-year residency period should be retained but he is willing to change his mind. He said the United States, Great Britain and France all have three-year waiting periods, and in Belgium the waiting period ranges up to 10 years.

Walter Baker (PC—Grenville-Carleton) said a clause in the bill removing the requirement that a prospective citizen be of good character would reduce the Citizenship Court in stature.

Discretionary power would be transferred from an impartial court to the minister, who is a politician, he said.

The bill also would permit children born abroad to adopt the nationality of either parent. Existing law does not grant Canadian citizenship to children born outside Canada to a Canadian woman and applies only under the Citizenship Act when his baby, now a week old, was born out of wedlock.

Harvie Andre (PC—Calgary Centre) said this change should be made retroactive. He cited the case of a child born in Chile to a Canadian mother and an American father. This child is virtually stateless, he said.

Stanley Haidasz (L—Toronto Trinity) said he thought the nationalism minister, said the bill is being overdone. It would give new rights to potential citizens and make citizenship a qualified right.

Leo Marchand (L—Kamloops-Cariboo) also defended the bill. He said the proposed three-year limit is probably too long. The most difficult problem is for an immigrant to leave his native country. "... Once mature people have made mature decisions ... why should we put them through the agony of waiting five years?"

Mr. Marchand also welcomed the proposed end to special privileges now granted British subjects.

Under the present law, British subjects do not have to prove knowledge of English or French and are not tested on their knowledge of Canada.

Mr. Baker said there was good reason for giving British subjects special consideration under the act.

"We must bear in mind that many people who come to this country have enjoyed the British parliamentary system, British justice and other protections of the law as a matter of tradition."

Under the amended act, a Canadian citizen would no longer be considered a British subject but would be termed a "citizen of the Commonwealth."

The bill would also end the special citizenship break granted alien women who marry Canadian citizens. Under the current law, they only have to reside in Canada for one year before applying for citizenship.

Alien men who marry Canadian women have to wait the full five years before they are eligible for citizenship. The bill would require both men and women to reside in Canada for three years before becoming eligible for citizenship.

Nova Scotia Lobster Began Crawfish Fad

PLAQUEMINE, La. (CP) — In the legendary bayous of southern Louisiana they say it was the toughest, hungriest, raddest little critter that ever came out of colonial Nova Scotia.

Says researcher Archie Warriner: "This tiny fella could do anything. He could pat his head, rub his belly, run a weed chase as intruder and dig a hole all at the same time."

The local Cajun folk who farm this tranquil, misty swampland hope sincerely that Canadians will welcome back his vastly multiplied descendents.

The creature in question is really a bit of local lore in Nova Scotia lobster reputed to have migrated south with the Acadians when they were expelled by the British in 1755.

Under the present law, With a little irrigation, farmers can regulate water supply in a pond, draining it in late spring when the crews bury themselves to reproduce prodigiously and flooding to about 2.5 feet in the fall when they emerge.

Rice farmers can grow crawfish along with the rice since the fields have to be flooded nearly half the year anyway.

Crawfish munch on duck weed, primroses and tiny animal matter and, since the wetlands are largely useless except as a home for straying alligators, they are easily converted to a crawfish's paradise.

Live crawfish can be bought here for roughly 60 cents a pound. Rough estimates are that the retail cost further north would reach at least 80 cents.

"He's the real genuine Louisiana mud puppy," says waitress Sally Archer, "and up north they'll fall in love with him!"

Crawa, or crayfish as they're known in the rest of the world, look like tiny lobsters and for generations they have been a staple of the Cajun diet.

That is itself is not a recommendation since not all Cajun food is a delight. "A Cajun will eat just about anything that doesn't eat him first," says John Thibault of nearby Breaux Bridges.

But crawa are different. For years they have been sought out by tourists and visitors, cooked in a hundred different ways and combining the best taste of lobster and shrimp.

For years they were taken for granted locally, fished from natural breeding grounds in bayous.

"You need huge amounts," says Larry de la Bretonne, a biologist at Louisiana State University (LSU) in Baton Rouge, "because people down here eat them in such immense quantities.

"The meat in the tail and the fat in the claws is pretty limited so you get a family buying maybe 40 pounds of little claws for a cookout."

Now, thanks to a major development effort involving the state government, farmers and businessmen in "Cajun country" have started farming crawa scientifically with plans for beginning a major export drive to the northern states, Canada and even parts of Europe.

Last year, the area devoted to crawfish ponds in Louisiana climbed to 44,000 acres from 24,000 in 1971 and 6,000 in 1966.

Says John Fowler, an LSU crawfish expert: "A lot of Canadian entrepreneurs are beginning to show an interest in getting in on the action and so are the French and the Spanish.

There are already a few restaurants in all those countries offering Louisiana craw as a delicacy.

The tiny craw—about 2.5 inches long and weighing ¼ of an ounce—is a dream crop.

Christians to Attend Olympics for Kindness

MONTREAL (CP) — Some 10,000 young Christians coming to Montreal from around the world next summer during the Olympics won't be armed with Games tickets or movie cameras.

They're coming to share in what a co-ordinator for the program calls "acts of practical kindness."

The volunteers, sponsored by 41 evangelical Christian denominations and organizations, will man distress information booths and day-care centres as well as distribute Christian literature and present religious entertainment.

They'll be representing such diverse groups as the Canadian Bible Society, the Salvation Army, the relief organization World Vision International and the Fellowship of Christian Athletes. Half of the groups are Canadian.

An agency set up for one year, Aide Olympique, has the troublesome task of coordinating the work of volunteers coming from Europe, Asia, Canada and the United States for periods of two weeks up to two months.

A focal point of the effort is a three-day crusade by American evangelist Billy Graham during the middle weekend of the Games, July 23-25.

Mr. Graham's crusade director, Sterling Huston, told an October meeting of Montreal clergymen and lay leaders representing 40 area churches that evangelist had selected Montreal for a rally out of 8,000 requests.

Executive-director for Aide Olympique is Dr. Peter Foggia, a bilingual 36-year-old university geography professor. He will be assisted by three other full-time staffers.

Prof. Foggia, who left his research and teaching position at University of Quebec at Montreal for a year, said the campaign aims "to answer a valid Christian presence during the Games."

He said the job of the coordinators is to co-ordinate the work of the various visitors "and help them be involved in the life of the community in practical ways."

"I find it exciting that so many different and varied organizations are willing to drop their differences and work together," said Mr. Foggia.

One of the committee's projects is the printing of a resources handbook which contains information on every kind of assistance available to visitors.

Another is a 24-hour telephone crisis centre staffed by 30 people—with each referral personnel as doctors and psychiatrists—so visitors can call if lost or ill or trying to locate friends," said Prof. Foggia.

He denied the crusade represents proselytism. "We're just sharing our experience of the love of Christ, especially in practical ways, so people will realize it goes beyond theory to philosophy."

THUNDER BAY, Ont. (CP) — Kelly Ostapchuk, 17, of Mississauga, Ont., picked up 27.44 point Thursday to lead the senior women's singles during the opening day of the three-way Central Canada Figure Skating championships.

The national championships will be held next month in London, Ont.

Julie Bowerman of Woodstock, Ont., was second in the senior women's singles with 27.40 points and Shelley Shouten of Chatham, Ont., had 25.84 points.

Ron Shaver of Cambridge held the lead in the senior men's singles with 30.40 points. Kevin Hicks of Windsor and Lee Armstrong of Chatham both finished with 28.78 points.

The first medals in the competition were presented in the novice dance event. Heather Tunbeck and Murray Carey of Winnipeg won the gold medal with 43.60 points. Lillian Hemby of Brandon and Blake Miller of Portage in Prairie captured second place with 39.40 points and Karen Osborne of Chatham and Rusty Ormandy of St. Thomas, the defending champions, were third with 38.50 points.

Lynn Soda and Mark Gignac, of Preston, Ont., began defence of their junior pairs title by taking a narrow lead after the compulsory short program. They had 14.36 points compared to 13.28 for Sherri Baier and Robin Cowan of Kitchener, the only other competitors.

Janice Blakely and Michael De Lapenaiere of Cambridge led the junior dance after the compulsory program. After compulsory figures, Heather Brandon of Bolsverde, Man., was leading the junior women's singles and Roy Priesnitz of Cambridge had a narrow lead in junior men's singles.

CIAU Lifts Limit

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union (CIAU) Thursday lifted its limit on the number of foreign athletes on college teams that it can be reaffirmed by a vote next month by the organization's general assembly.

The ruling, limiting the number of athletes trained outside the country to 10 on intercollegiate team rosters and to three in any one game, was challenged Wednesday by lawyers for Acadia university and its athletic union.

They said the ruling is discriminatory and threatened to seek a court injunction to prevent its application if the CIAU did not scratch it from the books.

In a resolution Thursday, the CIAU board of directors voted to suspend the rule until it can be reaffirmed at its general assembly in Toronto Jan. 12.

The board said, however, it still holds to the principle of it's limit on foreign players and asked members to abide by it until the general assembly decides.

Needles Go To Court

VANCOUVER (CP) — A mother told a British Columbia Supreme Court judge Thursday that she gave up "almost everything else" to make her four sons ice hockey players and athletes with character.

Mrs. Ann Needl was testifying before Mr. Justice J. C. Bouck in a libel action against CKNW radio sportscaster Al Davidson and Western Broadcasting Ltd. concerning a Davidson broadcast Dec. 17, 1973. Mrs. Needl, her husband Norman and son Greg, 20, are the plaintiffs.

Clement McCloskey, a North Shore Winter Club official, testified that Mrs. Needl was suspended from club privileges for three months in the spring of 1971 for interference with coaches. The entire family was later expelled.

Neville O'Sullivan, former hockey coach at another area winter club, Holdsheen, said that he coached Greg Needl and that Mrs. Needl once threw at him as she pummelled his chest with an umbrella.

In his broadcast, Davidson said, "To say most of Dean (parents) hate the Needls' guts would be an understatement because the Needls some time ago figured they had another Bobby Orr in the making and they played it that way."

Irish Terrorist Gives Up

LONDON (AP) — Scotland Yard confirmed today that Michael Wilson, described as "the most-wanted terrorist by British police," was among the four IRA gunmen who surrendered Friday after releasing a middle-aged couple they held hostage in their own apartment for six days.

The three other gunmen were not named, and police said they expected to be charged until Monday. Police suspect the four are responsible for bombings and shootings around London in the last few months in which nine persons were killed and scores wounded.

Police had suspected during their siege that the man known as Wilson—an alias—was among the members of the Irish Republican Army who burst into the apartment of John and Sheila Matthews last Saturday night.

Wilson is wanted for the slaying of Ross McWhirter, co-editor of the Guinness Book of World Records and organizer of an anti-terrorism campaign. McWhirter was shot down by two men on the doorstep of his north London home Nov. 27.

Doctor Defends Actions

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Dr. Michael A. Simserda, an orthopedic surgeon, told Friday in Ontario Supreme Court that the effects of chemonucleol actively caused the arm of a former Kingston resident to be paralyzed following a rarely-performed bone operation.

Dr. Simserda was testifying in a malpractice suit filed by Marian M. Kelly, 23, of Belleville, Ont., against Dr. W. Hamlet, a Kingston orthopedic surgeon.

Dr. Simserda said he based his findings on clinical observations of Mrs. Kelly and studies of x-rays made of her arm before Dr. Hamlet performed a nerve transplant and an osteotomy on her in May, 1971.

Dr. Hamlet, Dr. Simserda and another surgeon, Dr. Ingalfied that an osteotomy—in which the patient's bone is broken and rejoined at a corrected angle—on adult's elbow joint has only a slight clearing deformity of two degrees.

Dr. Simserda said Mrs. Kelly's arm was affected by chemonucleol arthritis in her right shoulder and wrist before Dr. Hamlet did the surgery.

Bobcat coach Meehan Bonnar eyes warning against violence.

Violence in Hockey

Crosbie Lets Players Know How They Stand

By MARK BRETT
Sports Staff

A positive reaction to Attorney General Roy McMurtry's announced intention of cracking down on violence in hockey has developed in the form of warning signs placed in both the city's arenas.

Crosbie took some flak on the subject by explaining that "it's just a bit in boxing for example, the participant, not by the fact he is there, is a pivotal his concept to a certain degree of violence."

"If a player is given a good, clean body check and he goes out and hits the fellow guy over the head, that's violence.

Morchant Bulmer, a former professional player in the Detroit Red Wing clubs, is coach of the Junior B Bobcats.

He says quite bluntly that "the whole thing is crazy".

In his view, the fighting "is way out of hand and entirely blown out of proportion".

The Belleville coach describes himself as "aggressive minded" and makes it clear that in spite of the commotion over violence in hockey, he doesn't intend to game plan.

Bonnar emphasizes the conviction that has arisen over the situation.

"The players don't know how far they can go before they will run the risk of getting a criminal record which could prevent them from taking a hockey scholarship", he says.

Rick Langstaff, a defenceman with the Bobcats, he says, "my style of play hasn't changed a bit".

He terms the present situation regarding violence as "ridiculous" and adds, "as soon as somebody gets kicked for five years, I'll change my style of play."

Coach Grant Gongas has noticed "no change in the style of play in the league from last season", in spite of the violence claims.

"I think the intentions are good as long as they're going back down on things that butt ending and spearing," says Gongas.

He is of the opinion that the important thing is that the players are made aware of the situation.

In coach Bonnar's view, there is more violence in the Metro Junior B League than in the National Hockey League.

"There has always been violence in hockey but you're more likely to see spearing in an NHL game than you are in the league," he says.

"Hockey is a living for the guys in the NHL," says Bonnar, "like anyone else, they protect against losing that living taken away from them.

The question which keeps cropping up in discussion on violence is: what is considered violence and what is not? And, following the lessons of thought, where is the line, drawn, and when do the police step in?

Crosbie should some light on the subject by explaining that "it's a part, but a fit in boxing for example, the participant, not by the fact he is there, is a pivotal his concept to a certain degree of violence."

"If a player is given a good, clean body check and he goes out and hits the fellow guy over the head, that's violence.

Violence Not Ruled Out

AMSTERDAM (AP) — Premier Joop den Uyl of the Netherlands says he will not rule out the use of force in free 13 hostages held by South African nationalists in two sieges. Den Uyl, speaking to reporters late Friday, said "there are no clear prospects for a quick, bloodless end to the sieges" in which four persons have died. He voiced concern for the health of the hostages, some of whom have been captive for nearly two weeks.

TORONTO (CP) — Four men and four women were killed and seven persons injured Friday when a GO Transit commuter train rammed a Toronto Transit Commission (TTC) bus stopped at a level crossing in the city's east end.

Jack Ackroyd, deputy chief of Metropolitan Toronto police, said Friday the collision occurred after the eastbound bus stopped and was not able to move from the controlled crossing on the intersection of St. Clair Avenue East and Midland Avenue.

The eight persons killed, all of Toronto, were not identified by early today, a police spokesman said six of the injured were in critical condition.

Witnesses said the back door of the bus, which was carrying 30 to 40 passengers, had not moved on to the crossing. Buses will not pass if a door is left open.

They said passengers streamed off the bus as lights flashed, but were unable to stop the train approached with its horn shrilling.

Witnesses said some of the persons killed were standing behind the bus, thinking they were out of the train's way. When the train struck the front of the bus, the vehicle was thrown into the passengers standing on the road.

Alice Mooney, a passenger who got off the bus before reaching it was stopped on the crossing, said a middle-aged woman was thrown about 30 feet through the air and landed face down on the tarmac ground.

"She might have smothered to death," Mrs. Mooney said. "I turned her over and stayed with her until the ambulance came."

Capt. Norman Shelton of the fire department in the borough of Scarborough, where the accident occurred said ambulance crews were removing the dead and injured when his crew of four arrived.

"There was so much going on, we just moved from one to another, comforting them, giving them first aid and a little oxygen," he said.

A spokesman for GO Transit said none of the train passengers or crew were injured. The train, No. 957, was westbound in a non-stop run to the downtown Union Station, from Pickering, just east of Toronto.

The undercarriage of the bus was knocked 30 feet down the track in the accident which occurred at about 9:30 p.m. EST in the area.

Gordon Herbert, TTC chairman, said Friday the accident was the most serious in the commission's road service.

In one of Canada's worst train-bus accidents, 30 passengers were killed in Dorion Que., in 1968.

The TTC is satisfied that the bus driver, Donald Sise, did all he was able to do to prevent the accident and get people off the bus, Mr. Herbert said.

Mr. Sise, a TTC driver for 21 years who received an award for safe driving in 1974, was taken to hospital in shock, the commission chairman said.

He said witnesses say the bus driver got off the bus and tried to flag down the train, which showed been the west 4 miles before stopping. The train was going about 55 m.p.h. when the accident occurred, he said.

Some witnesses said the train approached the crossing at a speed of about 70 m.p.h. The GO Transit spokesman said there would be nothing unusual about a train passing the crossing at that speed.

Police said the driver of the train engine applied his brakes several hundred feet from the crossing as soon as he saw the bus, but was not able to stop.

Australian Tories Win by Landslide

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Former Queensland premier Sir Joh Bjelke-Petersen today conceded Australia's Liberal-Country party today, as returns indicated a landslide victory for Malcolm Fraser's conservative coalition.

Bjelke-Petersen, who campaigned hard for Fraser's Liberal-National Country party coalition might gain up to a dozen additional seats in the House of Representatives, the lower half of the country's bicameral political swing is 45 years.

In Sydney, the Australian Broadcasting Commission predicted with 40 per cent of the votes counted that the coalition was 81 seats in the House and the labor party 36. They reported 10 seats undecided.

Fraser, 45, has been caretaker prime minister since Gough Whitlam was fired a month ago.

Conservatives ousted a Labor government in Australia Nov. 29 as the National party replaced the country's traditional

Farmers Using Newspaper As Bedding for Livestock

OTTAWA (CP) — About 30 farmers in Eastern Ontario have purchased 2,000 bales of shredded newspaper to replace the beds of straw which live-stock have been forced to eat because of a poor feed grain crop.

The company has been using leftovers from printing companies and plans to put large truck trailers at two shopping centres here to collect paper from people who like to see their garbage recycled, he said.

Thursday he intends to meet with a federal agriculture department official to discuss the results of a study on the effect of making newspaper 10 per cent of livestock feed.

Ottawa's physical environment department issued Monday a statement endorsing the scheme but Pollution Probe, which was originally involved, has said it will not make a decision on whether to endorse it until results of the study are made public.

Pollution probe spokesman George Matheson said there is some concern that the newspaper contains unwanted chemicals and heavy metals.

"We're not convinced yet that it's a health problem but we withdrew support until we're sure," he said.

Kee Fox of Canada Salesmart said Monday his company started selling the bales about a month ago after converting a corn shredder and hay baler into a newsprint shredder. The 55 lb. bales sell for $1.25 each.

Jury Suggestion May Alter Image

By MARG HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Prince Edward County there are doubters who wouldn't vote to straighten the leaning tower of Pisa or wire Rodin's scalp into The Thinker as a lamp.

Evidence of local enthusiasm for improvement of the already proven castle with a grand jury report this week recommending carpeting for the floors of the old Prince Edward County court house.

The grand jury's report to Judge Wilfrid S. Lane recommended that the petit jury room should be enlarged panelled, decorated and carpeted and new tables and chairs purchased.

Generously, the jurors suggested that the old table might be kept as an antique for the institution.

The court room was described as lacking in major lustre and it was noted that the main floor should be carpeted and two existing linoleum ramps carpeted as well.

Also it was suggested that the petit jury should be supplied with new chairs to match hard chairs provided.

The old Prince Edward County court room where Sir John A. Macdonald tried his first case was leased this summer by former prime minister John Diefenbaker during his brief visit to Picton.

The Chief considered it an historic landmark of world wide seeing.

When the County as a Class room, a community education program, scheduled a seminar on police procedures at the court house a brief history of the building was provided. It was noted that there have been few changes in the court room since its early days.

The court room with its tiered benches, high ceiling, linoleum floor and curtained windows is a remarkable preservation of the Prince Edward that used to be.

Now a grand jury report is recommending carpets, couches and new benches to screaun "brand new" at the

Obeying the Law Not Much to Ask

By JERRY BROWN
Staff Reporter

Snowmobilers are constantly having to bear the brunt of the attack of winter environmentalists, activists and cross country skiers who are offended by the group's loud avocation, and sometimes this is unfair, but there are times when the complaints are justified.

During the snow removal last week glow drivers said they were worried because of the all-night activities of the snowmobile operators who drove their machines while the street-cleaning operation was taking place, creating a dangerous situation.

Commissioner of public works Arie Hoornweg said it was a serious problem and a dangerous situation that needed correcting, and he was right. The commissioner was not worried about the safety of the municipal employees but rather he was concerned that one of the plows would run over one of the snowmobilers "making mincemeat of of them."

It is a difficult situation that could be rectified if the late-comers attended would join obey the municipal bylaws and perhaps purchase a little self-control.

The municipal bylaw states that snowmobiles are only to be operated within town limits between the hours of 8 a.m. and 11 p.m. Monday-Thursday and up until midnight on Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Additionally, the machines are only to be operated on certain streets and are restricted from major arteries where there is heavy vehicular traffic, to avoid similar dangerous confrontations," with automobiles and trucks.

Not only is late-night use of the vehicles a nuisance to residents trying to get it is dangerous to the operators.

The problem is a difficult one for the police to handle because they are not equipped to pursue the offenders who are giving the sport a bad reputation.

Snowmobiles are a practical form of transportation that can be used by many people to have winter fun, but it begins to become a bit of a nuisance when they inconvenience other citizens.

The problem should be corrected to everyone's satisfaction before the pastime changes from winter enjoyment to a winter tragedy.

Needy Get Top Steer

TORONTO (CP) — The 1,225-pound grand champion steer from the Royal Agricultural Winter Fair will find its way to the tables of Toronto's needy families and homeless men this Christmas, thanks to the Scott Mission and the owners of a Toronto abattoir.

The Scott Mission estimates about 1,600 needy persons will dine on the gift from Bernard, John and Michael De Jonge, who operate Dominion Packers in Toronto and Highland Packers Ltd., in Stouffville, Ont.

The De Jonges will present the animal Wednesday to Rev. Alex Zeldman, director of the downtown Toronto mission.

"We have always given a certain percentage of our profits to charity," Bernard De Jonge said Monday. "This year we thought the steer would be a very practical gift for the less fortunate, the price of meat being what it is."

The De Jonge's paid $21,131— or $17.25 a pound—for the steer, which will be processed into more than 700 pounds of meat for those who will dine in the mission for help this Christmas.

Temperatures Play Key Role

By ROSS HAWTHORNE

Last week we dealt with "light" as a factor in establishing climate profiles for your plants in your home, and the subprofiles that exist within each room. It goes without saying, that every light profile can be altered with the inclusion of fluorescent fixtures; either ceiling hung, on shelves, on the bottoms of tables, in fact anywhere there's a means of wiring and hanging a fixture — (48 inch, 96 inch, 24 inch or 18 inch) — over a flat surface that will hold plants. And most plants — including flowering plants will thrive.

And this week we promised to talk about temperatures.

When we talk temperatures in terms of plants we must realize we are talking about two ranges of temperatures — day temperatures and night temperatures, with the latter particularly crucial in the case of flowering house plants.

And when we talk temperatures we are basically talking about 3 classifications:

1) Low — 12-17 degrees
2) Average — 17-24 degrees
3) High — 24-30 degrees

Now a plant may enjoy average day temperatures of 77-24 degrees but need night temperatures in the low range if they are to prosper, especially flowering plants. Such as these Christmas favorites the cyclamen and azalea. If they are to hold their bloom or be brought back into bloom, they must be given night temperatures as low as 50 to 55 degrees.

Now, of the three factors vital to establishing climate profiles, "temperature" is undoubtedly the most variable and the most difficult to control.

Obviously, the climate profile, over or within a six foot radius of a forced hot air vent or radiator, a cold air return, or an outside door that is used frequently is considerably different than the center of the room, side of that radius. And so along with degrees of temperatures we have married temperature fluctuations to contend with.

And nothing will cause plants to "brown off", lose flowers or buds faster than rapid temperature changes or direct blasts of cold or hot air.

So there are things you can do, such as:

1) Put heat deflectors over hot air vents
2) Shield cold air returns
3) Put trays of water on radiators and let evaporation cool things off.
4) Move your plants just outside of the problem area. Experiment.

And best of all, take the time to know the night and day temperature requirements of each plant you own or plan on buying — before you buy it. And make sure that you can find the proper temperature profiles in the literature that's much close sensed.

Canada Bolsters Its Military Stance

'No Defence Commitment... No Trade Deals' — Ottawa Gets the Message

By JOHN D. HARKINSON

Foreign Affairs Analyst

Thurlow News Service

Former Richardson, Canadian minister of national defence, the shy millionaire from Winnipeg, is in Brussels this week on an important meeting of the defence ministers of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) member nations.

He has gone to it in a stronger position than ever before; a result of the cabinet's agreement to purchase new aircraft and either buy or lease new tanks.

The aircraft are to be 15 highly complex Lockheed Orion Long-Range Patrol Aircraft which will cost the country's taxpayers role both on behalf of Canadian sovereignty protection and North Atlantic submarine spotting now carried out by the 32 terribly old Argus LRPAs.

The tank deal for our 4,500-man force in NATO has not been fully worked out yet. It will be either a complete refurbishment of the older Centurion tanks, or a lease arrangement with the West German defence ministry for its superb 'Leopard heavy land tank.

Now these proposals to modernize the air and land elements of the Canadian Armed Forces have been hitched around for at least five years.

The growing need of our military for new equipment combined to cause massive disinterest in successive Trudeau cabinets and from the prime minister himself; best as they have been on spending huge funds for domestic social and welfare schemes and not on new weapons.

What turned the prime minister around, as he himself admitted "180 degrees," was the refusal of other Western European trading partners, all active NATO member countries, to talk to the Canadians about any kind of trade deals before we had made up our minds to be serious about our long-term NATO role.

And this meant Ottawa being serious about its military. Pressures in Europe and in the North Atlantic, even though the prime minister was a signator of the Helsinki Agreement on detente with the Russians.

All of which called for hard-nosed European diplomacy, what is known in the old guid pre gos, 'you supply something and we will supply something else to make a balanced agreement), to bring Trudeau and his cabinet around.

It also took the on-going world recession to do it, with Mr. Trudeau's already well-published if elusive concept of a "contractual link" with the European Common Market countries, as the basis for increasing our lagging exports with Europe.

With the U.S. economy our largest customer by far, in a deeper recession than any of the major European ones, Canada would look to the common market for keeping up her export volume.

But the prime minister was clearly put in his place by the self-same Europeans and made the long-delayed decision on new weapons for a Canadian military establishment still tied to a European defence commitment.

The Europeans told him straight out that a trading role for Canada in Europe meant a military one for her too.

Bearing the brunt of the delay, as well as growing morale problems in his own department., was the quiet defence minister, say "freedom fighter" in the cabinet like hard-liner Otto Lang and old pals of the prime minister like Gerard Pelletier and the declining Jean Marchand.

But as Don Richardson aide said, the decision to replace the old Argus LRPAs and get new tanks for the army in Europe has made a new man of the defence minister and boosted spirit among our military as it had not been so lifted throughout, for them, these troubled 70s.

Little Has Changed

Quite a long time — fifteen years or thereabouts — has elapsed since then Bank Governor James Coyne uttered his famous line about Canadians "living grandly beyond their means."

Like C. D. Howe's "What's a Million," it was worthy of any collection of famous sayings by Canadians, and such a book would make interesting reading should anyone get around to putting it together.

Little has changed of course. Mr. Coyne was bank governor in the days of the Diefenbaker government. There were problems then with defence spending, over Arrow fighter-jets which cost a lot of promise but the program was scrapped nonetheless. Problems at that time too over U.S. Bomarc missiles which long since then have been phased out too, and problems of spending generally which led to Mr. Coyne's confrontation with the Conservative government and especially Finance Minister Donald Fleming, and finally to his resignation.

His words on national extravagance of course have struck, although Mr. Coyne himself, so far as we are aware, has not been heard from since.

What would be say to a situation today that has not changed at all save for the fact the inflationary situation has multiplied out of hand and neither government nor economists seem able to do much about it. Ottawa of course is making a valiant effort — and a long last — and it can make its anti-inflation measures stick the country might see some results in a couple of years or so. Such an eventuality we shall have the chance at things move along. But meantime, where are you Mr. Coyne and what do you think of things today?

'No' to Park Expansion

The defence needs recently outlined by Ottawa costing a billion dollars and more represent expenditures which the country needs for its own defence and for commitments to western defence.

This expenditure is inescapable, even in these days of supposed restraint, but what are we to make of federal plans to increase Mallorytown Landing Park to 30 square miles from its present dimensions of a mere 1.6 square miles, at a cost of $38 million.

The park is located on the scenic highway between Gananoque and Brockville overlooking island-studded waters with cottages therefore on shore that once numbered among their owners Arthur Nicholas Montserrat (The Cruel Sea and others).

If the project doesn't scare the taxpayer — and it should in these times it has certainly roused residents and cottage owners along the river. Fear of expropriation has resulted in no fewer than 700 of them forming an association to oppose it.

Details are lacking, but it is clear the government is contemplating large scale expansion along the river. There is likely a need for expanded park facilities there but whether of such gauge dimensions, in an area of extensive private ownership, and in these economically - strained times, is another matter.

Drivers Need Lesson

When it comes to winter driving it is a continual source of wonder, not to say anxiety, to observe cars moving at too fast a clip having regard to the conditions.

Returning from Toronto at a luxurious rate of 80 m.p.h. in the middle of Tuesday's storm, a Belleville driver had plenty of time to observe the consequences of bravado on that part of others. A number of times cars which had passed him at about 55 m.p.h. were observed stranded off the highway some miles farther on.

It happens all the time in such conditions, but of course it need not. Probably two factors are at work: the driver is thoroughly confident of his performance or, himmature or both. Or he is in a hurry and takes his chances at higher speeds. The trouble is, these people are risking not only their own lives but those of others.

Whatever the howls of protest over reduced speed and mandatory seatbelt use in the new year, it cannot come too soon for those who watch with mounting concern death and injury on the highways. Whatever the reason it should pay off in a greater degree of safety.

Check Christmas Toys for Safety

Health for All

Toys under the Christmas tree. Sheer joy for the kiddies. But they can be trouble, too.

Almost every day according to statistics, a youngster choles to death on an object that is many cases has broken off a toy. A baby swallows bits of a stuffed rabbit pulled apart. Or bites a bead ripped of a rattle. Vapors explode in chemistry kits. Just a few years ago, estimates were that over 3,000 children were killed each year while playing with toys.

A Commission was set up to check toys and other products. But — imagine — 5,000 completely new toys are introduced each year. The job is enormous. Many established companies voluntarily have new toys tested for safety.

Choking on bits of toys is one problem. Another is swallowing something the wrong way". Instead of going down the throat into the stomach, the object travels a different route. It slips down into the windpipe and into a breathing passage in the lung. Then a breathing passage can cause a disease called bronchopneumonia. Removal of the object is essential.

Toddlers can reach up for all those peculiars on display at Christmas time — candy — and candy — and stuff them in their mouth or up their nose. Either way, the object can land in their lungs and cause trouble.

Christmas Seals help fight a wide assortment of troublemakers in the lungs. Answer your Christmas Seal letter today. Help to help win the fight against emphysema, TB, chronic bronchitis, cigarette smoking and air pollution. It's A Matter of Life and Breath. And buy safe toys for the kids.

It is that sitteth upon the circle of the earth, and the inhabitants thereof are as grasshoppers: that stretcheth out the heavens as a curtain, and spreadeth them as a tent to dwell in." Isaiah 40:21,22

This shows us how the world is created and who created it. It is a reminder of how big God is and how little we are. Further it points out who the believers friend is and a warning to the unbeliever as to who he is dealing with.

Auto-littered Landscapes

The Globe and Mail

Until the Ontario Ministry of Transport and Communications showed all ears to the ground a possibility that Joseph Zaigh might have to pay a $1.50 bill for parking at Toronto International Airport's Terminal 1. It was reasonable that the ministry should soften its position, since Mr. Zaigh's prolonged absence was the result of being drafted like four million others into the armed forces.

Still the episode does turn one's thoughts to cars that are abandoned all over the landscape, one suspects, fewer escape than that offered by Mr. Zaigh, and often in better settings than the parking lot at Terminal 1. Is there any reason why their presence in a rural by-way, at the edge of a field, or at the foot of a cliff, should be regarded with intimacy?

It has been calculated that as many as half-a-million automobiles are quietly decaying over the provincial landscape. Many, surely, by licence plate, engine serial number, or process can be associated with their last owner. Often when treated as packed vehicles subject to a certain delay or weekly charge.

The process could help in the removal of the unfraceable ones, and would certainly accelerate the response of those with identifiable owners to arrange for a decent burial in a scrapyard.

Worthy of Their Hire

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

Mr. L.F. Haines ("Anyone for Democracy?" Dec 10, 1975) is to be commended for his eloquent defence of the bank workers who exercised their democratic right (and duty) to return to work during the recent mail strike. His comments go straight to the heart of the matter, for the civil rights of the people concerned are certainly jeopardized by the odious intimidation exercised by the union president with his policy of obstruction. It is said that a group supposedly aspiring to democratic principles is as intolerant of dissenting views.

However, there is perhaps an effective way of dealing with the matter. The Postmaster General stated publicly after the strike settlement that he would properly afterwards invoke in cases of intimidation of any kind which were brought to his attention. Accordingly, in view of the specific containing the contentions quotation from the union president, I hope, for the sake of the perpetrators of this injustice, that they have been identified. Mr. Mackasey's firmness in dealing with the post-strike tactics is well known.

P.W. STEVENSON

Champion of Free Speech?

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

It's a funny thing, but professional labor lawyers become the champion of free speech or so they have claimed. Therefore it was disconcerting to say the least to hear Mr. Yetsenan of the local union, with his fine thinly-veiled threats against union members of our council who "dared" to voice an opinion on the recent CUPE strike.

Who does Mr. Yetsenan think he is to criticize the public comments in relation to members of council who voiced an opinion on the strike, which of his union show him to be the Canadian public to be ridiculous. For his information, council members do not ask any member of the general public for his opinion, but are chosen by the preposterous demands of his selfish and un-Canadian union what they thought of his organization's antics. He will find out his "associates" number considerably more than our members of council.

I agree with the same brush in the teacher strike in Toronto and the threat of a general strike walkout by the teachers' organization. We contend that these dedicated "professionals" are now telling us they will defy the law. With this example our students can be sure that they are taught by the right people as to how to behave in the real world, how to make a mockery of it.

Some of the organizations and associations currently holding the Canadian public to ransom should choke on the words "Oh Canada, we stand on guard for thee". They really mean "Oh Canada, we rob and plunder thee".

WILLIAM C. HOCKLEY.

Cost to Canada of Peacekeeping... Cancelled UN Parley... Olympics Security

By RICHARD JACKSON

Ottawa Correspondent

OTTAWA :— Save for your horror of terrorism, perhaps you have not been more than mildly emotionally involved in the Arab-Israeli conflict.

Except that it has been costing you money.

Money for Middle East peacekeeping and money lost in the cancellation of the 30th session of United Nations conference on crimes at Toronto last August because of the active involvement of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Now it is going to cost you more.

A lot more, maybe as much as $26 million.

The big place, $26 million is being budgeted for security at next summer's Montreal Olympics (assuming they're held) — and $6 million plus for staging the UN Habitat Conference in Vancouver next spring.

The Vancouver conference which even the internationally-minded feds in Ottawa admit will serve as a platform for Third World abuse of Canada and other free nations — is the most interesting.

Or, to be a bigot about it, fascinating.

(A bigot, in Ottawa's innocent eyes, is to be a taxpayer who objects to being pushed around by those who rip him off.)

Irritating not just because the exercise is a humiliating overture before the arrogant Third World UN majority is going to cost Vancouver taxpayers $6 million which somehow they ought to be breathlessly enough to deal of to Ottawa.

But irritating because all of us are getting stuck by the UN for chief part of the bill — and for bringing the PLO delegation, including their "observers," to Vancouver, housing, feeding and entertaining them.

They decided that by a Third World majority vote, in Canada ,Habitating, at the UN General Assembly the other day.

Libya — for which we spell out a few million annually in foreign aid — attacked Canada's leadership as an indication that the PLO was unwelcome in Vancouver.

The all-rich Libyans — they're members of the ripoff "Middle East OPEC oil cartel — knew that Vancouver didn't want the UN conference or the PLO.

Now about the big bill for the Olympics, the $50 million that security's going to cost.

Of that, External Defence Minister Richardson, $25 million is for the cost of 10,000 members of the Canadian Armed Forces.

And another $25 million, Olympic officials have let it be known, will be for the RCMP, Montreal Metro and Quebec Provincials.

Why such a security army at such a cost?

The answer came the other day in the House of Commons from Solicitor General Warren Allmand.

"We must be prepared," he announced, "for a Munich-type of thing at Montreal."

What about "Solicitous General" Warren meant but, being of understanding heart, couldn't bring himself to say, of course, was the PLO.

For wasn't it the PLO that butchered the athletes at the Munich Olympics, murdering the innocents in bed, Arabs and other airports, Munich, Britain, Americans and German passenger jets?

So in Montreal you are going to shell out $50 million — and that could be only start-up — to watching the PLO, while in Vancouver it is going to cost you to keep 'em comfy.

On this, as on other Third World issues, Al MacEachen's cookie-pushers are so schizo it would figure to be put-upon taxpayers to send in a shrink.

Petroleum Takeover Approved

OTTAWA (CP) — The cabinet, following a foreign investment review board recommendation, approved today the takeover of a petroleum properties in Alberta by U.S.-owned Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas Co. Ltd., of Calgary.

The board, which screens foreign takeovers of Canadian companies, also approved a takeover of Golden Triangle Oils Ltd. of Kitchener, Ont., a retail car wash-gasoline firm, by British-controlled BP Oil Ltd. of Montreal.

It gave the go-ahead to U.S.-owned Farnco Construction Canada Ltd. of Hamilton to acquire control of Walker Vacuum Service Ltd. of Welland, Ont., which manufactures a mobile industrial vacuum cleaner and cleans industrial furnaces.

Another takeover proposal was rejected on the grounds that it would not meet the test of significant benefit. The proposed takeover by British-controlled L. Laverie Fils S.A. of Paris of Montreal Tobacco Manufacturing Co. and its subsidiary Compagnie Tabs Ca., both of Montreal.

The takeover by Hudson's Bay, controlled by Continental Oil Corp. of Connecticut, will help Hudson's develop oil and gas properties of Saipetro of Canada Ltd., Calgary, in which Saipetro project valued at a total $15 million, an estimated $11 million from Hudson's Bay.

Minister Calls Meeting

TORONTO (CP) — Education Minister Thomas Wells has invited the chairman and chief executive officers of all provincial school boards in a meeting on finances next Thursday, it was announced Friday.

The announcement said the meeting will discuss the financial picture for the coming year.

Treasurer Darcey McKeough said Thursday in the legislature that the province has earmarked $1.7 billion for education in 1976-77.

McKeough Won't Bend

TORONTO (CP) — Municipal spokesmen saying they are cornered by a grip of inflation, tried Friday without success to wrench more money from Ontario Treasurer Darcy McKeough.

At the monthly meeting of the committee, the hon. Members' committee, Mr. McKeough said that his proposed eight-per-cent increase in provincial grants to municipalities for 1976-77 may involve a sharp rise in property taxes.

But Mr. McKeough, who originally proposed an increase of only five in his pre cent, said the municipalities will have to tighten their belts.

Election Report Released

TORONTO (CP) — A report prepared by the Association of Municipalities of Ontario calling for changes in the Municipal Elections Act was released Friday.

The report called for the removal of the words "British subject" from the qualifications for voters. The proposal says all voters should be Canadian citizens.

Other recommendations called for a reduction in nomination fees to $100 per council and a change to allow the province the power to take action in the event of an emergency at election time.

TORONTO (CP) — Arthur Maloney, Ontario's ombudsman, pledged Friday to help municipal governments and the provincial regime.

He said he will set up a special directorate in his office to handle problems in rural problems, especially those involving government bureaucracy and red tape.

Grain Bill Criticized

Three Bills Approved But Fourth Is Stalled

OTTAWA (CP) — The Conservatives gave its final blessing to three bills of government legislation and gave second reading to a fourth Friday after stalling a government bill aimed at stabilizing incomes of western grain farmers.

Progressive Conservative and New Democratic Party members said the stabilization bill is beyond compensation and should be changed.

"It's completely beyond me," said Les Benjamin (NDP—Regina-Lake Centre). "You try to understand it and you end up completely confused."

Alvin Hamilton (Qu'Appelle-Moose Mountain), former agriculture minister in the Diefenbaker government, said earlier that no more than 30 per cent of western farmers understand it.

Arnold Peters (NDP—Timiskaming) read one sentence of the proposed legislation. It took him more than three minutes.

He said the government should shelve the bill to get the view of farmers attending a national conference here.

Douglas Neil (PC—Moose Jaw) said he sent copies of the bill to farm groups and municipal governments for comment. He said he received no answers because nobody could understand it.

The government moved to get jaw the debate and the Conservatives agreed to three bills and gave another approval in principle.

Given final reading were:

—A bill to increase the interest rate on government securities from an average of four per cent to seven per cent. Sale of the securities also would be discontinued.

—A bill to suspend the definition of certain terms in the railroads and providing limited compensation for displaced railroads.

—A bill to make initial payments to agricultural producers based on the difference between market prices and marketing costs.

Given second reading—referred to principal stage—was a bill to wind up the Halifax Relief Fund, set up to compensate victims of the Halifax explosion which killed 1,800 persons.

The government says the stabilization bill will guarantee farmers a minimum price for wheat, oats, barley, rye, flaxseed and rapeseed based on the average of the previous five years.

Another opposition complaint is that regional differences are not taken into account in the bill. For example, one township may be hit by a plague of grasshoppers that misses a neighboring township.

Next week the MPs are expected to pass legislation enabling the Canadian Wheat Board to give assistance in Time of Need to advertisers in Time and Reader's Digest.

The government also wants legislation passed to change the Unemployment Insurance Act to have banks and other lending institutions put more money in low-cost housing.

Cafik To Help Time, Digest

OTTAWA (CP) — Backbench MP Norman Cafik says he will make a last-minute attempt in the Commons next week to save the Canadian editions of Time magazine and Reader's Digest.

Mr. Cafik (L—Ontario) served notice Friday he will seek a two-year delay in the planned Jan. 1 legislation affecting the tax status of advertisers in the two publications.

He said he will also seek a reduction to 67 per cent from 80 per cent in the Canadian editorial content now required by Revenue Minister Bud Cullen.

Mr. Cafik said in an interview that "33, 49 or more" Liberals have serious doubts about the tax legislation but only about a dozen of them remain in the party to support his amendments.

The government is threatening to keep the Commons sitting through Christmas Dec. 19 if Christmas adjournment date to obtain third and final reading of the legislation.

Davis Adamant

No Anti-Inflation Board in Ontario

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Premier William Davis said Friday that his government has no intention of setting up a provincial anti-inflation board.

But his minority Progressive Conservative government seems likely to survive a non-confidence vote next week even though the leaders of both opposition parties have spoken in favor of such a board.

The premier told the legislature in a speech laced with barbs at the opposition parties that Ontario residents do not want another election right now. He was speaking before a gallery packed with Tory candidates from the Sept. 18 election and many campaign officials.

Liberal amendment to the throne speech earlier in the session called for condemnation of the government, primarily because of its failure to set up an anti-inflation board.

Mr. Davis said any provincial board would wreck the federal government's anti-inflation program and destroy the chances of making the federal program work.

Opposition Leader Stephen Lewis has spoken in favor of a provincial board but said in an interview after the premier's speech Friday that his party was not prepared to bring down the government on a single issue.

It would require a combined vote of the 38 New Democrats and 36 Liberals in the legislature to defeat the 51 Progressive Conservatives.

In his speech, Mr. Davis accused Mr. Nixon of attempting to give Ontario a general election as a Christmas present and said such a move would be "height of folly."

Preliminary Public Meetings of the Royal Commission on Electric Power Planning

Ontario Hydro welcomes the appointment of the Royal Commission on Electric Power Planning to inquire into the conceptual aspects of long range planning of the electric power system for the Province. Our "Preliminary Submission to the Royal Commission on Electric Power Planning" was forwarded to the Royal Commission in May, 1975. It briefly describes the present electric power system, the system expansion projects seen as required on a priority basis, the public participation procedures as developed to date and some possible issues for discussion during the public hearings of the Royal Commission. This submission is available free of charge from your local Ontario Hydro Office.

If you desire further information concerning Ontario Hydro's contribution to the inquiry by the Royal Commission, your correspondence should be addressed to the:

Busy Signals Buzz, Bell is All Tied Up

It's really quite touching.

Two children playing in the park. Tennis partners leaping for the same ball in affectionate ardor. An old man, strolling along, alone. Lots of nice moods.

It's Bell Canada's advertisement which urges you to use your telephone to gain a little human warmth and affection via long distance.

It's called getting the "long distance feeling."

Last Sunday, I tried to get the long distance feeling for eight hours. From one in the afternoon to nine at night. I dialed a far-away friend no less than 200 times. About one-third of these times a busy signal prevented me from even getting as far as parroting my telephone number at the sound of the signal (this is called dialing) and the rest of the time a busy signal followed directly in the heels of my number. After a couple of hours, I called the operator and asked her to try. She did and couldn't get through either. Complaining about my fruitless efforts didn't improve her in the least. She said the operators are just as frustrated and wished everyone would complain to the business office. The explanation, of course, is that in Toronto and Quebec, 10 and a ½ off discount for part of the day and a 44 discount for the evening. That keeps all Ontario circuits busy and that means that even if you're calling Moose Jaw, your little call won't make it out of Ontario because of the busy circuits.

You can't really blame Bell if they're too successful but it seems a little silly for them to advertise something they've already oversold.

And as for that long distance feeling on Sunday, at least, it resembles nothing so much as acid indigestion.

There's an old saw that what you are is what you eat; it may be replaced by a new maxim, one that's receiving growing respect from the scientific community: what you don't eat is what you eat.

Cancer specialists, the New York Times Service reports, are finding increasing evidence that ingredients of the daily diet may cause, indirectly or directly, half of all cancers among women and 30 per cent of all cancers among men.

A report published last week indicates that nutritional factors (diets high in animal fat, excessive alcohol intake, deficiencies of vitamins A and C, certain food additives, and natural and man-made contaminants of food) are related to the development of cancer of the colon, esophagus, breast, liver and uterus.

So far, according to the report, nutritional factors set the stage for more direct carcinogens, enhance the activity of carcinogens or act as carriers for carcinogens. Other factors, like animal fat, may change the body's hormone pattern, increasing the output of cancer-causing hormones. Some foods contain cancer-causing substances like pesticides, others contain food additives and trace elements from the soil.

Before all of the answers are in and speculation becomes fact — or becomes dangerous — what can you do?

According to the New York Times Dr. Ernst Wynder, an epidemiologist, recommends that a thoroughly dietary modifications could be made that could reduce the risk of cancer. He recommends the adoption of a prudent diet that contains less animal fat and more fibrous foods.

In addition to anniversary cards from friends and relatives the couple has received congratulations from Queen Elizabeth, Ontario Premier William Davis, George Hees MP Prince Edward-Hastings and James Taylor, MPP Prince Edward-Lennox.

Picton Couple Celebrates 70 Years of Marriage

PICTON — When Bernard Morris and his bride-to-be Miss Myrtle Rykman were married on December 11, 1906, the couple relied on a rented livery rig to get them to the church on time.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris of 39 Hill Street who celebrate their 70th wedding anniversary today, earlier this week recalled that there were "only one or two cars" in all of Picton when they were married at the home of the bride's parents.

The wedding ceremony was performed in Bloomfield United Church by Reverend D.S. Herod.

The Morrises observed that honeymoons were not common in the early 1900's and as newlyweds they immediately settled down to married life at a Hall's Corners farm.

In the years that followed they contributed to farm in Hillier township and Cherry Valley and in 1929 moved to Picton.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris, both in their late eighties, remain active in community card parties and together maintain their Hill Street home with its

Extravagant Gifts: How to Spend a Lot

Anyone can find smart, inexpensive Christmas gifts to give that reflect not only good taste but economy. But it takes a very special flare to spend a lot of money.

If you need to learn Secord, for example, it would be easy to buy their half pound assortment of chocolates for $1.75. You need gumma however, it walk up to the counter and order the five pound box at $14.75.

A favorite girl might easily receive an inexpensive silver charm at $1.95. But how many gift buyers have the guts to spend $80 on a gold charm? You can buy it at People's Jewellers and it says "mother" in French.

At Shoppers' Drug Mart, you can buy an inexpensive little e chine pomander for $3.98. Why not go all the way and get the $13.95 model? It's guaranteed to last 30 years. If you like china things, by the way, you can get a royal Doulton dog for a mere $7.98. On the other hand, if you've got their large figure at a Spanish museum is at Stroud's for $130.

Barbee's will send a simple Christmas arrangement for $28 but you can also order a magnificent $59 wreath sent anywhere via FTD.

If Canadiana is your thing, try buying Your Loving Anne, by Judith Tryz. It's about the settlement of Hastings County. You can have it for a modest $2.95 at James Text. But if books are more appealing, you can have Robbf Beer's Th Everything There is a Season, for $48.95.

Books are big gift items for kids too, and while you could buy a Dress-volume paperback set of Anne of Green Gables for only $20, why not splurge on a complete set of Beatrix Potter's Peter Rabbit for $31.75?

Same time or other, of course, you're going to have to pay for all this extravagance and to write the cheques you can pick up a spiral bill crunch cause for only 25 cents. But wouldn't you like a lot cheaper if you bought yourself a special set of pens and pencils for that job? Try the gold Schaeffer set at James Text for $110.

Ann Landers

Cheap Employer Cheats Sitter

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a 16-year-old girl who has been babysitting your column for a long time. I believe you are very good at advice. Now I have a problem and I hope you can help me.

I've been babysitting for three people who are friends of my parents. They have four very active children. About four months ago I told the woman I thought I deserved an increase from $6 cash an hour to $7 cash. She said she'd compromise and pay me $6 cash.

I babysat for two other families and received 75 cents an hour from them. I really need the money but decided not to make an issue of it with the first lady because of the family friendship.

Three weeks ago, The Great Compromiser needed a sitter on short notice. I HAD another commitment. She begged me to find her another sitter. I did. She paid me 75 cents an hour. The following week I sat for her and she paid me 75 cents an hour. I am getting hurt by her attitude.

I know the woman likes me and so do her children. I always do a good job and am completely reliable.

Why should she pay me 75 cents an hour? Please answer these questions and give me some advice. — Short-Changed

Dear Short: Would you pay a sitter 75 cents an hour if you never got paid but five dollars a week? Well this is the way Mrs. Compromise has it figured.

When you make it clear that you are no longer available at the old price she will either get the new price or get someone who will pay $1.25. 75 cents an hour.

Dear Ann Landers: A week before the holidays on a previous that has griped me for four years running.

Certain members of my family give homemade clothing for gifts at Christmas time. I'm not a snob about homemade gifts. Some of them I receive are very well. But I hate to receive a gift with a note in the box that says, "Hands only a hour" or, "All you have to do is fit this around your neck."

Those "last-minute touches" don't add anything from ten to ten months. For example, last Christmas my mother-in-law made bedspreads for each of her two children. They needed to be shortened "slightly."

Almost a year has passed and I still haven't gotten around to it. How much better it would have been had Grandma just chosen something. Anything.

Please say a word or two in your column about sending unfinished gifts, Ann. I'm sure this problem is not mine alone. — Thinks It Or Don't Send It

Dear F.I.: I'm with you. Here's my message.

Dear Readers: When you need money you could get

Brown Beer Bottle Now Marks Canada

The Canadian Press

What is more distinctly Canadian than the maple leaf, moose or beaver and more amusing than the Grey Cup?

Gerald Hambling and Gerald Lampert say it's the 11-ounce, amber-brown, standard Canadian beer bottle.

The Great Canadian Beer Book, a collection of poems, stories and little-known facts about beer edited by Mr. Hambling and Mr. Lampert, leaves the impression that the truly patriotic citizen respects the Queen, the flag and a glass of cold beer.

And not surprisingly, it is not as hard to swallow.

Highly graphic and sprinkled throughout with anecdotes, trivia and graffiti collected from the watercress of Canadian pubs, the book contains a lot of information—most of it serious—but all of it funny.

It tells of the origin of famous beer labels, introduces Uncle Ben, of Uncle Ben's Beer, whose picture, it says, is "seen many times daily than that of the Queen" on the dollar bill, and suggests a few beer recipes for beer coffee cakes and six-pak stu.

It reveals that the smallest brewery in Canada is located in Dawson Crossing after building, that 1.3 per cent of the total Canadian work force is involved with the production or distribution of beer and that one bottle of beer has fewer calories than an equivalent amount of milk.

But even more impressive than the facts and figures are the descriptions of people and atmospheres found in Canadian taverns.

James Barber, in a story about Uncle Ben, says the beer is far more than a place for social gatherings and drunken gibberish.

"Behind the smoke, in the bottom of the glasses, there is more raw energy than most management teams have ever seen. The pub is the working man's think tank."

And Marian Engel, telling of her first encounter with beer says: "There's none of this damned pretension about beer wines and getting the brandy warmed by hand in the right kind."

The Great Canadian Beer Book touches on historic events such as the prohibition years and modern happenings like Doctoberfest, Canada's biggest yearly beer bash.

Finally, after all the statistics, quotations, recipes, and bonus, the book offers this piece of philosophical advice which it describes as an ancient Canadian beer patriotism.

"Laugh and the world laughs with you. Cry and you buy your own beer."

The Great Canadian Beer Book, edited by Gerald Hambling and Gerald Lampert; 224 pages; $6.95; McClelland and Stewart.

Teachers Remain On Strike
200,000 Students Left Idle

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Contract disputes involving teachers in Ontario and Quebec that disrupted classes for more than 200,000 students were among strikes across Canada this week.

About 7,000 secondary school teachers, mostly from Toronto, held what they described as a wake and funeral for collective bargaining in front of the Ontario legislature Thursday to protest the anti-inflation board's ruling on wage offers to 8,900 striking Metropolitan Toronto secondary school teachers.

The federal board ruled last week that the 30.5-per-cent salary increase offered by teachers by the Metro board of education is excessive.

The 75,000-member Quebec Teachers Federation called it Dec. 1 following a show-of-hands strike vote Nov. 28.

More than 400 miners employed at Stelh Steel Mines Ltd. near Newcastle, N.B., rallied a one-year contract this week to replace the former agreement that expired Aug. 31.

In Winnipeg, about 120 employees of Air Canada's finance branch walked off their jobs Tuesday in a one-day protest against stalled contract negotiations.

Agreements giving about 3,700 federal technical and social services employees wage increases of 14.5 per cent over 15 months were signed in Ottawa Monday.

Police in Aylmer, Que., near Ottawa, are calling for a provincial conciliator after contract negotiations with the municipality broke down this week.

Shouts for Help Ignored

CHICAGO (AP) — Scores of motorists not only ignored shouts of help from two service station attendants who had been bound and robbed Friday but they helped themselves to gasoline at nine unattended pumps, police said.

Curtis McDowell, manager of the station, one of the busiest in the Chicago area, told police three gunmen walked into the station early Friday and bound the two 19-year-old attendants with electric cords.

McDowell estimated the robbers, wearing green army field jackets and carrying pistols, took $1,000 in cash from a safe and $200 worth of cigarettes.

"They were there for about 45 minutes or so," said McDowell.

"While two of them were inside, a third manned the pumps and pocketed the customers' money.

"When the three men left, motorists began arriving—we have a lot of factory workers that early in the morning as well as the usual stream of business. They began helping themselves. They pumped themselves about 400 gallons at least as I can figure it now."

WEWS SIZE UP

Two sidecuts, Michael Fry and Kenneth Martin, said in an interview that they would have an I per in a room off the main office.

"I managed to crawl up to the front when the robbers left," said Harris. "I got up to I could see out the windows. I saw people pumping gas into their cars. I shouted, 'Help! Help! We've been robbed.' They just looked and kept pumping.

"Several of them came in. One man came in with $2 to pay for his gas. He looked at me and I said, 'Man, until you get the police.' He put the money on the counter, took his change, grabbed a bunch of cigarettes and left me that help was on its way. Then he returned to his car, filled it up with gas and drove away."

Police said they finally were summoned by an unidentified customer.

Cafik Acquitted

OTTAWA (CP) — MP Norman Cafik (L—Ontario) was acquitted in provincial court Friday of assaulting his landlord with a broom.

Judge Robert Hutton ruled Mr. Cafik did not use excessive force in ejecting landlord Lawrier Noel from the Cafik residence.

Evidence was that Mr. Noel refused to leave Mr. Cafik's home despite several requests to do so.

Mr. Noel then went to the Cafik backyard where he used scissors to cut down clothesline which he said were damaging the bark of trees.

While Mr. Noel was cutting the clotheslines, Mr. Cafik attempted to stop him by hitting him with a broom.

"I wasn't afraid of the broom ... and the blows didn't hurt," Mr. Noel told the court.

In dismissing the charge, Judge Hutton said an individual is entitled to use reasonable force to protect his private property.

Bible Is Hard To Overlook

THE BOOK ON THE SHELF

by

Dr. Carsons C. Smith

It is easy to neglect some books. But it is impossible for the Bible to slip out of circulation, even if you put it on the shelf and turn your back on it.

For instance, nobody can go through life without using the figures of speech that come out the Good Book. A helpful person is "a good samaritan". A contemptible individual is "a thorn in the flesh". An indifferent audience makes a speaker wonder about the value of "casting pearls before swine."

Moreover, writers draw heavily on the Bible. Without it there would have been no Negro spirituals. Delete its influence from the plays of T.S. Eliot and the historical writings of Winston Churchill, and their works would be sharply altered. Shakespeare drew on the language of Scripture.

It is late in the game—too late in the game—as far as our culture is concerned, to neglect the Bible. Centuries ago the wisdom and the insight of the Book of books was planted in the soil of our civilization. We have been reaping the harvest ever since.

For example, what would Christmas be without Holy Writ? The second Sunday in Advent was long since designated as "Universal Bible Sunday". A lesson for that occasion begins, "In many and various ways God spoke of old to our fathers by the prophets; but in these last days he has spoken to us by a Son, whom he appointed the heir of all things." (Hebrews 1:1-2)

The Ten Commandments remain the basis of our common law. Ther Sermon on the Mount remains the ultimate in God's expectation focused on his children.

Jesus once said, "Is not this why you are wrong, that you know neither the scriptures nor the power of God?"

Parents who get their children out to hockey practice, but do not begin to get them out to Sunday School, are preparing a lie for the same predicament.

Moreover, the decisions of so many leaders show their abysmal ignorance of the truths in Holy Writ. By ignoring the Bible they are making their own worst enemies. They are a menace-to society.

Witnesses Persecuted In Africa

Thousands of Jehovah's Witnesses are being persecuted in Central Africa, says Fred Jensen, city overseer of the Belleville Kingdom Hall and congregations of Jehovah's Witnesses.

"Starting Aug. 15, more than 34,000 Jehovah's Witnesses from Malawi who fled as refugees to Mozambique in 1972 became of increasing concern were forced to return to Malawi and now experience brutal persecution again," said Mr. Jensen.

"All of this because of their refusal to join a political party," he said.

Dr. H. Kamuzu, life president of Malawi, recently instructed police to round up Jehovah's Witnesses and put them in detention camps, said Mr. Jensen.

Lonsdale Residents Petition County to Keep Control of Road

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Controversy has been pricking the outward serenity of Lonsdale's picturesque precincts.

The problem befalling the Tyendinaga Township hamlet — a showcase community of period limestone architecture — zeroed into the public spotlight at Hastings County council this week.

The result was the upset of council's road committee's plan for a change in the county road system.

Core of the controversy involves the county road which bridges the Salmon River through the centre of the rustic community.

Earliest this year the committee held a meeting in Lonsdale to discuss plans for a new road and bridge scheme.

Second thoughts were prompted after the meeting. The council learned there was a bridge on a township road a mile west. A third bridge also crossed the river three miles east at Kingsford.

The result: The committee decided to take over the Waddingham bridge, and turn over the Lonsdale route to the township.

It even had an authorizing bylaw ready for council's approval this week.

Then another Lonsdale delegation showed up in opposition.

The trouble, claimed delegation spokesman Leon McGuinness, was that the present road with its sharp curves and hills needs realignment. If it reverted to Tyendinaga, the township could never afford the cost of a straighter, safer road.

The present road — used daily by school buses — posed a "dangerous situation."

He claimed the committee had heard only one side of the story — from those opposed to a new road alignment, and who were fairly recent arrivals in the hamlet.

"Most of the people are opposing it are retired people or are in business for themselves. They don't have to get up for work in the morning. They livelihood depend on it."

Reev. Gordon Wilmer, of Sidney Township and roads committee chairman, said there had been no reaction at the August meeting — either from those wanting the new road or from township councillors. Subsequently, Tyendinaga councillors didn't show for further discussion with the committee.

Because of impressions at the August meeting and the presence of the Waddingham bridge, the committee considered specifying $220,000 at Lonsdale "a lot of money." Property acquisition also posed difficulties and expensive expropriation, said Reeve Wilmer.

But Reeve Leonard Wales of Tyendinaga, said his councillors were opposed to the committee's plans for switching county roads.

"The present road is "dangerous" and would cost his municipality "an awful lot of money" for maintenance, especially in winter.

The bylaw exchanging the Waddingham crossing for the Lonsdale road would not have been effective until September 1976. The intention by then, was to upgrade the Lonsdale bridges before reverting them to the township.

However, council voted 7-10 against the bylaw.

Station's Future Clouded

Canadian Pacific Railway has decided its vacant station building in Belleville cannot be converted into a restaurant.

As a result, city council Monday will be asked to pass a resolution which says it has no objection to demolition of the building.

The possibility of converting the station was raised last April when CP Rail sought demolition approval.

On council's agenda is a letter from CP Rail's. It says an engineering inspection has shown it would not be "economically viable" to keep the building and change it to a restaurant.

Also on council's agenda is a bylaw which would increase charges to $25 for pure-bred kennel operations and charges $13 for each additional female dog in a household. The rest of the current fee schedule would remain unchanged.

Reserve Incident In Court

Michael Mlnaric will appear before Judge Russell C. Hooper in Hastings County Court here Friday to plead to a charge of causing a police officer with an explosive substance with intent to do bodily harm.

Mlnaric, who resided at RR 1, Deseronto at the time of the incident, is charged that on or about Dec. 31, 1974 on the Tyendinaga Reserve, he threw an explosive substance upon provincial police constable Lynn Acres with intent to do bodily harm.

A two-part preliminary hearing on March 6 and 7 in provincial court here concluded Mlnaric for trial.

Suspect In Court Monday

Terry Arnold Goodrich, 21, of RR 3, Brighton will appear before Judge Russell C. Hooper in Hastings County Court here Monday on charges of robbery and attempted robbery.

Trenton police say the charges were laid following an investigation into two incidents in Trenton on Oct. 30, 1974.

Police say two men threatened J. A. G. Walker, owner of Walker Food Variety and Meat at 98 West Dundas St. in Trenton with a knife but were forced to flee after Walker also displayed a knife.

Less than 30 minutes later, two men escaped with more that $740 from Rist's Handy Stand at 118 Front St. in Trenton where three employees were threatened at knifepoint, police say.

A charge of robbery laid against one of the men involved in the incidents has already been disposed of at the provincial court level.

Corke Says Subdivision Standards Need Review

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Mayor Ben Corke said Friday city council must soon reconsider Belleville's residential and subdivision standards if homes are to be made available to families living on "modest incomes."

Mayor Corke made the comment at the annual Christmas meeting of the Quinte and District Real Estate Board.

"We've got to begin thinking in terms less than 50-foot-wide lots and 110-foot ranch houses," said the mayor, "Not everyone can afford a swimming pool in their backyard."

"; really believe we must start to think seriously about where we are going in terms of land usage," said Mayor Corke.

"The community, like the rest of Canada, cannot afford the services that are required for top class development."

Mayor Corke recalled in his early years how homes were often built on lots too small for them and how planning was non-existent.

"I think, now, the pendulum has swung too far," in the opposite direction, he said to the members of 200 area real estate salesmen and brokers.

Following the meeting, Mayor Corke said he will bring the matter to the attention of council at the beginning of the year.

Mayor Corke said as land becomes less available and as the cost for housing becomes more acute, "council must sit down and reconsider the standards and requirements imposed on builders."

"The must be done if people on modest incomes are going to be able to purchase homes," he said.

In recent times, area homebuilders have criticized local councils for imposing so many standards for a subdivision that the price of the end product is out of the reach of the average buyer.

"A 30-foot wide house on a 40-foot wide lot isn't so dreadful," commented the mayor.

"I think the city is ready for smaller lots," said Mayor Corke.

Phil Bennett, president of the real estate board said following the meeting he is in full support of the mayor's comments.

"You don't need cadillac services for a Volkswagon district," said Mr. Bennett.

Time For Change

Mayor Ben Corke told a meeting of the Quinte District Real Estate Association Friday, subdivision standards imposed by municipal councils must be reviewed if housing is to be supplied to families living on modest incomes. Association president Phil Bennett (right), supported the mayor.

Task Force Recommends Buffer Zone Around Trenton

By JERRY BROWN
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — The Northumberland Task Force (NTF) has voted unanimously to accept a development strategy for the county that will halt Trenton's westward expansion at its current boundary.

The political committee, approved Friday the development plan devised by the task force's technical committee and consultants, and was told that the final draft would be in the hands of Ontario Treasurer Darcy McKeough, by Monday.

The task force has recommended that 5 buffer zones be placed around Trenton, separating it from adjacent areas of rural Northumberland. Implementation of this would be ensured by denial of full services into the recommended buffer zones.

She placed a classified advertisement in The Intelligencer offering a reward for its return and it was back in her possession the same night the advertisement appeared.

Trenton, at the request of the Task force, had submitted a brief for consideration by the provincially-appointed study group, but was told the brief's figures were not accurate.

The brief based on a 1971 study of projected population provided Trenton could house 62,000 residents by 2001, the town requested that Murray Township arrange to give them 1,200 acres of land. The request was rejected by the technical committee and the town was asked to review the figures.

A revised report was later submitted which projected population figures at only 57,000 people and asked for only 820 acres. The request was also denied by the technical committee which recommended the buffer-zone be established where it was originally designated.

Cockburn Convicted Of Drug Store Theft

Douglas Ernie Cockburn, 19, of RR 1, Kingston was remanded by Judge Russell C. Hooey in Hastings County Court here Friday to Jan. 19 for sentencing after he was found guilty of armed robbery and possession of a stolen car.

Cockburn was on trial by Judge since he was charged for the armed holdup of Kelly's Drugs at 161 East Bridge St. in Belleville during which, Judge Hooey found, $225 was stolen from a post office substation

Cockburn was indicted on the possession charge, introduced by assistant Crown attorney John Woods. Belleville city police said he was guilty of the Sept. 2 robbery. He is in custody at the Quinte Regional Detention Centre at Napanee.

In his rulings on both charges, Judge Hooey found that Cockburn was in possession of a car owned by Garland Burkitt of RR 1, Gilmour reported stolen about an hour prior to the robbery.

Eleanor Burkitt testified Friday she had parked her husband's blue, 1969 model, Ford station wagon on Front St. about after 1 a.m. and found it missing about an hour later.

Judge Hooey ruled Mr. Wood was successful in proving Cockburn was the person who entered the drug store at 3 p.m. armed with a .22-calibre revolver and wearing a nylon stocking-type mask over his head and was successful in demanding money from the cash register.

Cockburn's defence counsel had heard only one side of the story — from those opposed to a new road alignment, and who were fairly recent arrivals in the hamlet.

"Most of the people are opposing it are retired people or are in business for themselves. They don't have to get up for work in the morning. They livelihood depend on it."

However, council voted 7-10 against the bylaw.

Hydro Sets Example With Smaller Display

By CLIFF KENTON
Staff Reporter

You may be wishing for a white Christmas but if you want to conserve electrical energy you'll prefer a big ring for an excessively bright Christmas.

Ontario Hydro and the industry of energy have both appealed to homeowners to refrain from turning on Christmas light decorations until mid-January after dinner hours to be sure to turn them off before going to bed.

Jack Mair of Ontario Hydros' Eastern Region, said Hydro has have done away with all outdoor Christmas lighting at its Belleville office.

Three years ago, said Mr. Mair, they decorated the outside of the building. Now they only put a Christmas tree in the building's lobby.

"If we each save a little we all save a lot," Mr. Mair said.

Although the electrical cost of operating the average indoor or outdoor home display for a month is less than the cost of operating a color television set for the same period the combined effect throughout the province is high.

"We hit our peak electrical demand each day between 4:30 and 5:30 p.m. This is when people are getting off work until 7 p.m. to turn Christmas lights on," he said.

Christmas Eve in Ontario, he said, could use all the electrical energy produced by one generator at Pickering Nuclear Station. The huge generator plant is one of the largest in the world in terms of electrical output.

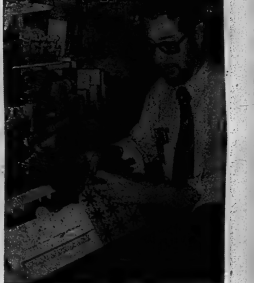
Ontario Hydro system, said Mr. Mair, is designed to provide electrical energy to meet peak demands with a reserve of about 25 per cent.

By about 4:30 p.m. in winter he said, industry is using power, home furnaces are switching on as afternoon temperatures drop, lights are turned on as it becomes dark-er and it's almost time fo turn on the oven to prepare dinner.

Use of Christmas lights during the peak demand hours adds to the necessary capacity of the system.

"We're asking people to use off-peak power to avoid the strain to the system," said Mr. Mair.

Neil Britton, manager of Belleville Utilities Commission, said Ontario Hydro's recommended hours for use of Christmas lights is consistent with avoiding energy wastage.



Light Consideration

Doug Row of Smith Dominion Hardware, 314 Front St., checks for Canadian Standard Association approval on a string of Christmas lights.

Belleville fire department advises examination of light that have been used for a number of years. If insulation around wires is brittle or cracked, sets should be replaced.

Many Shoppers Say Christmas Belongs to Children

Christmas means different things to different people.

For some it is a time for the family reunions, for others it means a holiday in the south and to others it signifies the religious celebration of the birth of Jesus Christ.

A survey of shoppers this week indicates while most believe Christmas is a special time, many find it hard to remember one memorable Christmas.

Some said Christmas is a time for children while others said they believe Christmas is just another holiday.

A turkey dinner and an exchange of gifts are always on the agenda for most families. Some attend church on Christmas Eve while others hold family parties.

Everyone interviewed said Christmas is the one special time for families to be together. The most often suggested Christmas be renamed "family day."

IRENE CARSON

Irene Carson, a member of the staff at Coles Book store, said Christmas was memorable when her children were younger and at home. "It's hard to pin down one special year," she said. "Most Christmases are very happy."

A Belleville resident, Mrs. Carson said her family would be dinie in her home Christmas day and she was elected chef.

ROBERT COLEMAN

Robert Coleman, 23, manager of Circuit TV, said Christmas was most memorable when his father was alive. "Christmas doesn't mean that much to me anymore it's all over in a day," he said.

Mr. Coleman said Christmas with his two children made the occasion special. "If I didn't have kids I probably wouldn't notice Christmas. Kids make Christmas."

SUSAN DUNNING

Susan Dunning, 20, of Belleville, said her most memorable Christmas was last year when she spent Christmas Eve working at the former Victoria Lodge, a home for senior citizens. Miss Dunning, who is unemployed, said the older people provided a "homey atmosphere."

"I really enjoyed being with them," she said. "Christmas is giving."

SHARON PETERSON

Sharon Peterson, 26, an assistant manager of Montreal Draperies, said the first Christmas with her son was the most memorable. "Kids are so cute at Christmas," she said.

Mrs. Peterson said her parents would be visiting from New Brunswick this year for the holiday season and that made it a special occasion.

ARTHUR MASSEY

Mr. Arthur Massey, 72, a retired cook from Belleville General Hospital, said his most memorable Christmas was when he "received Christ as my savior." Mr. Massey said he would spend a traditional Christmas with his family and attend the Salvation Army Citadel. "Christmas means happiness," he said.

ROBERT FERGUSON

Robert Ferguson, 24, of the CNR, said every Christmas is memorable especially when his daughter visits from her family.

"It gets more expensive every year though," admitted Mr. Ferguson. "But Christmas is getting to be a day for the family. It's a homey touch; it should be called Family Day," he said.

Homeowners Awaiting Official Confirmation Of Water Main Costs

FRANKFORD — Homeowners near Pitcher's Sideroad say they will await official word before deciding whether to share the estimated $68,000 cost of laying a water main from Frankford to their homes, plagued by polluted well water for more than three months.

The petition was outlined Friday by Bill Sidney, spokesman for seven of the homeowners.

She was reacting to news reports of an Oct. 15 environment ministry estimate of $68,000 for the water line construction.

"I can't comment until I see it in black and white," she said. "I wouldn't want to go out half-cocked and say we'll accept it."

Earlier this week, an environment ministry official said it would likely cost the province is getting to be a day for the family. It's a homey touch; it should be called Family Day," he said.

Following the meeting, Mayor Corke said he will bring the matter to the attention of council at the beginning of the year.

Mayor Corke said as land becomes less available and as the cost for housing becomes more acute, "council must sit down and reconsider the standards and requirements imposed on builders."

"The must be done if people on modest incomes are going to be able to purchase homes," he said.

Needl Finally There

TORONTO (CP) — Defenceman Greg Needl was in a thankful mood Friday night.

The Toronto Toros defenceman, signed earlier in the day by the World Hockey Association team, finally made his professional hockey debut in a game against Quebec Nordiques.

The Calgary native lost the sight in his left eye as the result of an injury in his junior playing days, and was not allowed to play in the National Hockey League because of an NHL rule prohibiting players with less than 20 per cent vision in one eye. He currently has a suit against the NHL before the courts.

The Toros secured Needl's WHA playing rights last week in a trade with Minnesota Fighting Saints, and the 20-year-old suited up for Friday night's game, won by the Toros 5-4.

Needl picked up two minor penalties in the first period of the game, then in the final period gave the puck to Quebec's Marc Tardif, allowing the high-scoring winger to net his second goal of the game for a 4-4 tie.

Vaclav Nedomansky and Frank Mahovlich scored later in the period to give the Toros the win.

Needl, who praised the Toros for giving him a chance to play in the pros, admitted he was nervous at the beginning of the game, but settled down as it progressed.

"I didn't really loosen up until the third period," said Needl. "I was really tight in the first period and it showed in my play.

"I felt kind of bad after giving the puck away to Tardif. I committed a sin in hockey by puck across ice instead of using the boards."

Needl said the peripheral vision in his right eye improved "all of a sudden" over the last two months.

He wears a specially-designed helmet with a glass-fibre mask that protects his weak eye. He has cut away part of the temple protector from the right side of his helmet and bent back part of a steel bar to allow him better vision.

Needl shakes with his head tilted slightly to the left, allowing him to use his one good eye to see on both sides.

He said players don't treat him any differently on the ice, although he admitted he was counted verbally by some of the Quebec players at the beginning of the game.

Toronto coach Bobby Baun, himself once a defenceman, described Needl as "a good skater" and said he was pleased with Needl's play.

"He seemed a little nervous out there, but played a strong game," he said. "Any defenceman gives the puck away once in a while. If that's the extent of his problems, he'll be okay."

Needl was attending school in Reno, Nev., and playing on the city's franchise in the junior west Hockey League until the league collapsed. He was then contacted by former coach F. Sasseti, and general manager Gilles Leger.

Needl said his contract was basically for one year with the option to re-negotiate at the end of two, three and four years. He admitted the salary called for was a bit misleading.

"It was a little less than I had hoped for, but I'm just thankful to be able to play. I'll be rewarded here for at least four years."

Greg Needl, who lost his left eye as a result of a hockey injury while playing for Toronto Marlboros, continued to play hockey wearing a special face mask. As a result of his determination he was signed Friday by Toronto Toros of the World Hockey Association. Needl's protective equipment allows him to utilize a lightly developed sense of peripheral vision in his right eye.

Swedes Lead Jets to Victory

By NEIL CAMPBELL
The Canadian Press

Swedish centre Mats Lindh is a2 almost over his period of put lustment with Winnipeg Jets.

Lindh's ability to bat his trouble making the switch but Friday night his two goals made the difference for Winnipeg Jets in their 4-2 victory over the Cleveland Crusaders of World Hockey Association fame.

The win was an important one for the Jets, who moved three points in front of second-place Quebec Nordiques in the Canadian Division race. The Nordiques, who have played one more game than the Jets, lost 6-4 to Toronto Toros on Friday.

In Friday's other games, Cleveland Crusaders shaded Minnesota Fighting Saints 1-0, Houston Aeros dropped Indianapolis Racers 4-2 and Cincinnati Stingers topped Phoenix Roadrunners 4-2.

Lindh, who has been playing on a line with Linderman and Canadian Bill Lesuk, on off-season acquisition from Washington Capitals of the National Hockey League, says, "It's getting better and better, game after game."

Winnipeg goalie Joe Daley made 37 stops and displayed some of his early-season form, when he had four shutouts. Illness had hampered his play recently.

Rookie Toronto goaltender Dave Tataryn celebrated his debut in the league with a shutout by turning in another outstanding game for the Toros, frustrating the Nordiques with 41 stops.

Tataryn had to be signed because he had completed the five-game trial allowed amateur players. He had played with Cornwall Owls of the International Hockey League and Whitby Warriors of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series before injuries gave him his chance with the Toros.

The Toros also had rookie defenceman Greg Neeld, who lost an eye in a junior hockey mishap, in uniform for the first time. Rookie Mark Napier scored two goals and drew two assists for the Jets, who are 7-1 going into the last period, when rookie Christian Bordeleau Valley Nedomansky and Frank Mahovlich.

The Crusaders, threatened with a shake-up by coach Johnny Wilson earlier in the week, checked the high-scoring Saints to a standstill; limiting them to 17 shots on goal and handing them their first shutout in 229 regular season and play-off games.

A Cleveland crowd of 7,545 fans saw Richie Leduc break a scoreless tie with less than five minutes to play.

Defenceman John Schella scored one goal, drew two assists and made several outstanding defensive plays for the Aeros.

John Kisly blocked 37 shots for the Stingers, who built an early 1-0 lead on goals by Gene Sobchuk, Murray Myers and Brian Campbell.

FILES SUIT

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Allan B-Urban former Philadelphia 76ers forward, filed a $1.7-million damage suit Friday, claiming the National Basketball Association club cast him out him for lack of skill. Bristow said his three-year, no-cut contract, which expires next year, guaranteed him a position with the 76ers. Bristow was dropped from the team in October and is playing with Spirits of St. Louis of the American Basketball Association. Pat Williams, general manager for the 76ers, said the club has fulfilled its obligations and will pay Bristow for the remainder of the year.

Capitals Great for Wings Morale

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

There's nothing like a game against Washington Capitals to brighten the day for a National Hockey League player.

Friday night, it was Michel Bergeron's turn.

Bergeron scored three goals for the first time in his NHL career and the Detroit Red Wings, who have trouble beating anybody else, went home from Landover, Md., with a 5-3 win over the Capitals.

A second-year professional from Sorel, Que., Bergeron scored only 19 goals last season and six this year before Friday's game. Dan Maloney added a goal and two assists for the Wings.

In Friday's other games, New York Islanders tied Atlanta Flames 3-3 and California Golden Seals dropped St. Louis Blues 5-2.

The game between Vancouver Canucks and Philadelphia Flyers was postponed because of a snowstorm that dumped 30 inches of snow on Vancouver. It will be played Feb. 18.

Mickey Redmond scored the Wings' other goal before a Landover crowd of 6,534 fans. Bill Clement, Nelson Pyatt and Gordon Lane scored for the Capitals, who leaded Detroit goalie Ed Giacomin with only 19 shots.

Eric Vail, back in uniform for the first time after missing five weeks with a shoulder injury scored the Flames tying goal before an Atlanta crowd of 11,360 fans.

"I just tapped it in," said Vail the National Hockey League's rookie of the year last season, of his tying goal with 12 seconds left. "It was just lying there."

Vail missed the entire training season with a shoulder separation, missed the first five games this year, played eight games then reinjured the shoulder Nov. 7.

"They're voracious as ball," said Atlanta coach Fred Creighton of the Islanders. "They hold, they clutch, grab, interfere.

"They don't give you a thing. Two points would have been better, the way we got the run, over the long haul, that could really help us."

The Islanders led 3-1 with just more than six minutes to play when goals by Bryan Trottier, Gerry Hewatt and Bob Nystrom, Curt Bennett and Jean Pietr were Atlanta's other scorers.

Former Blue Wayne Merrick scored California's winning goal in the second period, on Fagan, Al MacAdam, Dennis Maruk and George Pesut. Pierre Plante and Floyd Thomson scored for St. Louis.

The win moved the Seals to within a point of third-place Toronto Maple Leafs in the Adams Division standings. California has played four more games than the Leafs.

The Leafs have a chance to give themselves some breathing room tonight when they play the Islanders at Toronto while the Seals are idle.

The rest of tonight's schedule has New York Rangers at Detroit, Philadelphia at Los Angeles Kings, Kansas City Scouts at Montreal Canadiens, Buffalo Sabres at Pittsburgh Penguins and Chicago Black Hawks at Minnesota North Stars.

Sunday, Toronto will meet the Rangers, Atlanta plays Buffalo Sabres, Pittsburgh at Montreal, Minnesota at Washington, Vancouver at Boston and St. Louis at Chicago.

No One's Secure Once the Wheelin' and Dealin' Starts

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — Age is just a number — and Bill Veeck is living proof.

Less than 24 hours after his return to baseball as owner of Chicago White Sox, Veeck upstaged the game's winter meetings with a flamboyant public display of wheeling and dealing.

The 61-year-old baseball czar spent 15 hours at public baseball negotiations with four trades in the books — all of them blockbuster trading.

Chicago's trading highlighted a day of dealing during which such established baseball superstars as Ralph Garr, Clay Carroll, Mickey Lolich and Rusty Staub changed uniforms.

Veeck sat in a chair in the lobby of the hotel where the winter baseball meetings were being held. He had a sign alongside him which read: "Open for Business Anytime."

A telephone stood on the table in front of him. General manager Roland Hemond and other Chicago aides sat around the table. Veeck sat in that chair more than 12 hours, carrying on negotiations with other chief officials.

Several times, baseball people stopped to watch the unusual sight from behind a bannister in the lobby.

"Undoubtedly they (other baseball people) will say I'm making a travesty of trading," Veeck had said earlier, "But the game is fun."

The first blockbuster deal in the late move to beat the trading deadline of midnight Friday night involved Ralph Garr of Atlanta, who sent Staub, an outstanding hitter, to Detroit for Lolich, the veteran lefthanded pitcher.

The Staub-for-Lolich swap alone was a headliner, but what followed left Veeck and Hemond wheeled and dealed through the era of the bullpen for Cincinnati left-hander Pedro Borbon, right-handed pitcher Rich Hinton and catcher Jeff Torborg.

Carroll must accept the move under a baseball rule which allows players who have been in the major leagues for 10 years and with the same team for five years to veto trades.

Now, Hemond reached for the telephone again. He had succeeded in getting Carroll's approval. Veeck, concerned about the time left, sent Don Kalchbrenner, special assistant to baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn, to telephone Kuhn and ask for a brief extension of the trading deadline.

But the extension wasn't necessary. As the second hand ticked off the final minute, Hemond spoke over the phone to general manager Bing Devine of St. Louis Cardinals.

"Bing, this talks loud. We've got 15 seconds left. It's a deal."

Reichler rushed up.

"Did you make the deal?" he asked the commissioner's man. "Your time is up."

"We just traded shortstop Ron Hunt and Devine for Second Ken Reitz and pitcher Rick Wise," Hemond said.

It took almost 24 hours for the baseball executives Veeck to settle the Staub deal. A 15-year veteran with the Tigers, Lolich had had a stormy relationship with Detroit Manager Ralph Houk and was suggested Friday.

Earlier, on one of the busiest trading days in the history of the winter meetings, the Reds, 1975 World Series winners, and the Series losers, Boston Red Sox made moves to strengthen themselves.

The Red Sox got pitcher Rick Wise, who was 17-12 last year, but only three games last season, to Atlanta for reliever Tom Hall. Hall was 5-7 and allowed only two runners in 79 innings at Cincinnati.

The Reds, picked up beach strength with the acquisition of Bob Bailey and Mike Lum. Bailey, an up right-handed pitcher Clay Kirby, 26-8, to Montreal Expos for Bailey and infielder Darrel Chaney to Atlanta for Lum.

In other deals, the Mets obtained outfielder Joe Lovitto from Texas Rangers for outfielder Gene Clines, Pittsburgh Pirates for infielder Timmy Helms from Houston Astros for a player to be named later. Montreal obtained outfielder Rodney Scott from Kansas City Royals, Texas obtained pitcher Craig Sisk from Boston and outfielder Billy Baldwin went to the Mets and pitcher Bill Laxton to Detroit in the Lolich-Staub deal.

In all, there were 23 deals involving 46 players during the week-long meetings.

There would have been more, but Veeck ran out of time.

Ti-Cats' Make Decisive Moves

HAMILTON (CP) — Head coach Jerry Williams and Hamilton Tiger-Cats have parted company by mutual consent.

The Canadian football League club also announced Friday that Ralph Sazio has stepped down as general manager and that the board of directors had rejected unanimously a takeover bid by Harold Ballard, president of Maple Leaf Gardens in Toronto.

Sazio, a part owner, will remain as club president and will continue to handle many administrative duties of operating the club in league matters.

Sazio, signing on as president, said he the new general manager and possibly Deckebach to further aid find a new coach.

It was announced at a news conference following the directors' meeting that Williams had resigned but majority owner Michael Decker said the head coach didn't decide to quit on his own accord.

"I think we all had a part in the decision and so did Jerry," DeGrandi said. "He's human. As a sensible guy, he knows we didn't have a good year.

"When it's mutual it's a lot better for everyone."

The Ticats won the Grey Cup in 1965, Williams first year as head coach, after winning 11 of 14 games during the regular season. They have not had a winning season since.

They finished third in the Eastern Football Conference this year, were eliminated by Montreal Alouettes in a suddon-death semi-final.

Williams was criticized for using an offense that was too complicated for an inexperienced team and in a game of a tough, basic approach to the game.

Williams, 51, faced a major rebuilding job this fall as several Ticat regulars were traded during the off-season.

He said in a telephone interview "the impossible situation in Hamilton with owners" has soured him on coaching. He said he may turn to reuniting.

Sazio said the task of doubling for Lolich, the veteran lefthander, alone."

GREEN — In loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather, Joseph Green, who passed away December 14, 1972.
Time is a kind and merciful consoler,
Time is a memory fond and true,
Time is a treasure, time is a healer,
And a heartache still for you.
—Lovingly remembered by wife, children and grandchildren.

MOTT — In loving memory of a dear mother, Mrs. Ethel Mott, who passed away December 14th, 1974.
We stood beside her, helpless, And watched you fade away,
Never knowing what to say,
It may be your last day.
We prayed for a miracle, But it was not to be,
You are in God's keeping, Safe for all to see.
You've left us lasting memories, And treasure in our hearts,
—Lovingly remembered by Verna, Dale, Dennis.

SEELEY — In loving memory of a dear mother, Madeline, who left us Monday, Sept. 15, 1975.
Mother dear, how often think of you,
Words are inadequate to express our love,

Words are inadequate to express our love,
Memories are treasures, Locked in our hearts,
Where you will always be,
Loved and remembered by Mom, Dad and Larry.

CHRISTOPHER — In loving memory of a dear son, Christopher Ian Christopher, who passed away December 13, 1974.

Because no one has left,
—Lovingly remembered by daughter Barbara and son-in-law Bill.

TURGEON — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather, Louis Turgeon, who passed away Dec. 14, 1973.
God took him home, it was His will,
But in our hearts he lives still,
His memory is so dear today,
We think of him in every way,
We often sit and think of him,
And picture him as he was,
His memory is with us still,
That grief can fill its pain,
Sweet memories are all we have,
—Lovingly remembered by wife Ethel and son Robert.

DRIVER — In loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather, Ernest Driver, who passed away December 13, 1964.

New York Has Had 104 Mayors

NEW YORK (AP) — New York City has had 104 mayors in its 311-year history—good ones, bad ones and a few actors.

One ordered Wall Street blown up, another chopped down telephone poles and built fences. Two were shot, one was read what was then called the "Riot Act" and one was jailed.

There was one whose legend will never die; the man who set the all-time record for candor: Tammany Hall's boss, Richard O'Brien, occupant of City Hall in the 1890s, once addressed a press conference whom he intended to appoint as police commissioner.

Replied O'Brien: "I don't know. They haven't told me yet."

Today there's Abraham Beame, the Hitmeier who won the mayoralty of the nation's largest city a tit was sliding toward bankruptcy.

How does he cope with the tremendous pressures of the post? Why, the strikes and near-strikes, the meetings with financial wizards, state lawmakers, council, federal authorities, colleagues, committees — everyone who might be able to help.

Now, in short, does he manage to get up each morning?

"With my eyes wide open," answers the 69-year-old civil servant.

Supporters of the mayor insist he's the best man for the job. They believe that no one but he can carry the mantle of the city," says Geraldine.

"It's almost a passion with him, it's almost a religion with him ... I also think he knows his parents wisely. The games seem to change.

Beame's son, Bernard (Buddy) Beame, a two-time TV producer, says his father can still relax with his family.

"He has never had the ability to cope with leisure," says the son. "I don't mean he's lazy, but it's not just him, there's a whole generation of people who couldn't handle sudden time. They would be at the shop all week and on Saturday they'd go to work, or if not they would be worrying about it ..."

"Everybody worries about his health, but I've never seen him sick a lot more I've had nothing to do. When he has nothing to do he can drive everyone around him crazy, making 10 different trips to fill up the tires."

The mayor's close friends say they can see when he is worrying, although a stranger would never spot it.

"His eyes get colder and his face gets tight," says an old friend, Beame reportedly has blown up only once in his crisis.

"I blew my stack in Albany," admits the mayor. He felt that certain state legislators were not acting in the spirit of compromise, not really looking for a solution.

He buried a well-known spitchat—accompanied by a barrage of sexual challenges — and stormed out of a meeting.

"I thought it was necessary at the time," explains the mayor. "No red-blooded American would have done any differently."

Sewage May Be Recycled

SASKATOON (CP) — Preliminary results from a University of Saskatchewan study suggest that sewage effluent may be successfully recycled in some agricultural soils.

Researchers in the department of soil science have found that effluent from the city of Moose Jaw can be used for irrigation, provided 35 per cent of it is taken before the resting season. Drainage to this extent is required to prevent the build-up of salts from the domestic and industrial wastes. One problem, however, is that the salts eventually infiltrate ground water supplies and this must be taken into account in any plans for sewage effluent in grow crops.

Dr. E. G. Jong, who is in charge of the study, said that besides providing water and nutrients for crop growth, effluent irrigation would avoid such problems as the spread of disease and odors, which can occur when waste is discharged into waterways, and it would cost less than conventional chemical and mechanical treatments.

Prof. Gh Jong said it will be up to geologists and hydrologists to determine the severity of the problem posed by the infiltration of salts into ground water. He pointed out, however, that effluent dumped into waterways also results in salt problems at some stage and commented: "With effluent irrigation you at least have the advantage of from 10 to 75 per cent of the water, with the nutrient it contains, being used or growing crops."

Quebec Makes Good Use Of Its Petroleum Products

MONTREAL (CP) — Despite Quebec's increasing dependence on natural gas and hydroelectric power, the province makes greater use of petroleum products in satisfying its energy requirements than any other region in Canada except the Atlantic provinces.

A recent Gazette report on energy said that not only is oil use high in Quebec, but its importance in the province's energy mix has been increasing while dependence on the petroleum has stabilized.

Measured in British thermal units, petroleum products rose to 73.8 per cent of Quebec's energy mix in 1973 from 68.5 per cent in 1961. Natural gas made impressive percentage gains, but still accounted for only 4.5 per cent of energy use in 1973—up from 0.6 per cent in 1961.

The disruption of oil supply in late 1973 and early 1974 pushed natural gas to six per cent, representing a 25-per-cent increase in the volume of gas used in Quebec.

Pierre Dupuis, vice-president of Imperial Oil Ltd., said the popularity of oil in Eastern Canada can be credited to the national oil policy adopted by Ottawa, based on the recommendations of a royal commission published in 1957.

The policy stated that foreign crude oil imports into Eastern Canada could not be used east of the Ottawa Valley. Because production costs made domestic oil more expensive than imported oil, Quebecers and Eastern citizens paid less than other Canadians for gasoline and fuel oil.

Refined petroleum products are especially popular in the Montreal area because of low transportation costs from the refinery to the user.

The city's six refineries are supplied with crude oil through a pipeline system from Portland, Me. A pipeline also is being built to Montreal from Sarnia, Ont., but many industry officials feel the western province source will not have enough oil to supply the east.

Britain to Aid U.S. In Bicentennial Plan

LONDON (Reuter) — The United States celebrates the 200th anniversary of its independence.

Assuming Mrs. Elizabeth Windsor is awaiting Her Queen for a visit, investing American tartan, hoisting documents and rummaging history in honor of the U.S. Bicentennial.

President Nixon kicked things off in July, 1972, when he officially invited Britain to take part.

Parliament replied by sending to Washington the best of their copies of the Magna Carta, which the barons forced King John to sign in 1215.

(It was perhaps meant to remind Americans that they were not the first Anglo-Saxon upstarts.)

A "British Bicentennial Information Service" was set up and committee was formed and has collected about $1 million for the cause, mainly for sending British performing artists to the United States.

Queen Elizabeth will visit the eastern United States July 7-10 in her first trip to the U.S. since 1976. Part of her visit will include a yacht trip across the Thames River, starting in Rotherhan.

But the excitement here is not all royal and governmental.

Miss Eileen Johnson, secretary of the parish church in Bradford, Suffolk (pop. 1,600) was flabbergasted when she opened a letter from a doctor in Bradford, Mass. (pop. 4,000), asking the entire population of the British village to visit the New England town in the summer of 1976.

Miss Johnson now has a list of more than 100 interested residents, and is calling a village meeting soon to sort out the details and try to raise money for air fares.

Committees have been set up in London and Washington to help cities—like Torrington, Devon, and Torrington, Conn.; Rye, Sussex, and Rye, N.Y.—to become sister cities, even though some of them are already.

And after Romford's experience, the U.S. Embassy here says it received requests from towns all over Britain asking for the location of similarly named American towns.

Scores of British museums are offering Bicentennial related exhibits, but off for the British Museum which recently was host to the travelling U.S. World of Franklin exhibition. Display which included Thomas Jefferson's desk, Benjamin Franklin's bifocals and a stuffed bear.

Next summer the Tower is sponsoring an exhibition of the National Maritime Museum entitled simply 1776, and will show "the British side of the American War of Independence, reprisals, wrecks and adventures through the people who participated."

In comparison to this show, the National Gallery recently cleaned and relaced its Jushua Reynolds portrait of turnip known in the 13 colonies as "Bloody Tarleton" after he ordered his men to bayonet the American wounded in a South Carolina battle.

Other exhibits are less warlike, being devoted to American quilts and coverlets, art, slaves, fashion, tower and, at Lee

Author Recounts Hard Times

LOS ANGELES (AP) — At 61 he still has the look of a football quarterback, which he once was at Brooklyn. He claims to have "legs like Joe Namath" from years of tumbles on Swiss ski slopes.

He is a survivor, this Irvin Shaw, a man who has endured the slings and arrows of Broadway critics, the betrayal and blacklists of Hollywood producers, the snubbings of other bazards for 30th century writers.

His not only survives but flourishes. His latest novel, Nightwork, is rapidly climbing the bestseller lists.

That is not unknown territory for Shaw. He made it there with The Young Lions, Two Weeks in Another Town, Lucy Crown, Rich Man, Poor Man, and Evening in Byzantium."

"I've never had any such unanimous reviews as I have had on Nightwork — except for my books of short stories," Shaw said.

Shaw was back in his old Hollywood haunts on a leave from his Paris apartment and Klosters chalet. He spent a great deal of his early writing career there — "I had a big job as a playwright, and after every flop I had to rush out here to make some money."

He remembered one assignment with pleasure—the 1942 George Stevens film, Talk of the Town, with Cary Grant, Jean Arthur and Ronald Colman, but the rest of his movie work remains a bad memory.

"I wrote good scripts — but I know how," he said. "But by the time they went through the grinder, I couldn't recognize them. My last job was War and Peace for the Italians (in 1956)."

He also was unemployable during the Red hunts of the 1950s. "I was never a Communist, but I had supported the Republicans in the Spanish Civil War," he said. "That, plus working with the Group Theatre, was enough to put me on the blacklist."

Shaw took up residence in Europe and hasn't returned to live here.

The option for Nightwork has already been sold to film maker Frank Perry, but Shaw said he will not work on the script.

"No more," he vowed. "I've got two books to write, one a sort of final farewell to Paris — I'm giving up my apartment there, the other a big, big novel about America. It takes me two and a half years to write a book so my work is cut out for me."

Winnipeg Ballet Wants More Toronto Dates

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Royal Winnipeg Ballet, which has recently performed in such places as Vermilion, Alta., and Terrace and Kitimat, B.C., would like to have more performances in Toronto.

Jim Cameron, the ballet's general manager, says the company could make more money if it played only in Winnipeg, Toronto, Vancouver and Montreal.

But the Royal Winnipeg has always been a touring company, originally planned for large enough to occupy one ballet company full time. It travel mostly in a single bus, though two sometimes are needed to transport sets and costumes to supply their performance needs.

Cameron said recently that after returning from a Western Canada tour, the ballet had its Christmas season at home in Winnipeg, filled with special five weeks touring the U.S., and then Toronto in March and April in the Maritimes.

Although the company would like to perform more in Toronto, there are limitations. The principal one is the City of Toronto Centre — the nominal home of the National Ballet of Canada.

Cameron said the O'Keefe Centre tries to protect its national by not engaging any other ballet company that will form during the month before or after each National Ballet appearance.

Cameron says this is a short sighted policy—unlike Vancouver, where ballet audiences have been encouraged to grow through visits by a number of ballet and contemporary dance companies are brought to the Queen Elizabeth Theatre.

The National Ballet, perhaps with the exception of the Canadian Opera Company, hopes someday to have a resident theatre to provided almost entirely to dance and opera.

If the National did have a theatre of its own, we'd help build the audience," Cameron said. "We don't compete with the National, with its big productions of the big ballet. We're a smaller company, doing mainly short works based on the classical tradition."

Mennonite, Amish Schools Not Affected by Violence

ST. JACOBS, Ont. (CP) — Playgrounds where there is no re-enactment of TV violence, drugs or profanity are not a world dream.

They do exist in the 34 Old Order Mennonite and Amish parochial schools which have mushroomed in this part of southwestern Ontario during the last decade.

Most of the Old Order Mennonites, the half dozen Amish and the two Conservative Mennonite schools which now have a total enrolment of close to 5,000 pupils in Waterloo, Perth and Wellington counties, are located in the country.

Classes are held in the three red-colored-house type of buildings, many with bells in towers which were at with the last century. All are equipped with pumps and fuel-stoves.

The fees of the 1,000 children behind the calico-curtained Mennonite country is so vastly different from the jean-clad people of other Canadian schools that they could be living in another world.

To walk into one of the Mennonite parochial school playgrounds is like stepping back a century into a less-complicated slower-paced world. Pupils spend their breaks sitting on the teeter-totters or swings.

They nibble on thick sandwiches of fresh, home-made bread and home-cured ham, home-made cookies and pie, home-made doughnuts from their well-filled lunch pails. There is good-natured mischief but no roughness.

They don't spy movie or TV violence there so as to take them safe or radio in Old Order Mennonite homes. They never go to movies. The only rock'n'roll they are likely to hear are the strains wafted on night fleet into the playgrounds from passing cars.

Girls dressed in plainform long-sleeved print dresses run about playing tag, their long, thick pigtails flopping on their shoulders. Boys in brown have a Tom Sawyer look about them.

There are no disciplinary problems in Mennonite schools. Their strict upbringing, however, does nothing to dampen their natural exuberance.

The Mennonite parochial schools came into being in 1896 when Old Order Mennonites quietly rebelled against the type of curriculum offered in public schools. Education and gymnastics rankled them most, so they established their own schools when school boards abolished one-room schools in favor of regional schools to which pupils were conveyed by bus.

The Old Order Mennonites, who travel in horse-drawn buggies, objected to the busing. Leaders of the Old Order Mennonite churches, declared militant action was needed after children were reported being beaten and mandated that they pull on gym suits with bloomers and participate in games which included dancing.

The move has meant self-sacrifice in the Old Order Mennonites and Amish. They must continue to pay public school taxes and at the same time maintain their own schools.

Money required for the construction of the parochial schools and teachers' salaries is raised through voluntary contributions — about $200 per family.

All Mennonites contribute whether they have children or not. Families who cannot pay the fees are assisted to send their children to the schools regardless of their number.

Teachers for the most part are young girls who have completed their Grade 8. Some have taken a teacher training course. They wear the traditional Mennonite costume — a plain dress with white prayer caps on the back of their head. Their salaries are low in comparison to the teachers in other schools but they are definitely not in it for the money. Strikes will never be a problem of Old Order Mennonite school boards.

Their curriculum is also distinctive. In the backbone of the school curriculum and in which there is little need for more, the emphasis is equally split at the age of 14.

Prince Installed As a Rat

LONDON (AP) — "Prince Charles, you are a rat," the 27-year-old heir to the British throne was told Wednesday.

The prince, looking solemnly installed as companion rat in the Order of "Rat," after a show business charity organization.

Soon to take command of a Royal Navy destroyer, the prince told the audience of comedians:

"I strongly advise you to increase your insurance if you are considering sailing in the North Sea next year or if you are considering a trip on the Scottish waters."

Prince Charles will operate mainly in the North Sea.

The Jupiter Effect Revisited

Copyright 1975, Toronto Star Syndicate

Two scientists respectable scientists who said the unsayable when they predicted that Los Angeles would fall into the sea by 1982 are sticking to their grim prophecy.

In spite of the wrist-slapping they've received from some of their scientific colleagues, John Gribbin and Stephen Plagemann, both postgraduate members of the academic establishment, are unrepentant.

"Los Angeles," they insist with all the matter-of-factness of a foregone conclusion, "probably will be destroyed by October 1982."

Gribbin, editor of the international science journal Nature and an astrophysicist at the Institute of Astronomy, University, and Plagemann, a NASA (U.S. space agency) researcher, are convinced they have recently generated the data to support their prediction.

In October, 1982, for the first time in 179 years, Jupiter, the biggest planet in the solar system, the seven other planets and the moon will line up in a virtual straight line on the same side of the sun.

"The Jupiter Effect," say Gribbin and Plagemann on a book of that title, "will be exerting a braking effect on the earth's axial rotation. It will lead to intolerable stresses at earth-quake-prone points in the Earth's surface, could trigger enormous natural upheavals.

"The astrologers were not wrong after all." allow the two scientists. "The alignment of the planets in 1982 will trigger off earthquake activity on Earth and by that time the Californian San Andreas fault system will be under great strain . . . That fault is now due for a slip greater than the one in 1906" (the date of the San Francisco quake).

Some astronomers have pooh-poohed the doomsaying. Edward Upton of Los Angeles' Griffith Observatory called Gribbin's and Plagemann's claims "sensational" and indeed they are) and "a hoax" and wondered if the pair had thought of making a fast buck. Some scientific critics asked where the evidence was that past Jupiter superconjunctions have been accompanied by unusual earthquake activity. Gribbin and Plagemann answered this objection by citing Space Research, massive records gathered from sparsely populated northern California in 1959.

"Between October 11 and October 21 of that year," they say, "there were an average of six earth shocks a day."

In trying to pinpoint the time of the fatal event the two scientists turn to astrology's rock opera Hair: "When the Moon is in the Seventh House and Jupiter aligns with Mars," and with the other seven planets of the solar system. At that hour,

Former Prisoner Supports Regeneration

OTTAWA (CP) — For Paul Ii Ottawa with Gregoire, "one Gregoire, who has spent half a dozen years in Ottawa and half in prison, rehabilitation is out and regeneration is in.

Gregoire is a new approach to prisoner reform sponsored by Prisoners' Aid Society of Ottawa-Carleton.

The group, with headquarters in Hamilton where they are financed by Hamilton's United Way, recently opened a branch

Mr. Gregoire, "one of the parochial schools' success" is a school-teacher with a master's degree.

He was given a three - day pass from the minimum-security Frontenac Institution near Kingston, where he had been transferred from other penitentiaries to serve his armed robbery, in order to appear at the opening and tell how he was helped by AV and especially by one of their workers, former Queen's University graduate Leo Connolly.

"When Leo came to help me he spoke to me in my own language," Gregoire said. "He understood the kind of bitterness I was feeling and solved it on my level. Suddenly I gained self-confidence and could communicate with people."

Why I was in the position I was in? With his "regeneration" he got rid of the hatred and bit-

To Your Good Health

Calorie Needs Depend on Weight

By G.C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Would you be good enough to settle a discussion as to the maximum number of calories a pre-born baby requires through its fancy?—J.C.F.

The caloric requirement is highly variable. Average would be from 50 to 60 calories per day for each pound of body weight. But the baby's needs depends on the child's activity.

I have purposely avoided any reference to a baby's weight. If a youngster is gaining weight rapidly, it is getting too many calories. You have reached a maximum. A fat baby is not necessarily a healthy one, and I wish that idea had never gained popularity.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What does cervical erosion mean? I was being treated for a knee injury and the doctor did a pap smear. He said there was cervical erosion and he had to do some work on a couple of days with a solution of a teaspoon of vinegar to a quart of water.

I am confused. The doctor said I will have to repeat the Pap test in the mail—Mrs. C.B.

Cervical erosion is one of those medical terms which causes with it an unjustified sense of foreboding for the patient. It means your doctor found some ulceration of the outer surface of the cervical tissue. This can be the result of inflammation associated with childbirth. It also can mean the presence of infection.

The Pap smear will tell you all you will need to know. The odds are against the presence of malignancy, but it is the best test to have the erosion treated. Early treatment of such erosion has head off the problem before it's causing a discharge or becoming more serious.

You are fortunate to have a doctor who routinely does such tests in his patients.

It is common procedure to provide results of such tests by mail.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My doctor has told me I have "an inflammation in my duodenum. X-rays showed this.

I am staying on a bland diet, am not getting fatted as though I would have to stay on this for a very long time. Can I ever get normal again—for example, a salad?

Also can you explain to me just where the duodenum is?—Mrs. W.V.

The duodenum is located in the central upper abdomen. It is the first portion of the intestine as it leaves the stomach.

Inflammation of this structure is usually what prevents an ulcer formation, as it is well that the ulcer-causing acid starts treatment. You obviously already have had some dyspeptic symptoms to prompt the x-ray examination and your present treatment.

Time and a strict adherence to your diet should bear results. Most of the worst symptoms disappear and you've allowed time for things to settle down a bit. Then you will be able to resume eating some of the now restricted foods. You should avoid particularly spices, hot condiments and peppers.

Be patient.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My son was born with his hands. I asked his pediatrician about them and he said they will go away in time. In the meantime they are deformed. Then I decided to offer you the following bit of unscientific advice: Let the boy suck. I've seen it work. Rub the hands with a new, shiny quarter each night.

Don't ask me why.

Your loss is your gain.

Please, in your heart, you know it's right.

Georgia Man Arrested Six Times for Distilling

GAINESVILLE, Ga. (CP) — A surveillance truck by armed federal agents, a few minutes of dedicated, methodical work and long days of hard labor for Georgia Clinton went down the drain for the red clay hills and hollows of Georgia.

"Shucks," he said, grinning cheerfully, "it wasn't worth the trouble you all must have gone to, comin' up here and all, for a little baby operation like I got."

Minutes later, Georgia's moonshine still was dismantled and he was being whisked off to jail by officers of the federal Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Agency (ATF) for the sixth time in a 19-year career he describes as "devoted to high-quality distilling."

Nobody disputes his distilling ability but the quality of his product might not be universally appreciated. Drinking George's illicit whiskey is like sipping boiling water through a red pepper with your finger in a light socket. It's electrifying.

The taste may have been part of the explanation for the two dozen or so empty beer cans [illegible] Georgia [illegible] to make a gallon of moonshine and the price rise, says a local additive, Jeremy Craig, "was the end of the industry."

Craig, who says he would still "drink good moonshine if he could get it to regularly-distilled whisky, doesn't mourn its passing. "Times was when there wasn't a family in northern Georgia didn't have at least one still and they took real pride in their work. But for the last 15 to 20 years the quality just got worse and worse."

Lane himself acknowledges that old time corn liquor—he added white lightning—can't be sure copper stills probably was better than bonded whiskies.

But after the Second World War, copper became scarce and the moonshiners turned to sheet metal vats and more recently to discarded car radiators to cool the liquor instead of copper coils.

The result is often a fatal dose of lead poisoning. The most famous victim was the murder conviction in the late 1920s of Fate Hardy, a Gainesville moonshiner whose poisonous product killed many people in the Atlanta area.

Clyde Dixon, another local bootlegger, says the taste of moonshine has also deteriorated badly because of a widespread liquor scarcity. Its makers that horse manure added to the grain is largely responsible for the end of the industry."

"These modern guys will try anything," he says. "We even hear of them throwing in dog excrements to hurry things along. I've seen a boy get in the vat to drink some of the slop and drown. They just take it so long and go ahead. They can't afford to lose all that money."

Regional Library Celebrates 25 Years

PRINCE ALBERT (CP) — [illegible]y ready, [illegible] and a mark the 25-year history of the Wapiti Regional Library. Travelling in cars, buses, snowmobiles, on trains and canoes, the library's books have been housed in homes, seniors' residences, group institutions, summer day camps, mail-town restaurants, on reserves and in women's rest rooms all over northern Saskatchewan.

The first of its kind in the province, the library was launched April 8, 1950, and has since grown from three branches in Melfort, St. Louis and Prince Albert to 33 branches covering 34,000 square miles.

The success of what was then only a novel idea can be known on the North Central Regional Library out of an example of six newer regional libraries in Saskatchewan and continues to set precedents in library service to rural communities and institutions.

It all started with a borrowed car from the provincial government and a station wagon full of books.

Today, Wapiti has a staff of 100, two vehicles and about 300,000 books rotating among its branches. It has children's services, audio-visual services, foreign books and a summer program which allows every branch to have the chance to get any one in Saskatchewan.

Grace Campbell, on loan from Prince Edward Island; and Nell Wood, a bookkeeper and jack-of-all-trades working from basement headquarters in the Prince Albert Public Library.

"As basements go, the overhead pipes and ducts make for a unique setting," says Karen Labelle in an article for the Saskatchewan Library bulletin.

Mrs. Braithwaite, who is writing a book on the library for its 25th anniversary, says each of its branches could only have happened in conditions made tough people who are willing to co-operate to make such a venture work.

Smaller BGH Self Care Unit May Replace Queen's Pilot Project

BY HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

The Queen's Self Care Unit will be closed out in 12 months and the provincial government approves replaced by a smaller facility at Belleville General Hospital.

Carl Bateman, BGH board chairman, said today such a proposal will be discussed this week with Ontario health ministry officials.

The ministry has confirmed it will not renew its five-year lease on the converted Queen's hotel property on which it launched the unit as a pilot project in 1971.

The ministry's decision ends a year of speculation by the BGH board of governors. They first discussed the future of the facility in late 1974. At that time it was pointed out terms of the lease demanded a year's notice of termination.

This means the operation of the Queen's will close at the end of 1976, said Mr. Bateman.

The 20-bed unit was designed to ease pressure on hospital bed space by providing a low-cost centre for patients not in need of active hospital care.

Mr. Bateman said the board and administration now is viewing the possibility of installing a self-care operation in the Edith Cavell building — the former nursing school on BGH property.

"Such a project may involve as 36 beds, said Mr. Bateman.

It will be discussed when Mr. Bateman and Dr. Bell, administrator Philip Rickard confer on budget guidelines with ministry officials in Toronto Friday.

"We're hoping that we can show them we can operate a self-care unit in that building within budget allocations spent on the (Queen's) location," said Mr. Bateman.

Such a move has received approval in principle. But it "is a matter whether they can find funds to do it," he said.

The chairman said the board may not be totally happy with the ministry's decision not to renew the Queen's lease, but the board realizes it has to live within new financial constraints demanded by government spending austerity.

Need for a smaller unit was implied last year in a ministry-commissioned survey of Hastings County health needs. Dr. Peter Gordon, Halifax medical expert, concluded the Queen's operation was too large for the number of admissions. The basic concept would remain valid if it were reduced and moved to hospital property.

Mr. Bateman said he didn't completely support the suggestion that the Queen's unit was not fully utilized.

"It was probably too large a facility that was required for this type of service at Belleville General," he said.

As a pilot project the self-care unit operation was funded by the ministry and administered by BGH.

Consulate Siege

Dutch Premier Won't Concede

AMSTERDAM (AP) — Premier Joop den Uyl says the Dutch government will wait out the Moluccan nationalists holding 35 hostages in the Indonesian consulate just as it did the gunmen who held 34 persons captive on a train for 12 days.

Den Uyl said he "hopes for an early end" to the consulate siege, which ended its 11th day today. But he said the government did not yield to the political demands made by the six Moluccans on the train and will not yield to those at the consulate.

The six young men who hijacked the train near Beilen, 90 miles north of Amsterdam, on Dec. 2 surrendered at noon Sunday after the temperature aboard the unheated train dropped to six below Celsius the night before.

It was thought likely that the young men would be charged with murder because they killed the train engineer and two of the passengers. A seventh hijacker who was taken to hospital after an explosion Dec. 5 has already been charged with murder.

Three of the hostages were carried from the train on stretchers, but all were reported in "fair to good" condition. They included 17 men and seven women and ranged in age from a 16-year-old boy to a woman of 72.

Both groups of South Moluccans demanded that the Dutch government give active support to their campaign for independence for their native islands from Indonesia, the pre-war Dutch East Indies.

Leaders of the South Moluccan community in the Netherlands who negotiated with the train hijackers said that they persuaded them they could exercise their struggle for independence peacefully. But Justice Minister Dries van Agt said: "The terrorists saw it was useless to go on. They realized we were not prepared to make one single concession."

Commons Continues Debate Over Anti-inflation Laws

OTTAWA (CP) — Parliament appears to be heading into the Christmas season with some of the toughest debate of the session.

With only days to go before the government-suggested Friday date for Christmas adjournment, MPs will be enveloped in the nub of the Liberal anti-inflation program.

They also will fire the last shots in the Commons on the Time-Reader's Digest battle.

In the latter case, the government had not decided last week whether to use closure to limit debate on the bill in 21 days to advance the opposition during recess reading.

Tuesday, the government will present a program of spending cuts.

Sources close to the cabinet said Friday Finance Minister Donald Macdonald went to cabinet last week with proposals to reduce spending in the next fiscal year by $1.5 billion.

The sources said the proposed cuts were detailed in the cabinet committee Tuesday and in full cabinet Thursday.

After the stock market close Thursday, the government will announce the regulations tied to the anti-inflation legislation that was to become law Monday.

The regulations, which will control the operations of the anti-inflation board, are expected to be tabled in the Commons. Contrary to usual practice, the government is not expected to make a statement and give the opposition a chance to reply.

In another anti-inflation move, the government is expected to introduce legislation to remove some of the automatic increases in MPs salaries.

The controversy that has dogged the Time-Reader's Digest legislation from the start will continue this week when it comes back to the Commons from committee.

There now are 22 proposed amendments to the legislation which in its present form would remove the special tax status of the two magazines.

Liberal MP Norman Cafik of Ontario, has given notice of another amendment which would delay implementation of the legislation for two years. He said he also will seek a reduction of the controversial editorial content rules.

Mecca Fire Kills 138

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A fire roared across a tent city on the outskirts of Mecca, Islam's holy city, killing 138 Moslem pilgrims and injuring 181, the Saudi Arabian government radio said today.

The broadcast said the fire last Friday was caused by "the misuse of a gas bottle by one pilgrim."

The Saudi interior ministry said the casualty toll was "rather low considering that more than 55,000 pilgrims were camped in the area of Mina, where the fire erupted."

"About 150 cars parked near the scene also were burned after to ashes."

Canadian Decisions Causing U.S. Resentment: Porter

WASHINGTON (CP) — A high U.S. state department official said today William Porter, retiring ambassador to Ottawa, "has his facts right" in stating that recent Canadian decisions are causing resentment in the U.S.

Porter, following a small farewell gathering of journalists in Ottawa, was quoted Saturday night as saying that among issues causing alarm" among Americans are:

Canadian restrictions on U.S. investment in Canada; proposed deletion of commercials from the bregrammming of U.S. border television stations distributed in Canada by cable TV companies; proposed nationalization of part of the potash industry in Saskatchewan, and higher prices charged for Canadian oil and gas.

"There is a growing concern about some of the actions Porter has cited," the state department official said. "Indeed, they do reflect a growing feeling of disease and possible recontrol in some business circles."

Porter is leaving his Ottawa post to take up a similar appointment in Saudi Arabia.

Thomas Enders, assistant secretary of state for economic affairs, has been reported unofficially to be the White House choice to succeed Porter in Canada.

Commenting on Porter's reported remarks, the official said, "We have been concerned about these issues."

"Perhaps the ambassador was taking advantage of his farewell to put them all together. We have issues before us which cause great concern and Congress wants to know what's going on."

He cited the cable TV issue as an example of a situation "where we, for a long time, we've even been able to enunciate our concern" to Canada.

Porter's remarks followed announcement that a joint subcommittee of the U.S. Senate and House of Representatives is to meet Tuesday in a hearing into whether Canadian federal subsidies discriminate against U.S. investors.

Testimony will be such prominent Canadians as Roy Bennett, President of Ford Motor Company of Canada, Ltd.; Stephen Clarkson, professor of political science, University of Toronto; J. Alex Murray, a professor of business administration, University of Windsor, and Robert Rene de Cotret, vice-president of the Conference Board of Canada, a private economic forecasting body.

On Wednesday the subcommittee will hear from Julius Katz, deputy assistant state secretary for economic and business affairs, and John Petty, chairman of the U.S.-Canada committee of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

Simcoe Accepts Toronto Students

BARRIE, Ont. (CP) — Simcoe County Board of Education has accepted five Metropolitan Toronto students into its high schools, Sid Greaves, superintendent of planning for the board, said today.

The board originally refused to accept students from areas where the secondary school teachers are on strike. The board said the move would add pressure to an already overcrowded high school system.

But the board began admitting Metro students last Thursday when the ministry of education ruled that it is legally bound to accept such a student when a parent or guardian owns a second residence in the county or is assessed taxes in the county, he said.

Troops Kill 61 Guerrillas

PRETORIA (Reuter) — South African troops have killed 61 guerrillas in a battle believed to have taken place inside Angola, it was announced here today.

The defence force headquarters in Pretoria described the incident as taking place "in the operational area," said three South African soldiers also were killed.

The announcement described the guerrillas killed only as "61 of the enemy" and did not say when the battle occurred.

South Africa recently acknowledged that it has troops in Angola.

But it has insisted that these are only used in the area of the border between South-West Africa and Angola. This area has been described in previous defence force communiques as the "operational area."

Holiday Displays Popular

Glenmore House curator Marion Lewis says there was a surge of public interest in the traditional decorations used at the Hastings County museum last week as part of a week of special Christmas events.

All kinds of people, said Mr. Lewis Sunday, asked questions about the decorations—consisting of cedar wreaths, garlands and pomanders.

"This year we had to brief the guides to make sure they knew how to make them," he said.

In the two previous years the special week-long program was held, interest in the decorations at the Victorian mansion was not as great, he said.

The curator added he suspected that this year interest was in line with current popularity in crafts and homemade items.

Yule decorations were made by Hastings County Historical Society volunteers and students from Prince of Wales Elementary School.

They hung in the museum — where a 50-foot cedar garland encircled the main staircase banister — during the past week mini-concerts, puppet shows and Dr. Swinburn's performance took place.

But despite the interest, Mr. Lewis said, he does not know whether an formal seminars on making of Christmas decorations will be held next year.

He said he did not want to compete with the Belleville Garden Club, which normally schedules such sessions around Christmas.

Freezing Rain Turns Quinte Roads Into Skating Rink

By ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

The traffic situation in the Quinte area turned into a state of confusion Saturday as unaware afternoon shoppers and rush hour motorists found themselves in the middle of freezing rain.

Ontario Provincial Police at Belleville say the rain began shortly before 3 p.m. and driving conditions remained hazardous until about 3 a.m. Sunday when rising temperatures kept ice on roads to a minimum.

The Belleville detachment investigated 17 minor traffic accidents during the period, including nine in the first half hour as motorists apparently drove into the storm at normal speeds.

Belleville police say they investigated 14 minor accidents, plus two for provincial police who had more accidents than most.

In Prince Edward County, the rain was responsible for two serious accidents in which eight people were injured.

OPP in Brighton also blamed slippery roads in a truck-bus collision on Highway 401. Nine were involved in serious injuries.

However, the situation was completely opposite in the Tweed end of Hastings County where, although road conditions were similar, Ontario Provincial Police at Bancroft did not have to investigate one accident.

"People must have stayed off the road," commercial provincial police corporal. "I was working till three o'clock when it started to get bad and I thought, 'I won't be getting home for a while' but nothing happened."

Car, Horse Collide

THOMASBURG — Dense fog early today was responsible for a car-horse collision on Concession 3-4 of Hungerford Township, three miles east of Highway 37 past Vandenwater Park.

Ontario Provincial Police at Madoc say a 1971-model Toyota, driven by Emma Cronkwright, 36, of RR 1, Thomasburg, was westbound when it collided with a horse owned by Don Hill of Toronto who has a farm in the area.

Police say the horse, which wandered onto the road, sustained serious injury in its right hind leg and was to be treated for a vet at Tweed today.

Constable Robert Bruce estimated $200 damage to the front left front door and hood of the car which had to be towed from the scene.

Driver Charged

TRENTON — A 23-year-old Trenton man has been charged with impaired driving after the automobile he was driving was in collision with a parked car, causing $1,500 damage, Friday night, Trenton Police said.

Paul McFarland, 321 West Street Trenton, was treated and released for a minor at Memorial Hospital, after the car he was driving went out of control while travelling south on Marmora Street and was in collision with a parked car owned by Earl Martin, RR 6 Trenton.

Damage to the Martin vehicle was estimated at $1,000. Police estimated there was $300 damage to the front end of the McFarland automobile.

One Hurt In Crash

REDNERSVILLE — An Ameliasburgh area woman received cuts and bruises Saturday afternoon in a three-car collision on Redneerville Rd. about a tenth of a mile east of the junction of Prince Edward County Rd. 21.

Injured was Hilda Crowe, 22, of RR 1 Ameliasburgh passenger in a car driven by Roy Crowe, 22 also of RR 1 Ameliasburgh.

Drivers of the other two vehicles, Eric Caulfield, 48, of Carrying Place and Morley Allen, 43, 55 Craig St., Belleville were unhurt.

A spokesman for the Picton detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police said the collision occurred after Caulfield vehicle stopped on the road because of ice condition. Police estimate total damage at $800.

Alarm Box

Belleville firefighters responded to the following calls for assistance in the 48-hour period ending at 8 a.m. today:

Gross Sales About Same as French GNP

Multinationals: GM's Net Profit in 1972 Was Greater Than GNP of Ireland

By JOHN D. HARRISON

Foreign Affairs Analyst

Thurston News Service

How powerful are the multinational corporations? The question is now endemic and the answers are endless.

The usual parallel is to relate the gross national product of the world's middle powers, for example, Norway, Sweden, Holland, Switzerland and some of the more aggressive emerging nations, Iran, Mexico and Venezuela to the annual sales figures of large multinational corporations.

That kind of thing produces some devastating comparative figures what with General Motors net profit in 1972 being greater than the gross national product of Ireland and its gross sales about the same as the French gross national product that year.

Author Lester Brown in his 1973 book on the international corporations called World Without Borders, says, that among the world's 129 largest entities, nations and multi-nations, 59 are nation states and 41 are multi-national corporations.

Nor are we talking solely about American-owned firms. There are many Canadian, Japanese and British-based international concerns and a few Belgian, Canadian and French which can also be included in this new numbers game.

Brascan Limited, the Toronto-based holding company for Brazilian Light and Power, is the second largest foreign-owned company in Brazil's giant economy.

It dominates the utilities of many of Brazil's largest cities as well as being a majority or minority owner of Brazilian industries in food processing, railway transport equipment, manufacturing and investment concerns.

And yet Brascan Limited with interests in excess of $1 billion is not known to be a political power behind the government in Brazil.

We have to look at the truly bad boys of international business, like T.T and T. or Gulf Oil to see the way in which multinational concerns try and influence events in critical nations.

The former concern was involved in the domestic politics of Chile both to try and prevent the election of the late Marxist president Salvador Allende and then to help get him unseated after that event took place in late 1970.

Gulf Oil's payrolls, along with those of Lockheed Aircraft, are front page news right now in the U.S. press and are related to another influential activity of financially influential multi-national concerns; to pay off those who will make business easier for them in given foreign countries.

On the other hand, even the most influential of multi-national corporations can live in the shadow and fear of total nationalization in countries where taxsystem or gross national product are far less than the earnings of a huge international concern.

Take the international copper companies which were isolated by the state in the major copper-producing nations Chile, Zaire and Zambia.

Or take the giants of the giants, the oil companies themselves which have been nationalized in the world's major oil-producing nations, Libya, Iran, Saudi-Arabia, Kuwait and a few days ago by the left-wing leaning socialist regime in Iraq.

The lesson we don't and probably won't nationalize the multi-international oil giants which own about 70 per cent of the country's oil and gas industries.

Instead, in the great Canadian tradition of the mixed-up way the Trudeau government has created a state oil corporation, Petro-Canada, to have a role in the oil industry and keep a perpetual eye on it.

Whither Controls?

The federal cabinet has allowed the government wage offer to the postal workers to stand. We have determined otherwise. It would have been as politically dangerous as it would have been unacceptable.

Even the general public recognizes that to disallow the postal workers their raise likely would have led to a further stoppage and even turmoil. In short it would have been counter-productive.

But where does this leave the Anti-Inflation Board, which after all was merely doing its duty given the mandate it had to curtail rising demands by the public sector?

As of now, the Government's good (or bad?) intentions are threatening to come unstuck, and with overtones of farce. Such are the contradictions, confusion, babel of tongues, and the cynicism surrounding their policy.

"The Cabinet can second-guess us anytime it wants to," says Jean-Luc Pepin, who heads the anti-inflation program. He was referring to the board's decision to reject the terms under which the postal strike was ended.

As it happened the Cabinet did just that — and everywhere workers and professional people who reject the idea of controls sense that things may be going wrong, that the program won't work.

The contradictions of it are reflected locally. Thus we have Hastings county council on the one hand going along with Ontario's guidelines, supporting a letter to this effect from provincial treasurer Darcy McKeough, while on the other the county board of education has voted itself a $50 increase in trustees' monthly salary to $350.

So it goes. All along the line there will be further politicking and jockeying for further leeway — with evidence of some inequality here or a falling behind the others, there.

It's a prickly time for the marketplace and frustration all round. It will take all the Government's persuasion and skill to reconcile this progress of economic controls with the doubts and antipathy of a restless public.

A Budget Defeat in March Could Mean a May Election

By DON O'HEARN

Thurston News Service

TORONTO — When will the election be?

This is an intense session. Will the government in a minority precariously every moment is exciting.

It is a constant prize fight.

But overwhelming it all, or underlying it all is the one big question—when will the election be?

This is a question obviously with no ready answer.

Anything could happen at any time to precipitate a vote.

But, barring the extraordinary, the most likely time for an election would appear to be next May.

None of the three parties particularly wants an election at this point.

The New Democratic Party wants to solidify itself with its new strength.

The Liberals have to find, themselves a leader.

And the government has to reorganize its party machines.

All three, as a consequence, have been playing it close to the vest.

This winter, however, like it or not, the house will —

The United States Bill of Rights, the first 10 amendments to the constitution, was adopted 184 years ago today—in 1791—after being ratified by a majority of states. A total of 12 amendments had been offered after the constitution's guarantees of civil liberty and 10 were accepted. They include statements of the right to bear arms and the prohibition of an established religion. Probably the most famous amendment is the 18th, allowing self-incrimination, and the most important now is the 10th which reserves to the states all powers not specifically transferred to the U.S. government.

Americans Want Work

However "odious" it may be to indulge in comparisons, it can be revealing.

Consider the inflationary cycle. In the United States it is about half the 17 per cent or so it is running at in Canada. Greed appears to be more rampant in Canada than across the border. Our top bureaucrats make more than their counterparts in the United States.

And while everyone from postal workers to teachers and doctors has his hand out here, asking incessantly for more, out-of-work Americans are trying desperately to find jobs.

Several interviewed in the course of the still-lingering recession in the United States, have stressed the demoralizing effect of being unemployed. They have said it has struck at their manliness, being unable to support themselves and their families.

It's not the sort of talk heard in Canada these days. And while it is acknowledged prices and government spending must be curbed as much as salaries and wages, the general attitude of the work force is still geared to disruption of national purpose on the one hand and grabbing from the system as much as it can on the other.

It's a pretty poor attitude at that.

Fewer Smokers?

An official of the anti-smoking lobby — and more power to them — was heard to say on television recently that their campaign seemed at last to be taking effect.

This may just be the case. There was a time when practically every college youngster had a cigarette in his — or her (since it anything girls have been smoking more) hand. And of course, they still indulge, over coffee or a beer, but casual observation of late suggests that maybe they are tapering off, smoking less or not at all.

If a person of whatever age feels he has something worthwhile to live for, if life itself is the most treasured prize, then it is this kind of thinking which suggests to the individual that smoking is a costly indulgence. And in more ways than one.

Author's Book Tells How to Survive in the Marketplace

By VINCENT EGAN

Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst

Thurston News Service

The marketplace is an economic jungle, that can destroy you unless you know the rules of survival.

But if you learn the rules, and adapt them for your own use, you can flourish in that jungle.

That's the philosophy of Sylvia Porter of New York, an economist up in her recently published Money Book (Doubleday, 1,168 pages, $18.95).

Consumers today need more help than ever before. Except for those in strongly organized groups, the past few years have brought a steady attrition of investments, fixed assets and even living standards.

A decade ago, prices were fairly stable, the economy was growing strongly, and unemployment was relatively low.

That's all changed now, and the typical consumer is feeling the pinch as never before.

To protect yourself against rising costs, says Sylvia Porter, you must:

—Substitute items that have not gone up, for those that are more expensive, whenever possible.

—Switch to less expensive versions of increasingly costly goods and services.

—Buy for the best possible deal if you must have an item that's becoming more expensive.

—Eliminate items that are of no real value, and may even harm you.

For example, food costs have increased sharply in the past two years, especially the price of meat.

So, substitute. If you make a mistake, you won't be stuck with it for long; you can profit from your error the next time you shop.

The author suggests barbaric-priced chuck steaks and roasts; short ribs, beef shanks, brisket and short loin for barbecues; lamb chops can be replaced by cheaper cuts like rib or loin chops; blade and arm steaks, flank steak, sirloin tip and bottom round steaks rather than so-called broiling steaks.

Another tip: Meat roasted at no more than 325 degrees will shrink less, and emerge more tender and easier to carve.

What could be eliminated from the food budget? Snacks, says the author, are one of the most expensive food extras you can buy," and can easily add 10 per cent to the weekly food bill.

Everybody has heard that it's useless to shop for food on an empty stomach. But did you know that, according to surveys cited by the author, people who shop after meals spend up to 17 per cent more than those who shop hungry?

Many of the same principles apply to the clothing budget as well. Shoppers should fight the temptation to buy clothes on impulse, says the author.

The best time to buy clothes is at off-season sales. (The post-Christmas period is a good one around the corner). But learn to resist bargain prices if you don't need the merchandise.

One extended section of Sylvia Porter's Money Book deals with one of the most treacherous areas of the marketplace — franchising.

"Fast rustic, vending machines, phoney training courses, pyramiding, franchising, distributorships and work-at-home schemes.

Promoters are constantly coming up with new "business opportunities," that appeal to unsophisticated, starry-eyed victims eager to get rich quickly.

Much of this has been said before, by others as well as by Sylvia Porter herself. But human nature is such that the advice bears repeating.

"What purpose have I served," asks the author, "if I have failed to heed the warnings?"

Medical Men in a Quandary

Editor,
The Intelligencer!

I am writing in reply to the article "Freeze on Hospital Budgets".

There are basically three ways for any nation to bring the best health facilities to all its citizens (assuming that any enlightened nation feels this is one of its first priorities). The first and most important priority is nutritionally adequate food and most would agree that all Canadians can have this if they wish.

The Second most important priority is adequate shelter and sanitation facilities. Again, this has been available to most of us for so long that we tend to take it for granted (sewage disposal, purification of water, modern plumbing, heating, etc.).

If there are resources available then the third most important priority can be brought into play and that is a health care system capable of treating illness to all its citizens, despite their financial resources.

Such a system has been available in Canada for almost a decade now and if you feel we are not indeed very fortunate in this regard, I suggest you ask any American.

However, such a health system through its very nature can threaten the financial stability of a nation even as rich as Canada. What the Canadian and Ontario Governments are starting to do is forcing us, on a voluntary basis, to make judgements about the quality of the health care we deliver to patients and who shall receive it. What are we going to do if more patients want more than treatment at our hospitals than we can believe we can afford. Our budget will be the same as the previous year's, but we are going to exclude from admission to hospitals those who, in the sensile, the incurably ill, the people with self-inflicted diseases, alcoholics, the addicts, the people who don't wear seat belts, motorcycle riders, the [illegible] people requiring expensive treatment (e.g. artificial kidneys, heart surgery, neurosurgery). Will you, the patient, as the general public, accept a decrease in , closing of institutions, services (e.g. hospital, a decrease in facilities, specialists, psychologists, home care nurses, etc.), a decrease in research, a decrease in rehabilitation, etc.

All these decisions are about to be forced upon us as governments and are now reaching social, moral and legal proportions.

I feel, as a concerned and sensitive physician, that these are questions we should not be required to answer on our own. Only a small group of its representatives should make such decisions.

Please, fellow Canadians, give it a guidance.

Please, my government, give me and all physicians guidance.

In an interesting debate in TV recently the question came up. Is Ukraine a religion or is it a Jewish political movement?

It seems that Ukraine is really part of the Promised Land of prophecy. There are several references in both Old and New Testament but I will quote one:

"I will gather you from the people and assemble you out of the countries where you have been scattered and I will give you the land of Israel." Ezekiel 11:17.

Old-fashion Christmas

The Brighton Santa Claus parade Saturday was filled with more than 40 floats built by area people including contributions from local schools, service clubs, and businesses. Here, Tamara Rayer, foreground, and her fellow pupils from the Spring Valley Public School present their image of what Christmas was like in the village in the year 1875, one hundred years ago.

Residents Endorse Seat Belt Use

PICTON — Prince Edward County residents say they endorse the use of seat belts and they wear them, at least some of the time.

David Pile, a flying instructor with Prince Edward Flying Club, says he "always wears them, but never used to".

Mr Pile said his decision to always wear seat belts came as a result of a minor airplane accident some years ago.

"We were taking off one night and just as we were getting airborn, the engine quit. We hit a snowbank and landed upside down and there we hung from our seat belts like bats. It was then I realized their value in a crash."

One garage owner interviewed says the new type of belt will probably encourage more people to wear seat belts who formerly declined because of the "fastmat in freeing".

The new type of belt enables the driver to have complete freedom of movement while driving, but should an abrupt change in vehicle motion occur, an automatic sensing device, located under the driver's seat, will lock up both top and shoulder retractors.

Clifford Kerr of RR 2 Picton, a driver for Tvind Trucking, says he usually wears seat belts during lengthy trips but adds he is undecided as to their advantage.

"There are just so many pros and cons as to whether they can save lives," says Ted Wallwork of Northport, an employee of Mead Johnson Canada in Belleville, drives 32 miles to work every day.

"I usually wear them," he says.

Buckling Up

Dave Pile, a flying instructor at Prince Edward Flying Club, a firm believer in the use of car seat belts, demonstrates the freedom a driver has with the new type of seats which allow movement until an abrupt change in vehicle motion causes a sensing device located under the seat to lock up both lap and shoulder belt retractors.

Seven Injured In Two-car Crash

PICTON — A two-car collision on Highway 49 north of the H. J. McFarland Memorial Home Saturday afternoon sent seven persons to hospital.

Injured were Robert Finlay Bolton, 44, of RR 2 Picton, driver of one of the cars, his son Clifford, 15, and Grant, 17, George Economou, 52, of Kleinburg, driver of the second vehicle, and his passengers, Toula Economou 50, of Etobicoke, Demetra Dimitrakos, 25, of Brantford and Chris Economou, 23.

Police said today that Chris Economou, Clifford and Grant Bolton were treated for minor cuts and bruises while the other accident victims were admitted to Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital with fractures.

The collision occurred when a southbound vehicle, driven by Robert Bolton, was in collision with a northbound car driven by George Economou.

Police attributed the accident to icy driving condition during a storm Saturday.

Damage to the Bolton vehicle was estimated at $700 while damage to the Economou vehicle was set at $1,000 in the collision which occurred shortly before 3.30 p.m.

Milk Producers To Meet

PICTON — The Prince Edward Milk Committee will be holding its regular monthly meeting at the agricultural office here on Dec. 16 at 8:00 p.m. The committee is a liason between the county's milk producers and the Ontario Milk Marketing Board.

Instructor Joins Staff

PICTON — A Kingston man has joined the staff of the Prince Edward Flying Club as a full-time instructor, John Storing, formerly with Kingston Air Services, commenced his duties Dec. 1.

Freezing Rain Doesn't Stop Parade

BRIGHTON — Despite freezing rain, Saturday more than 1,000 area residents lined the streets here to see Santa Claus and his friends.

In a parade filled with clowns of all shapes, from all over the province, children waved and applauded until Santa came by, dispensing candies to the young at heart.

Standing in the freezing rain, some for as long as an hour, the steel-hearted were entertained by pipe bands from Oshawa, Colborne and the Trenton Citizens Marching Band.

More than 40 floats were ushered in this year's Christmas parade, including representatives from various civic, and school groups, as well as local business. Miniature cars, overflowing with clowns clustered along the parade route.

Representatives of the Ontario Provincial Police and Brighton and Murray Fire departments drove along thrilling the children with blasts from fire horns and Keystone Kop antics rarely seen in the village.

Slippery Roads Blamed In Two Accidents

TRENTON — Freezing rain caused two separate accidents in Trenton, Saturday, sending three people to hospital and causing an estimate $2,100 damage, town police reported.

A two-vehicle accident at 5:30 p.m. on Dufferin Street sent three people to hospital, who were treated and released, and caused $1,300 damage. Police reported a vehicle owned by Donald Andrus, Newmarket, Ontario was attempting to make a turn onto Carrying Place Road when it was in collision with a car driven by Elwood Clarke, RR 3 Carrying Place.

In a separate incident, a two-vehicle accident on Ward Street caused an estimated $800 damage, but no injuries. A southbound car driven by John Willis, Belleville, was in collision with a northbound auto driven by Michael Vickers. Police also attributed the accident to the freezing rain.

Soviet Gas Line Now Under Way

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Building has begun on a pipeline of nearly 2,000 miles to carry natural gas from the Soviet Union to six East European countries.

Five countries—East Germany, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Poland and Bulgaria—are helping build the pipeline and the sixth, Romania, is providing finance and gas - processing equipment.

Once the project is completed—it is due to be fully operational in 1980—each country will receive deliveries of gas in proportion to money and effort invested.

Now construction is under way, the Soviet press is presenting its progress as smooth and concerted.

But there have been signs of friction, particularly over the large contingents of labor some of the other countries were meant to provide.

Romania, from the start apparently balked at committing any of its already sparse workforce, and earlier this year Czechoslovakia said it was asking the Soviet Union to do the actual pipe-laying along its section.

Hungary put in a similar request, saying it lacked the technology and machinery to handle the type of pipe the Russians wanted to use and now, according to press reports in these countries, both nations will be making up for their small physical contribution with monetary compensation.

But as planned, both will build pumping stations—there will be 23 in all—and support facilities along their stretches.

In an interview with Pravda, the Soviet minister for construction of oil and gas industry enterprises, Boris Shcherbina, made no mention of the labor difficulties, but he said some 5,000 men should be working on the project by the end of the year. The figure should ultimately rise to around 30,000.

A further snag indicated by the minister was in the supply of pipes. These come from France and West Germany as well as the Soviet Union, and according to Shcherbina many are being held up at ports on the Baltic and Black Seas.

The pipeline should double Soviet gas supplies to Eastern Europe, providing a significant boost to energy-consuming industries and over-all economic integration.

It starts from the Soviet Union's newest gas fields around Orenburg in the southern Urals and will cross the country to the Czech border. No estimate has been given of its cost.

The first few miles already have been laid, and Eastern European workers now are establishing temporary settlements and support bases along the particular stretches, Pravda said.

Canada's Contribution High Towards Olympics

MONTREAL (CP) — The promoters of corporate or business programs for the financial support of the 1976 Montreal Olympics say the record of Canadian and foreign participation is impressive.

Goods, services, licensing fees and contributions—running the front vitamins to an auto fleet and from soft drinks to hard cash—are estimated to reach a value of $50 million.

"Canadians are basically determined that the Olympics must buy a success—there's no doubt of my mind about that," says John C. O'Brien, the Canadian navy admiral who came out of retirement a year ago to help make the Games "go."

Admiral O'Brien, one-time commander of Canadian Maritime Forces and now director general of revenue for the Olympics organizing committee, conceded in an interview Wednesday that response varies in the Canadian regions.

Promoters also say reaction varies regionally to the ups and downs of Olympic news from Montreal.

Admiral O'Brien, 57, said he is convinced citizens generally regard the Olympics as a "Canadian thing" rather than a Montreal thing.

"I believe the feeling is that the Games have been spoken for, they must go on and they must be good," said the admiral.

The Olympics organizing committee remains responsible for staging and running the Games despite th recent takeover by the Quebec government of some construction responsibilities from the City of Montreal.

Admiral O'Brien emphasized that funds raised through the corporate plan would go solely to support the committee's activities and not be sidetracked for construction of facilities designed eventually to become part of Montreal's fixed assets.

Amid the sometimes sensational controversy surrounding the Olympics, small but influential groups have been campaigning quietly for business participation in various parts of Canada. The theory is that a corporation's participation in the Olympics will spreads Olympic spirit among employees.

Business Flocks to Saudi Arabia

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (Reuter) —For Western merchants who fly in to this desert kingdom on every plane, the prize to be won are vast.

Luring them is the vision of the $160-billion surplus from Saudi Arabian oil revenues and waiting to be spent on transforming this country of an estimated six million people into a modern industrial nation.

If the salesmen have their way, complete new towns will rise in the Arabian desert and prefabricated harbors will provide instant new ports on the busy Red Sea.

These and a host of other projects are being urged on the visible but noncommercial princes who run Saudi Arabia as the most frantic trade rush of the decade gathers pace.

In the present state of the trade scramble, Americans are far and away in the lead with West Germans and the Japanese next. Some way behind are the British while the South Koreans are moving up fast.

For foreign businessmen, selling in Saudi Arabia is fraught with frustrations. Contrary to audience to make a sales presentation can be difficult enough. But the subsequent wait as a decision often stretches the nerves of even the most buoyant sales representative.

The lobbies of the overcrowded hotels are filled with hotfoot foreigners reading paperback after paperback and not daring to leave the building in case that telephone call, promised days or weeks ago, might suddenly come through.

In another country, the businessman might find some solace at the bar, but in Saudi Arabia Islamic law is followed in every aspect of life and alcohol is totally prohibited. So are most other Western delights.

At first, Westerners often become irritated at the frequency with which appointments fail to materialize. But they soon find it wiser to take a more philosophical view.

Many believe that Singapore has the potential to supply not only petroleum products but much of the machinery and other capital goods required by Vietnam's reconstruction, while Singapore would welcome many imports of Vietnamese agricultural products.

The Singapore government is believed to be keen to take part in the reconstruction of Vietnam and the Singapore Chamber of Commerce has asked the Vietnamese if it can send a delegation to Hanoi and Saigon.

Petroleum exports from Singapore made up 27 per cent of the total two-way trade with the deposed Thieu government.

Oil and gas sales to South Vietnam in 1974 and the first four months of this year were worth $675 million.

This market disappeared when the Communists took control of Saigon and the loss has been a blow to Singapore's big refinery industry.

Vietnamese Welcome U.S. Oil Exploration

SINGAPORE (Reuter) Seven months after the fall of Saigon, the Vietnamese are reopening their doors to American oil exploration companies.

One of the few places where Americans can make direct contact with the Vietnamese authorities is at the Hanoi trade mission in Singapore.

It was speaking with the head of the mission, Le Van Mon, in his luxurious white-painted villa in the eastern suburbs of Singapore, when a taxi drove up and two men came to the front door.

Mon went to meet them, spoke briefly to the two and then returned to his large marble-floored lounge with letter the men had handed to him.

"They were Americans," Mon said. "They want to return to my country to work for oil again."

Mon, chief representative in Singapore of Hanoi's national import-export corporation, said U.S. companies are welcome to resume offshore operations in Vietnam.

But he stressed that contracts made in South Vietnam with the former regime of President Nguyen Van Thieu are illegal and fresh applications have to be made.

"If they would like to return to make a contribution in oil exploration and in co-operation with the Vietnamese people, they (the Americans) can come," Mon said.

The Hanoi official has been working quietly here to build up trade again between Vietnam and the outside world.

Rice from South Vietnam has already begun flowing to Singapore.

Quinte Cuisine

One of Denise Grant's favorite recipes come from her mother in Chicoutimi, Quebec. It's Saguenay Tortiere, a rich and elegant variation on the traditional French-Canadian dish served during the Christmas season. Mrs. Grant, who is a volunteer helper at the Toy Lending Library, moved to Belleville a year ago with her husband Dick and three children, Joann, Diane and Glenn.

Saguenay Tortiere

LARD PASTRY

one and one-third lb. lard two-thirds cup boiling water five cups flour
1½ tsp. salt

Add water to the lard, and beat until creamy. Stir in flour and salt, using a fork. Chill before using.

FILLING:

1½ lb. stewing beef
1½ lb. shoulder pork
1½ lb. stewing veal
one or two chicken breasts two medium onions, chopped four lbs. potatoes salt and pepper
boiling water

Trim excess fat from the meat, and cut into small cubes, about one inch by one inch.

Combine all the meat and the onions. Mix well, then cover and refrigerate overnight.

The next day, peel and cut potatoes in half-inch cubes. Add the potatoes to the meat mixture and then add (about five tsp.) and pepper (about ½ tsp.). Mix well.

Line the bottom and sides of a heavy lidded casserole or Dutch oven (Mrs. Grant uses a roasting pan) with the lard pastry, sealing the sides to the bottom. Pile in the meat mixture.

Add boiling water to the meat but until you can see it, but not to cover the contents.

Roll pastry for the top of the pie, and seal it well around the edges. Cut a large vent in the top.

Put a lid on and bake the tortiere four to five hours at 225 degrees. Remove the lid for at least half an hour at the end of the time, to brown the crust.

This tortiere, served with pickled beets, tomatoes and salad, makes a filling meal for 10 to 12 people. It is delicious heated up and served the next day, says Mrs. Grant, who adds that game, such as rabbit or moose, may be used in the recipe if available.

Lisa Gassenbeck's pomander.

Traditional Giving: Orange-clove Pomander

Lisa Gassenbeck has been making pomanders for years every and to decorate her family's home since she was seven years old.

Now nearly 14, she's continuing the tradition this year by preparing several for gifts for teachers and friends.

The pomander is a clove studded orange, rolled in cinammon, and hung by one of variety of plain or fancy hanging devices.

"It helps if you know macrame," Lisa admits, but adds that any kind of hanger can be made for the pomander. Particularly successful devices have included ribbons, velvet ribbon lapped with lace, macrramed shiny raitail cord and the like.

She began each year with small thick skinned oranges.

"These have been made since pioneer days when they often gave them as gifts," she says, "but the one thing they didn't use was oranges. They were too expensive."

Instead, apples were used, hence, the name pomander.

Lisa, who attends Bayside School, begins each pomander at the stem end, piercing the centre with a pencil. She then inserts a clove and begins making ever-widening circles with the pencil and inserting cloves until the whole orange is well studded.

A $1.39 bag of cloves will make three pomanders. The oranges cost about five cents each.

When the orange is well studded, set it aside for about two weeks so that it can dehydrate.

They'll shrink quite a bit and grow lighter but they'll never rot," Lisa points out.

When it has shrunk, simply roll the pomander in cinammon and prepare any kind of hanging device.

Lisa recommends keeping a couple for yourself as friends and drawers and adds that the very first ones she made are still fragrant.

Pencil makes spaces for cloves.

SANYA: MY LIFE WITH ALEXANDER SOLZHENITSYN

By Madame Reshetovskaya

Madame Reshetovskaya was born in Russia at Novocerkaset in 1918. Her mother was a lawyer; her father, a jurist fled from Russia during the Civil War. She and Sanya (the nickname she gave Solzhenitsyn) met while children attending the same school. Later, as a student at the University of Moscow, this beautiful young Cossack girl and Sanya married a few years later.

This is a memoir of the life they shared, the intimate story of a marriage that survived a devastating with secrets, and interrogation. Here, also, is felt the appalling loneliness and anxiety of years of imprisonment.

More deeply, it is the compassionate study of a troubled genius, showing how he developed his life and the effect of his triumphs and failures which caused him much torment.

Environment Blamed

LONDON (CP) — The environment in factories, offices and kitchens is to blame for many of the severe backaches suffered by several thousand people in the United Kingdom, says a report by the British Chiropractors' Association. It suggested that redesigning the working environment would eliminate much postural strain leading to backache.

Information about weddings should be set down on wedding forms available from either the main desk or the women's desk. Black and white glossy photographs are recommended for the best reproduction in the newspaper. If, however, you have only colour photos, bring the negative so that it can be used to make a black and white print.

Day Care Centres Would Screen Kids

Avid interest in the new early childhood screening program adopted by the Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Health Unit this year has extended to day care centres, says Olga Wallace, health unit director of nursing.

Miss Wallace told the counties board of health meeting here Wednesday day care centre officials have approached the health unit expressing interest in introducing the program in their area centres.

The program is designed to check a child's physical condition, motor ability, level of balance and ability to follow simple directions to aid in detection of trauma for a child entering school, she explained.

Miss Wallace gave board members a concrete idea of the program's content by showing slides of a typical child being screened by a public health nurse with a special present.

She said hearing and vision are checked, urine sampled and immunization status determined as part of the program.

"There is no intervention in any way on whether the child has failed or succeeded," she emphasized.

Sore Loser Throws a Tantrum and the Game

Dear Ann Landers: My problem is my husband. He's a great father, a good provider, a lovely guy, but a sore loser.

Whenever we play backgammon and I win, he throws the board across the room and starts a fight.

He accuses me of trying to humiliate him—says I must have cheated because he is the superior player and should beat me every time.

I hate to give up playing backgammon with Pat just because he's a sorehead. It's great fun after the children are asleep to sit down to this fascinating game. Pat's behavior, however, is so despicable when he loses I don't know what to do. Any suggestions, Ann?—Disgusted In Cheshire Heights

Dear Flexi: Yeah, do something—but don't play backgammon with the sorehead. Obviously he can't stand losing. If you're the smart you'll give up those night games to protect something more important. Your marriage.

Dear Ann Landers: You are not a doctor and you don't pretend to know all the answers. Yet you were the one who identified my husband's medical problem after we had gone from doctor to doctor for 15 years.

Recently, I wrote to you about Jim falling asleep during a movie, card games, on the church, even at the dinner table. It used to worry me that he might fall asleep while driving the car. All the doctors we consulted him said he was ok and not to worry.

When he fell asleep at a Notre Dame football game he is a proud alumnus of that great school) I knew something must be terribly wrong. It was you who suggested the possibility that Jim might have narcolepsy.

The following day he went to a doctor recommended by a neighbor. Sure enough, that was the diagnosis. Since Jim has been on medication he is 100 per cent better. I'm fascinated by the fact that you called the shot. I feel as if we should send you a cheque—Grateful.

Dear G.: Please don't. It was the savvy doctor who made the diagnosis, furthermore, I don't want to be nailed for practicing medicine without a license. Glad I could help.

Dear Ann Landers: Is it wrong to bring a cake when invited to a friend for dinner?

I came from a small town. My mother and aunts did this often. It seemed like a warm gesture. So far as I know, nobody ever resented it.

We moved to Pittsburgh a few months ago. People here have been very kind to us. Three times I have baked cakes and brought them to dinner parties. All the doctors serving the hostess was not pleased. What about this, Ann?—Love To Bake

Dear Baker: Better bring a box of candy or some non-perishable delicacy in a jar or can. When a guest brings a cake the hostess may feel obligated to serve it. This leaves up her mind. She need either dish the dessert or serve it in addition to the guest's cake, which is just too much.

If you love to bake ask the hostess in advance if you can bring the dessert. There's a good chance she'll be pleased. But don't surprise her.

Women's Prison Director Defends Pass Program

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — The director of the Prison for Women says the temporary-absence program which allows prisoners passes away from jail is a "very positive treatment procedure."

Douglas Grimsey said in a recent interview that the program has been criticized in recent years because of crimes committed by prisoners on passes but the public must realize the system against several factors.

The prisoner's eventual release, the small percentage of violations and the over-all benefit to prisoners and their families are factors which have to be assessed.

He said attention has focused on the pass system at prisons here because of the firing of Joseph Doyle, former director of Edinburgh Institution—a medium-security farm annex set apart to Joyceville Institution near Kingston.

Mr. Doyle was fired by August after he granted one prisoner a pass for 30 days and another a pass for 40 days. He was also charged with allowing prisoners an absence for other than medical or humanitarian reasons and with authorizing the building of a swimming pool in violation of prison policy.

A hearing on his dismissal ended Sunday and solicitor-general Gordon Simmons said he will hand down a decision in a month.

Galt, of Philadelphia, was taken into custody after a shootout with police early with him at the motel called police.

Eat Hot Lunches

HALIFAX (CP) — A hot lunch program operated by a local church has grown from feeding a dozen schoolchildren five years ago to almost 120 this year. The program, formed in 1971, is designed to fill nutritional needs of children whose parents are unable to supply adequate lunch at home during the school year. The program is financed partly by a Local Initiatives Program grant and mostly from private donations.

Australia's Economy Fraser's Priority

SYDNEY AP) — Australia's new prime minister, Malcolm Fraser, said Sunday that economic issues must be the legislative administration's first priority.

But he suggested his government will make a big policy push — quickly as Gough Whitlam, the ousted Labor prime minister, did when he came to power in 1972.

"I think it's very important that matters be done properly," Fraser said in an interview at his home with his wife, Tamara, and their four children.

"The way you do things is very often as important as what you do because if you do things the right way you're more likely to make the right decisions."

Labor Party spokesmen said there was a willing to see what Fraser will be able to do, he has the support of a majority in reducing inflation.

They did not expect suggestions made before the election — that trade unions members will respond to a defeat for Labor with strikes.

Fraser said the size of his conservative coalition's victory during the weekend added to his responsibility to set up a good government.

Cuba May Build Nuclear Reactor

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian nuclear industry, including the building of a nuclear reactor for electric power, will be the main focus of the first five-year plan to be adopted by Cuba since his takeover says Joaquin Mas Martinez, the island republic's ambassador designate to Canada.

The plan, to be approved by Cuba's Communist party congress, will cost $15 billion and will cover all aspects of the economy, Mr. Martinez said in an interview during the weekend.

The six-day assembly, which begins Wednesday in Havana, will be the first congress held in the Western Hemisphere by a Communist party in power.

It will adopt a constitution that will provide for the first general elections since Fidel Castro and his supporters took control of the country in the 1959 revolution.

The constitution will establish a new government structure based on a pyramid of elected "assemblies of people's power" — Cuban type soviets — from the local to national level.

Mr. Martinez, who is expected to present his credentials to Governor-General Jules Leger in Ottawa Tuesday, said the constitution and five-year plan combined will show Cuba "has started to live again."

The country hopes to struggle to survive after the revolution and emerge from underdevelopment but now has reached the point where it has been advanced by retrograd.

He said the plan will make sure the vital sugar industry develops the steel industry, improves agriculture, provides water for irrigation and rejuvenates transportation with railways, roads and the port of Havana.

Construction of the nuclear power plant would begin in the five-year period 1976-80, and would be completed during the 1980s. The reactor would be similar to the Candu developed by Canada and Argentina because Cuba does not have the water resources for large hydro-electric generating plants.

The power would initially operate plants such as a steel mill proposed in Orlando province on the southern end of the island. The province has vast iron ore deposits, and a plant making industry there would allow Cuba to manufacture its own agricultural implements.

The steel industry also would enable the country to develop more ambitious construction plans.

Mr. Martinez, 44, said the plan proposes to mechanize 80 to 90 per cent of the sugar harvest and make profits provide production by the early 1980s.

Moynihan Warns Russia Will Take Over Angola

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Communists will take over Angola if they can "rule a South African label" on their opposition, Daniel Moynihan, the United States ambassador to the UN, said Sunday.

He said Soviet control of vital oil shipping routes between Asia and Europe is at stake in the struggle over the former Portuguese colony on Africa's southwest coast.

Moynihan, speaking on NBC television's Sunday show, said: "The Soviet Union, with its proxy armies from Cuba, has invaded the southwest region of Africa."

The U.S. role, he said, has been to give arms to "the government of Zambia and Zaire, who have passed them on" to forces battling the Soviet-approved Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola (MPLA).

State Secretary Henry Kissinger has said the U.S. has had no direct contact with South Africa on the issue, but Moynihan conceded that the two countries' policies have converged in opposing the MPLA.

Black Africa's hatred of South Africa's white minority regime is "intense," he said, but people a South African label on resistance to Communist imperialism will be supported.

The ambassador said the U.S. is committed to Israel because that country represents democracy, and he saw no reason to change the commitment.

Indians Say Victims Possessed by Bears

WIKWEMIKONG, Ont. (CP) — Residents of this Ojibwa reserve — where seven young persons committed suicide in the last 13 months — say some incidents at the reserve police can be explained by evil spirits as bears.

A legend known as the bear walk says that if a person has a vision, usually of a bear, the person's soul will be dominated by that of the spirit in the vision, the residents said in an interview outside the coroner's inquest into the deaths.

A psychiatrist said at the inquest yesterday that belief in the curse of the bear walk, and a breakdown in family ties are factors contributing to what he said was a "suicide epidemic" at the reserve.

The inquest said the legend says that the spirit determines the actions and the fate of the

Air Workers Say Bilingual Communications Realistic Move

MONTREAL (CP) — The federal government's plan to introduce bilingual air communications at Quebec airports was described Sunday as a "realistic and honest move" by the president of the Quebec Air Workers Association.

The statement by Roger Desmeurs came after an announcement in Montreal Saturday by Transport Minister Otto Lang that beginning immediately, air traffic operators in Quebec are authorized to provide "advisory services" in French when it is considered to be in the interest of safety.

Mr. Desmeurs said his 300-member association, which has resisted the use of French at Quebec airports, is "satisfied with the outcome of this problem and the support of the government."

Instruction manuals and French-language lexicons are to be introduced April 1, and all flight advisory services provided in French and English. Air radio operators, informed pilots of weather conditions and give flight clearance instructions.

The issue of bilingual air communications recently led to one-day suspensions of two air traffic controllers at Montreal's Dorval Airport who made unauthorized use of French in control operations.

Mr. Desmeurs said his association agrees with Mr. Lang's statement that the two controllers' fines should be rescinded

St. Lawrence Workers Walk Off Jobs

TORONTO (CP) — Stagehands at the city-owned St. Lawrence Centre for the Arts walked off their jobs Saturday in a dispute over job designations, a spokesman for the centre said Sunday.

Theatre manager Victor Polley said in a news release that the stagehands, members of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, want specified job designations written into a new two-year contract.

He said the centre employs four permanent stagehands and a number of part-time employees and the union wants a six-man stage crew to be paid for all productions, whether their services are needed or not.

Mr. Polley said the walkout is not expected to affect productions scheduled at the centre during the Christmas season.

The stagehands struck after the curtain came down on the closing performance of Jean O'Casey's The Plough and the Stars, said Mr. Polley. The next major production opens Boxing Day and supervisory personnel will stand in for the stagehands.

Chretien Says Ottawa Will Cut Popular Programs

MONTREAL (CP) — Treasury Board President Jean Chretien said Sunday the federal government will have to make painful cuts in many popular programs to help reverse the trend of inflationary government spending.

In an interview on CFCF radio he declined to discuss specific budget cuts under consideration but said he is determined to cut expenses in all possible areas to bring government expenditures in line with revenue.

Whitby Entry Tops Twelve Team Tourney

Anderson Collegiate and Vocational Institute of Whitby collected the over-all team championship on Saturday at the Second Annual Belleville Firefighters Invitational Wrestling Tournament at Centennial Secondary School.

Anderson totaled 87 points, 9 points better than Senior A w a r r i o r competitor, last year's winner Collingwood Mohrs Secondary School of Belleville came up with a strong showing finishing in third spot only three points behind the defending champs.

A total of 12 teams and 188 wrestlers from as far away as Pembroke took part in the event which almost doubled its entry number from last year's count.

"Six schools scheduled to make the trip did not show, which potentially cut another 120 wrestlers from the program," noted fireman Larry Fritz, who organized the meet.

Only two points back of the fourth place Napanee District High School, with 39 points, was the Bayside, Pembroke came sixth and seventh spot was taken by Trenton Secondary School. Six local area schools including Prince Edward collegiate from Picton

Carling-O'Keefe, Hunt Meant for Each Other

There is an old saying "Three times lucky." Ron Hunt is living proof of the adage as she captured the Women's Carling-O'Keefe Ace Crown for the third straight year. Mrs. Hunt came up with a 7283 total over 30 games for a 242.7 average.

The final leg of the O'Keefe Roll Offs was held at the Bowl-O-Drome on Sunday, when 30 of the 36 entries were played.

In the men's division, Jack Cassidy with a 7837 total, for a 261.2 average, was highest scoring the entire competition.

It was not his first time in the winner's circle, as he has taken top honors a number of times. Both of the top winners were from Belleville.

"It was a lot of fun and some good bowling," said tournament director Jim McNichols.

Second in the men's division was Jim Carlie, of Belleville with 7571 total, for a 245.7 average. Third went to Nichols. He finished at 7314, with one 333 game.

Fourth was Wally Dance of Trenton at 7296. Fifth was Ron Zapotichny of Kingston, with a 7183 final.

On the women's side, second to Mrs. Hunt was Mary Holden, at 6721. In third was Madeline James, with a nice total over the games. All three women were from the Belleville area. Fourth result to Erma Crossman of Thomasburg, at 6536. In fifth was Peggy Rooney, of Belleville, while sixth went to Carolyn Onslow of Belleville.

The top 29 men and the top nine women will compete on behalf of Belleville in future competitions in the province.

Combines Continue Winning Ways

Norma McQuarrie fired two goals in the Belleville Combines of the Quinte Ladies Hockey League in a 6-2 win over Picton, Sunday, at Dick Ellis Rink. Karen Noakes and Bonnie Bowerman scored goal-tending chores for the winners.

Belleville picked up both of their goals in the first and second periods. It was the first game in a week for the Belleville Combines, a result little until next Sunday. The schedule is arranged by a second spot in the four-team league, two points back of the front runners Stirling Ladies.

In other action around the league last week, two games were postponed due to weather conditions. Tuesday, a snow storm cancelled a scheduled game between Stirling Ladies and Picton teams and on Saturday freezing rain forced cancellation of a game between Napanee and Picton.

Wednesday, Napanee collected a 5-1 victory over Picton, Debbie Murray fired two goals for the winners with a single going to Julie Hinch. Sheila Harris tallied the lone Picton goal.

Team Responds with Win

It's Patrick for Young In St. Louis Shakeup

By GLENN COLE
The Canadian Press

The annual media guide issued by St. Louis Blues describes Garry Young as a coach whose handling of individuals is unpredictable, both off and on the ice.

The guide goes on to say that gives the right opportunity and players, Young could bring St. Louis its first Stanley Cup.

Apparently the owners of the Blues had enough of Young's unpredictable handling of individuals because they fired Young Sunday night just 20 minutes before the Blues took to the ice against Chicago Black Hawks for a National Hockey League game.

Lynn Patrick, the Blues senior vice-president, was named to coaching spot for the third time in eight seasons. The Blues, who were 1-8-1 in their last 10 games, responded to the coaching change with a 4-3 win over Chicago.

Meanwhile, Toronto Maple Leafs snapped a 10-game winless streak by defeating New York Rangers 5-1, Montreal Canadiens topped Pittsburgh Penguins 7-4, Boston Bruins edged Vancouver Canucks 3-2, Atlanta Flames beat Buffalo Sabres 7-4 and in a game between the worst two teams in the league, Kansas City Scouts and Washington Capitals tied 4-4.

Saturday night, New York Islanders downed Toronto 1-2, Montreal defeated Kansas City Scouts 4-1, Philadelphia Flyers clipped Los Angeles Kings 5-4, Minnesota edged Cleveland Barons 4-3 and Chicago downed Detroit Red Wings 5-2 and Pittsburgh and Boston battled to a 4-4 draw.

Patrick, who has been active in hockey for more than 30 years, was the Blues first coach in 1967, but was replaced by Scotty Bowman, now coach of the Canadiens. He coached the team for two games last season between the time Lou Angotti was fired and Young was named as his replacement.

The Flyers have gone through eight coaches since joining the league in, the fall of 1967, although Bowman, Patrick and Al Arbour have each had the job twice since then.

Garry Unger scored a goal and assisted on three others to pace the Elves with Unger set up teammate Jerry Butler for the game-winning goal early in the final period.

The win was only the Blues fourth in 21 games on Chicago ice since they joined the league. St. Louis has four 16 and tied one.

In New York, the Leafs stopped the Rangers unbeaten streak at seven and won their first contest in the Rangers Pete Laframboise replying for the Penguins.

ending a 13-game losing streak.

Ervel Thompson scored second-period goals 22 second apart as Toronto won its first game since Nov. 18 when the Leafs defeated the Caps 4-3 in Toronto. During their winless period, Toronto had four ties and six losses.

"I guess they were due," commented Toronto coach: Red Kelly in a game he thought. "The goals were going in tonight. That's kind of nice to see."

"I don't think we lost our poise," said Rangers centre Phil Esposito. "We just plain went flat. We stopped checking, gave up too many two-on-ones, no forechecking, no backchecking . . . we just got away from what we were doing so well."

The Canadiens brought their home-ice record to 13-0-4 by defeating Pittsburgh.

Yvan Cournoyer's power-play goal at 11:34 of the third period snapped a 4-4 tie and Jacques Lemaire and Guy Lapointe scored later in the period to complete Montreal's offence.

Guy Lafleur, who scored the 190th goal of his NHL career, Yvon Lambert, Jim Roberts and Steve Shutt were the other Montreal marksmen while Chuck Arnason, Dave Burrows, Jean Pierre Laroche replying for the Penguins.

200 WHA Goals for Hull

Jets Dominate Division

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Winnipeg Jets downed Edmonton Oilers 9-1 Sunday night, their ninth win in 11 encounters with Canadian Division teams in the World Hockey Association this season.

Bobby Hull scored his 200th WHA goal for the Jets in the first period and Thommie Bergman scored what turned out to be the winner midway in the second.

Anders Hedberg scored the other Winnipeg goal while Ken Baird scored the lone marker for the Jets moved five points in front of second-place Quebec Nordiques.

Strong goaltending by Edmonton's Chris Worthy kept the score respectable as the Oilers were outshot 43-26.

Barry Long, the high-scoring Edmonton defenceman, was tossed out of the game in the first period after delivering an unfavorable critique of referee Pierre Delaigny, who had just penalized him for tripping.

In Sunday's other WHA games, Calgary Cowboys beat Toronto Toros 3-2, Houston Aeros edged Cleveland Crusaders 4-3, Phoenix Roadrunners stopped San Diego Mariners 4-2 and New England Whalers tied Indianapolis Racers 3-3.

Saturday, New England edged Cleveland 5-4, Quebec stopped Toronto 6-3, Minnesota Fighting Saints edged Houston 4-3, Phoenix stopped Denver Spurs 5-3 and Cincinnati Stingers tied San Diego 3-3.

Sunday's loss dropped the Oilers four points behind the Crowbays in the fight for third place in the Canadian Division. Edmonton has played three more games than Calgary.

The Oilers haven't been pitching on pebbles in dominating their division. Four of the top five teams in the league are from Canada and Canadian teams have won 11 more games than they have lost.

The smallest Toronto crowd of the season, 5,511 fans, saw goalie Mario Viau stop 42 shots for the weary Toros, playing their third game in as many nights.

Defence Paul Napier scored the Toros' first two goals and assisted on Mike Byers' third. The game into a scoreless overtime period.

Toronto played without defenceman Bill Flett who has a groin injury, and Peter Marth, who has had headaches since being struck in the head by a flying puck last night.

After the Crusaders blew a 3-1 lead against the Aeros, Cleveland coach Johnny Wilson remarked: "I'm very surprised from general manager Jack Vivian that changes will be made. The Crusaders seemed to take none of the heat off themselves Friday when they blanked Minnesota 1-0 but they got themselves back in trouble Saturday when they blew a 3-1 lead against the Whalers.

Sunday, the Aeros had a 1-0-2 edge in shots in the third period, when goals by John Schella, Paul Popiel and Rich Preston gave them the victory.

A pair of goals by John Gray enabled the Roadrunners to move past San Diego into third place in the West Division, both two points behind Minnesota.

An Indianapolis crowd of 8,088 fans saw Al Karlander score in the third period to give the Racers their tie.

Tonight's schedule has San Diego at Houston, Cincinnati at Denver, Edmonton at Indianapolis, Calgary at Quebec and Winnipeg at Toronto.

Colts Take Over In Driver's Seat

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Baltimore, Colts, bested on their own four-yard line in overtime, began a drive that took them the length of a game-winning field goal and a berth in the National Football League playoffs.

Toni Linhart clinched a 20-7 win over Miami Dolphins with his field goal in an American Conference game in the Sun at Baltimore.

The win puts the Colts, who suffered through a 2-12 season in 1974, in the driver's seat for next weekend's final league games.

It would take a loss to New England Patriots at Baltimore and a Miami win at home against Denver Broncos to knock the Colts out of first place in the AFC Eastern Division.

In another Sunday game, St. Louis Cardinals locked up first place in the National Conference East and relegated division runner-up Dallas Cowboys to the NFC wild-card spot with a 26-20 victory over Chicago Bears.

Saturday, Dallas knocked off Washington, out of playoff contention by beating the Redskins 31-10 and Pittsburgh Steelers won the AFC Central title by clouting Cincinnati Bengals 35-14.

In other Sunday games, Los Angeles Rams beat Green Bay Packers 10-5, Houston Oilers edged Oakland Raiders 27-26, Detroit Lions downed Minnesota Vikings 17-10, Atlanta Falcons whipped San Francisco 49ers 31-6, Cleveland Browns clobbered Kansas City Chiefs 40-14, Denver defeated Philadelphia Eagles 25-10, Buffalo Bills beat New England 24-14 and New York Giants beat New Orleans Saints 30-14.

New York Jets are at San Diego Chargers tonight.

Faithful coach Ted Marchibroda called Sunday's triumph "without a doubt the greatest. I've ever had—all the way back to high school."

The Colts, completely rebuilt since winning the 1971 Super Bowl, tied the score 7-7 on a six-yard touchdown by Lydell Mitchell with 3:30 remaining in regulation time. Toni Linhart launched their winning drive following Larry Seiple's 40-yard punt.

They converted three third-down plays on the drive and quarterback Bert Jones, playing with injured ribs, completed four consecutive passes for 43 yards. Miami scored its touchdown in the third quarter on a three-yard run by Maryland transplant Jim Otis.

Jim Otis, 6-foot-2, 247 pounds, is ready to reach 1,007 yards for the year—and scored twice against the Cardinals clinched their second consecutive NFC East title.

Tom Dempsey hooked a field goal of 50 and 32 yards and Jim Hart's downfield completion of 35 passes for 276 yards in place of injured Jim Plunkett to lead Los Angeles past the Packers.

Dan Fouts threw a third touchdown pass to tight end Johnny Unitas' career record of 290—but he didn't get it. Instead he got kicked four times.

Alfred Jenkins caught 10-yard and

From rookie quarterback Steve Bartkowski.

Greg Pruitt rushed for 214 yards and three touchdowns and joined Jim Brown and Leroy Kelly as the only players to gain 1,000 yards in a season.

Roger Staubach passed for two touchdowns and ran for one for the Cowboys. The Redskins' hopes dimmed when quarterback Sid Kilmer, who went into the showdown game with 6 had one interception and a broken in his left foot, suffered another shoulder separation and left injury to his passing hand.

Franco Harris rushed for 118 yards and a pair of touchdowns and Terry and ran for another for Pittsburgh.

Dorsett's Floyd Little, playing at home for the final time in his brilliant one-year professional career, raced 88 yards with third-quarter screen pass and for another touchdown the closing minutes.

O. J. Simpson ran for 120 yards and scored his 31st touchdown and the season for the Bills, bringing his season rushing total to 1,946 yards.

Sandy Colbert's 69-yard punt return for a touchdown, Doug Kotar's 40-yard run for a touchdown and Craig Morton's 10-yard scoring run by Haydn Rhodes led the Giants past New Orleans.

GRANTED WISH

VALENCIA, Spain (AP) — Manuel Orantes of Spain, winner earlier this year of the Canadian and U.S. Opens, won the men's singles in the Spanish tennis championships, beating countryman Antonio Munoz 6-3, 6-3 in the final Sunday. It was the fifth time that Orantes had won the crown.

Movies May Be in Simpson's Future

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — With one game to go in his first pro season in the National Football League, O. J. Simpson is uncertain of his future.

And everyone is wondering, including his employers, if Simpson, one of football's all-time great runners, will quit to try for a movie career.

"If I have to, I'll buy a movie company," says Nick Wilson of the Buffalo Bills said Sunday when asked about the possibility of losing Simpson.

After running for 180 yards and his 31st touchdown of the season in the Bills' 24-7 victory over New England Patriots, the 26-year-old Simpson talked about his future.

"I truly and honestly don't know what I'll do," he said. "I don't want to be an actor. "I just about acting what I need is bad about football. There's an element of the unknown."

Although he has two years to set on his contract with the Bills and his dream of playing in the Super Bowl is unfulfilled, Simpson is uncertain of his future.

everybody I can play football."

Simpson went over the 2,000-yard mark in career rushing with a 43-yard touchdown run in the third quarter against the Patriots. He sat out most of the fourth quarter with the Bills assured of their eighth victory in 11 games.

Before leaving, O. J. packed his rushing yardage to 1,760 for the year. That leaves him 343 yard short of his NFL record of 2,003 set in 1973. The Bills wind up the season next Sunday against the playoff-bound Minnesota Vikings.

One record is well within reach for the former Southern Cal Heisman Trophy star. He needs only two touchdowns to equal Pro league mark of 23 scored by Gale Sayers of the Chicago Bears in 1965.

Win at Bridge

Old forcing bid works well

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

Oswald: "We discussed two of these bids last week. There are lots of reasons why you should use something besides player and just want to have fun there is no reason to complicate your bridge life by trying unnecessary bids. Your partnership has had worth pretty well."

Jim: "Most experts use two clubs as their only forcing opening bid. Why are we using two? These can both work well if you learn how to handle all the problems they cause you but don't let anyone tell you that you're bidding wrong. They and particularly the artificial one club, really simplify matters."

Oswald: "Here in a hand bid some years ago, South decided to open his hand normally. His plan was to bid six. If North showed two or three aces. When North showed four (they always do) five clubs to show zero or four aces (or five to show zero or four ace). South bid seven spades.

Jim: "He probably knew anyway, opponents. If North thought about opening, but he got no chance to bid anything. Back to him, play the two notrump forcing bid."

Ask the Jacobys

A Wisconsin reader wants to know if anyone wins when you open the highest-ranked suit.

Jim answers: "In bid they always have been in the game of contract bridge, but in the first days of auction they were in the lower suits. The promotion from bottom to top occurred around 1915."

(Do you have a question for the experts? Write "Ask the Jacobys" care of this newspaper. The Jacobys will answer individual questions only if stamped, self-addressed envelopes are enclosed. The most interesting questions will be used in this column and will receive copies of "Modern Modern.")

To Your Good Health

Thyroid Affects Fertility Ratings

By G.C. THOMPSON, MD

Dear Dr. Thompson: My husband and I have been trying to have a child for more than two years. His sperm count was about 8% healthy, but the motility is only 20 per cent. What does that mean and what can be done about it?

Is it possible to become pregnant with this kind of result?—Mrs. R. T.

The 92 million reading (80 million sperm per cubic centimental field) is within normal ratios. The motility (the percentage of viable sperm), while on the low side, should not be a problem in pregnancy. Pregnancy has occurred with much lower readings than you have reported. Motility refers to the ability of the sperm to migrate to the waiting ovum, so the odds are reduced somewhat.

Thyroid deficiency on your part can be a factor, and you mentioned thyroid trouble in improving things. An endocrinologist is a good specialist to advise you further.

Barring such disorders as glandular malfunction, other problems, such as a physical barrier in the sperm's pathway, can be involved. We do not mention your own status in all of this.

All things being equal (as far as you are concerned) there are some things you can do to improve the chances of impregnation. One might try coitus from a reclining position an hour or two after intercourse. You could even douche and should avoid douches of any kind. Sexual intercourse at intervals of every other day is considered ideal for normal coitus. Artificial insemination with semen from a sperm is another possibility to be considered.

Letter on artificial insemination with semen from a sperm is another possibility to be considered.

Dear Dr. Thompson: Do you have any information you can give me on Bartter's syndrome? I was diagnosed, and I am told it is in the form of a tumor in my small intestine.—Mrs. C.H.A.

The facts given in your letter indicate that what is called "Bartter's syndrome" is an abnormality within the last foot or two of the ileum, the lower being the final portion of the small intestine before it joins the large intestine. So it is in a rather delicate location.

But you have not told enough in your letter. Your age and the severity of the inflammation would be important, as would the exact location in the organism. Untreated, the problem could lead to serious complications, as an obstruction of the intestine. Surgical repair would be accompanied by pain and bowel disturbances generally, particularly the first problem is that it can begin with an attack of appendicitis. Although there is no symptoms evident for years, the inflammation can lead to acute appendicitis. This section of the intestine is located close to the appendix.

Diagnosis is by X-ray. With prompt diagnosis, conservative treatment is usually effective, but this can include rest, special diet and medication to relax the spasms. Surgery may be called to combat whatever infection is present, but by reliable diet is usually prescribed.

Because of the sensitive location of the problem, surgery is usually the last resort. Operation is reserved for those cases in which conservative methods are ineffective.

Almost all such cases are curable sooner or later, period from 20 to 30 years out.

Dear Dr. Thompson: My husband has a terrible tongue. We used to call the condition "coated tongue," and it was just that. It was a dirty brown color. Finally tell me just what it is and what can be done about it.—Mrs. E.

It's still a good name for it, but it doesn't indicate a thorough enough. In the absence of other symptoms, such as pain, sore throat, fever, indigestion, dizziness, etc., therefore the coating is nothing more than a dirty appearance. The tongue is usually not normal pink color because the fibrin can settle between these papillae and give the yellow appearance.

No treatment would be necessary.

Alcohol Major Problem For Police in Arctic

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — Many social problems are found in the Canadian Arctic are treated and prevented in alcohol says A. H. Butler.

Chief Superintendent Butler, 48, came here in early fall to head RCMP G division, responsible for policing in the 1.4 million square miles of the Northwest Territories.

The commanding officer may be a rookie in the North, but Inspector Miles Reynolds in charge of staffing and personnel, has 17 years experience. Both are concerned with the effects of alcohol.

After visiting a number of Arctic communities, Chief Superintendent Butler concluded that "one of the major problems in the North is that we're the right area is liquor."

Inspector Reynolds said alcohol has become readily available in many remote areas only in the past 10 years. Liquor had to be ordered in bulk a year in advance. The only liquor sold in the line was in Yellowknife and Inspector Reynolds pointed out other province which might be similar.

"Now it's available and money.

There are regular jet flights all over the North and people with the background and knowledge of alcohol and its effects on liquor's possibly devastating effects have. Alcohol is available to them.

Chief Superintendent Butler said drinking is a major activity in the North, given the climate, isolation and boredom.

There had been some talks of drugs but it was not significant.

Chief Superintendent Butler commands 125 men, as well as 20 special constables, mostly Inuit Eskimos who have obvious special qualifications.

G Division headquarter is located to increase by 14 next year and the commanding officer expects more will be needed in future.

While the increase in growth in the larger centres — and highest per capita income — there is considerably more activity in the area of Yellowknife of the Northwest Territories. With the newest study under way concerning the Mackenzie Valley pipeline, a demand for increased policing services.

The Arctic is staffed with RCMP volunteers. They sign on for three years. If they can't cope with the isolation, others have waited to be sent for 10 years or more.

Housing, transportation, communications and special equipment make the cost of policing twice as high in the Arctic as it is in the south.

January Will Launch Presidential Campaigns

WASHINGTON (CP) — After a period of indecisive political campaigning in 1977, the spectacular months of 1978 will provide the initial tests for a bevy of candidates seeking their parties' nominations for next November's presidential election.

The first to come under intensive scrutiny is likely to be President Gerald Ford, who will produce three of his major policy statements for the year in January—the traditional State of the Union speech, the state of the world address and the budget message.

These are expected to provide the political targets for Ford's only Republican challenger at the close of 1977, former California governor Ronald Reagan, a movie-star actor and the darling of the party's right wing.

A total of 10 Democrats had formally declared their candidacy as the year neared its end.

Those included Governors George Wallace of Alabama, a veteran of right-wing contender, and Milton Shapp of Pennsylvania, considered an extreme centrist.

Two former governors, Jimmy Carter of Georgia and Terry Sanford of North Carolina, both right of centre, entered the race as well.

Others were Senators Birch Bayh of Indiana, a liberal; Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, a pro-oiler, and Frank Church of Washington, considered a right-of-centre liberal.

Former senator Fred Harris of Oklahoma, Representative Morris Udall of Arizona and the former Peace Corps director and ambassador to Paris, Sargent Shriver, all declared Democrats, completed the list.

However, also in Senator Frank Church (Dem., Idaho) said late in the year he is almost certain to join the race in January. Church has won wide prominence as head of the Senate committee investigating the CIA and FBI and observers predicted he would be an extremely powerful contender.

The first stiff screening for the candidates is the Florida presidential primary in New Hampshire. Reagan seemed to have made a better start than Ford in the state at the end of 1977 and will claim a victory if he even comes close in the voting.

Among Democrats, Bayh, Carter, Udall, Shriver and Harris all registered for the opening primary and Minnesota Senator Robert Humphrey, who is not a declared candidate, may get a fair number of "write-in" votes.

Humphrey, vice-president under Lyndon Johnson and a senior figure in Democratic Party circles for eight years ago, is considered a possible compromise candidate at the New. A election if the 20 primaries do not produce a clear victor.

After New Hampshire, the next major contest between Reagan and Ford is expected in the March 9 Florida primary. It is here also that Carter is looking for a clear win over Wallace to show that he is not invincible. Wallace is portrayed as the waist down after being shot by a would-be assassin during the 1972 campaign.

But it is the New York primary April 4 that most observers are looking to for the clearest indication of whether either Ford or Reagan can emerge as a decisive victor or whether it will be a race to the wire with each getting roughly equal support. The primary, the last of a series before it is due to be crucial.

Should a deadlock develop, some leaders suggest, the Democratic convention might be forced to pick a dark horse candidate rather than two or three obvious favorites.

Democrats pondering this possibility are already haunted by memories of the 1924 convention when it took 103 ballots to nominate John Davis. Republican Calvin Coolidge trounced him in the election.

Olympic Team Is 380 Strong

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian Olympic Association (COA) announced Sunday that Canada will "field a team of 380 athletes, the largest ever to represent Canada," at the 1976 Summer Games in Montreal.

Maurice Allan, COA summer Games vice president, also said that the possibility of having more than 380 athletes has not been ruled out.

"Because it is not the aim of any association to set a numbers restriction," he said, "we believe that our athletes will be taking advantage of the next months to surpass their best performances to date."

COA secretary Richard Pound said the association also decided to take the typical steps necessary to enjoy all team sports, both men's and women's, despite the fact some Canadian teams may not be of international calibre.

He cautioned, however, that the COA reserves the right to withdraw any such entry should any team subsequently fail to show sufficient efforts to develop a sound training program.

There had been concern among many sport federations that the COA might not field teams in certain Olympic sports, that have reached qualifying standards and have a chance of making a good showing.

If the COA decides that everyone should be represented, Canada's team could number as high as 500 athletes.

Bears Frustrated by Goalie

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Goalie Michel Dubuisson recorded the longest American Hockey League winning streak of the season Sunday night.

Richmond Robins, behind Dubuisson's brilliant shut-out goaltending, blanked Hershey 4-0 to sweep an eight-game winning streak which had pulled the Bears into a first-place tie with Richmond in the Southern Division standings.
